U. S. Planning Compulsory Training of Youth, Asks Fleet Be Tripled, Sells Allies 20 Ships; Hitler Sends Terms, Believed 'All or Nothing'

Axis Answers Through Spain; 'New Europe' Is Envisioned

By the Associated Press

Munich, Germany, June 18.—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini totaled up today in a quiet study of the great stone Fuehrerhaus the price which broken France must pay for peace, but ended this second meeting of Munich without immediately disclosing just how high that price is to be.

"The Fuehrer and Duce agreed upon the position of both governments toward the French demand for an armistice," said an unamplified official announcement.

They left the city soon afterward.

From other quarters it had been understood from the beginning of the conference at 4 p. m. (9 a. m., Eastern standard time) that the terms arrived at would be kept secret until their acceptance or rejection by France.

Reported Unconditional

[The terms, International News Service said, call for outright acceptance or rejection—not for bargaining—and will form the basis of the permanent pact to follow.

[The New York Times reported from Madrid that the terms—generally understood to call for "unconditional surrender"—were transmitted to the German ambassador at Madrid, thence, via the Spanish foreign office to the Spanish ambassador at Bordeaux.

[Since it already was 3 a. m. Wednesday in France, it was assumed the announcer meant Thursday when he said "tomorrow evening."]

It was a meeting that may change the face of the world as all men have known it—for Hitler and Mussolini had pledged themselves to build "a new Europe."

It appeared that the dictate of this new Munich—where less than two years ago the life of Czecho-Slovakia as a republic was ended—would be announced simultaneously from Berlin and Rome.

No Appeasement There

This much seemed sure: That whatever the terms they would, if accepted, make the French army impotent and shove France into the place of a second-rate power.

Italy seemed destined to insist on her old demands for "Corsica, Tunisia, Nice," and other concessions to benefit her African colonies.

Most observers felt Germany would snatch back Alsace and Lorraine provinces, lost at Versailles. The real question mark appeared beyond these seemingly obvious requirements.

It had been for Munich's citizens such a day of celebration and hero worship as they had not seen since September, 1938, when Hitler and Mussolini looked across the same table at Edouard Daladier and Neville Chamberlain.

The Munich "peace of appeasement" came out of that historic session, but there was no thought of appeasement as the Axis leaders met here this time, their faces plainly showing the strains of the struggle in which they have been engaged. Hitler had come direct from the general headquarters of his plunging army in the west.

While Premier Mussolini entered the city wearing his accustomed expression of determination, Hitler smiled broadly as standing in his car, he took the salutes of the shouting people.

It was the hour of the greatest triumph of all his career as a Nazi—a career that 17 years ago in this very city landed him in jail after an unsuccessful putsch. It was a jail in which he wrote part of his foreshadowing "Mein Kampf."

It was here, too, that a beer cellar explosion left him alive last November—with a margin of a few minutes.

He entered this morning in a train guarded by four maneuvering planes. Schools were closed; streets echoed the hails of exulting thousands; men of the party, young and old, formed on the sidewalks.

Mussolini arrived three hours late, at 3 p. m. (8 p. m. E.S.T.).

The War Today . . .

TERMS OF THE ARMISTICE asked Monday by beaten France are en route to Bordeaux after being drafted by Fuehrer Hitler and his eleventh-hour ally in a historic meeting at Munich, whence 21 months ago Neville Chamberlain reported "Peace in our time." Stipulations of the dictators' peace were secret, but they were assumed to be harsh, and France was given only two choices—acceptance and unconditional surrender, or rejection and unremitting attack on all fronts. There will be no negotiations, Germans said.

GERMAN TROOPS CONTINUED their smashing offensive, crossing the Loire, entering Cherbourg, threatening St. Nizaire, while in the Rhone Valley a fresh army of 400,000 Frenchmen reformed for whatever may come; French cities of more than 20,000 were declared "open" and French planes were reported fleeing to Africa.

WINSTON CHURCHILL WARNED Britain she must now fight alone the expected German assault, but pleaded with France to reject the Axis terms; German planes appeared over wide areas of eastern England, answering the Royal Air Force's biggest invasion of German air on Monday night.

Britain Next, And Ready, Churchill Says

R. A. F. Strikes Ruhr As He Says Navy Will Drown Foes

By the Associated Press

London, June 18.—Winston Churchill called confidently tonight upon the stout heart of Britain to respond to the menace of invasion.

He told his people: "Hitler knows he will have to break us in this island or lose the war."

Meanwhile, Parliamentary circles said there was increasing demand among members of Parliament that David Lloyd George, World War prime minister, be included in the war cabinet as a move to strengthen the government.

The white-maned little Welshman declined to enter the Churchill cabinet when it was being formed a month ago. He is being pressed again, political circles said, to place his experience at the disposal of the government.

In the event Lloyd George entered the government it was believed he would be given a light job which would not be too much of a drain on the 77-year-old leader.

But the fact that he would be at hand to give Churchill the benefit of his vast experience and judgment was considered as a strengthening prop for the government.

Before the House of Commons, in the hour of French military collapse, the prime minister "cast up

Fight to Go On Until Surrender, Berlin Declares

Berlin, June 18.—Striking on against broken France, the German military experts tonight declared that "fighting can be stopped only when the armistice is signed."

The German press threateningly added that Britain would be next.

"The military collapse of France is swiftly progressing under the pressure of our relentless pursuit," said the high command.

These were among the recent German successes claimed:

The River Loire reached from Orleans to Nevers.

The Orne River crossed at several points between Caen on the Channel coast and Le Mans.

The elaborate Maginot Line defenses being pulled apart from all sides, after being severed yesterday from the rest of France by a German wedge reaching to the Swiss border.

The capture of 100,000 prisoners in yesterday's operations.

Among the war material seized at Nevers, it was said, were more than 100 tanks, including six 70-tonners.

At London's Gates

Germans Raid English Coast; Seven Bombers Shot Down

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday) June 19.—Nazi air raiders carried out one of the most extended attacks of the war from midnight to dawn today.

The raiders dropped bombs at three points along the Thames, in an evident attempt to hit crowded shipping, docking and industrial areas, shattered windows and damaged houses in at least two other towns along the coast and lost at seven of their planes, which were shot down in spectacular air fights in the beams of countless searchlights.

Eleven civilians were known to have been killed and 14 injured.

Most of the casualties occurred in one locality where the bombs fell on a row of houses.

The air ministry and ministry of home security communique said bombs were dropped in "a number of districts in East Anglia, Lincolnshire and Yorkshire," but that "no severe damage was done to any military objective."

Air-raid warnings lasted from just before midnight until dawn, when thousands of Britons came out of their shelters.

The sky was filled with the crossing beams of searchlights, the bursting stars of antiaircraft shells and the shriek of bombers and attacking British planes.

The German raid was as if in response of Prime Minister Churchill's summons yesterday to Britons

French Ships, Warplanes Said To Be Fleeing To North Africa

By the Associated Press

Bordeaux, France, June 18. The unconquered French clung fiercely to their fields and hills today in desperate engagements along a broken front, fighting on under orders of the man who asked the foe for peace and now awaits a reply.

Tonight, in an attempt to save from bombardment the cities still remaining in French hands, the government declared all towns of 20,000 or more "open cities."

In an order of the day, as dramatic in its way as his World War order to defend Verdun with courage and valor, Premier Marshal Petain told the men in the field to carry on.

The order went out by radio. It included all the men of the French Air Service and all the men of the fleet, which is under virtual command of the British.

Airmen May Be Fleeing

[The New York Times reported from Madrid that it was certain the Axis terms included surrender of the French fleet, but would have to be changed because according to Madrid reports virtually all units of the French navy in French ports left during the day.

[The principal fighting units are with the British fleet at Alexandria or in that vicinity and as they are under the orders of the British admiralty possibly their commanders will refuse to obey any orders to surrender from the French government.

[Furthermore, according to the Spanish press, airplanes were sighted over the Balearic Islands flying in the direction of Africa. It is presumed that they were French planes fleeing to Algeria from the German advance.

[French sources in London said they considered it "probable" that Gen. Auguste Nogues, commanding France's North African army, and Gen. Mittelhauser, commanding the French army in the Near East, had decided to continue fighting.]

Fight Goes on in Alsace

Meanwhile, weary, outnumbered poilus still resisted the relentless German armies, which the French communique tonight acknowledged had "pushed deep into Normandy and Brittany" and had swung out into the great Normandy Peninsula and reached the port of Cherbourg, only 77 miles across the Channel from Britain's Portsmouth naval base.

More than 100 miles south of Cherbourg, below the Bay of St. Malo, other German forces reached Rennes, at the base of Brittany Peninsula tipped by the port of Brest, 140 miles to the west.

Still other Germans formed several bridgeheads across the Middle

Group in House Seeks 4 Billion To Give Nation Two-Ocean Navy

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

A $4,000,000,000 naval building program which, with present projected warship construction, would triple the existing fleet was presented to Congress yesterday and speedily approved by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

This action backed up a warning to Germany and Italy that the United States would oppose any attempt to acquire Allied possession in the Western Hemisphere. Legislation making the Monroe Doctrine the law of the land was passed by the House, 382 to 8, and sent to the White House.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, told the group that approximately 200 additional war vessels of all types are needed in view of world conditions to protect the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and the Western Hemisphere.

Construction of the new ships would give the United States in effect a "two-ocean Navy," which would have as its backbone from 30 to 33 battleships, including over-age but modernized craft. It would total about 738 ships and be capable of standing off the combined fleets of the totalitarian powers.

Complete in Seven Years

In presenting the enlarged expansion plan, Admiral Stark said it represented the Navy's considered opinion of what is required under present conditions.

Before approving the Pittman-Bloom resolution restating the Monroe Doctrine, the House turned down, 104 to 66, an amendment offered by Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, stating that it is contrary to American policy to take part in "the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves."

The measure, approved, 76 to 0, by the Senate Monday, declares that the United States "would not recognize any transfer and would not acquiesce in any attempt to transfer" any region of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American nation to another.

Tinkham argued that the resolution stated only one part of the Monroe Doctrine, and that there was another equally important part which was embodied in his amendment. He said it was a direct quotation from President Monroe's original description of the doctrine:

"That in the wars of the European powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part nor does it comport with our policy to do so."

The Navy program, which goes to the House with the unanimous indorsement of the committee, came as a complete surprise. Just 24

Navy's New 'Mosquito Boats' To Be Transferred to British

The Government is in process of releasing to the British 20 high-speed vessels now under construction on order for the United States Navy, it was learned yesterday.

This information was elicited from Louis Compton, Acting Secretary of the Navy, by members of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee in a stormy executive session of the committee last Friday.

Compton, when asked by what right this was done, under what law and by whose instruction, took most of the responsibility himself, although saying that the transfer had been favored by Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury. He denied that President Roosevelt had been consulted.

At this point it is understood that Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee, bluntly suggested to Compton that he should resign.

COMPTON

Other Senators present expressed themselves as convinced that Compton had not undertaken such a responsibility without either direct orders from the President or an understanding that he approved it.

Asked last night about Senator Walsh's suggestion that he resign, Compton merely laughed.

The vessels involved, he explained, are ten motor torpedo boats and ten submarine chasers, variously called "mosquito vessels" and "suicide boats." They were ordered from the Electric Boat Co., of Bayonne, N. J., and many of them are under construction. They were ordered by the Navy under an experimental program, for which Congress provided money to test their value for the United States. Very lightly armored, their chief value is attributed by their advocates to their exceptionally high speed.

Both types, according to Compton, are craft about 70 feet in length and cost roughly, $150,000 each. They are patterned after the Scott-Payne speed-boat of the British, but are being equipped with Packard marine instead of Rolls-Royce engines.

The motor torpedo boats are planned to carry only torpedoes, while the submarine chasers are designed to be equipped with the latest

Philadelphia, June 18.—In dress rehearsal for next week's National Convention, the Republican resolutions committee today broke three ways on the crucial war issue but an anti-isolationist trend persisted.

A preview of opposing stands on foreign policy that must be pieced into a single plank and adapted to a candidate was presented in a round table on Dr. Glenn Frank's "program for a Dynamic America."

Then former Senator George Wharton Pepper, who shares Frank's views on aid to the democracies short of battlefield assistance, was named chairman of the important drafting subcommittee which will shape finally the G. O. P. platform.

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, who favors "proper" help to the Allies and a "flexible, postcard" platform, was appointed head

Mercy Ship Denied Entry To War Zone

Holt and McCarran Fear Voyage Would Set Off Spark of War

A Red Cross "mercy ship" is on its way to Europe without the safe conduct promise of belligerents required by the Neutrality Act and action to legalize her entering the combat zone was blocked in the Senate yesterday.

"This resolution of authority," cried Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, "might be the spark that would plunge the Nation into war and send thousands of American boys to their death."

He refused the unanimous consent needed to consider the measure.

The Roosevelt Administration was blamed by two Democratic Senators, in the debate, for arousing hatred of this country in Europe, and both, Holt and Senator McCarran, of Nevada, pictured the Nation as facing a grave emergency as a result.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, declared he had opposed the resolution in committee because "no incident would so inflame the minds of the American people as holding up and searching a Red Cross vessel carrying supplies they had furnished funds to pay for."

"Just let one ship be sunk with the American flag on the masthead and the Red Cross on the side," McCarran declared, "and every red-blooded American would rush into

Tension Grows in Baltic

Nazis on Move in East Prussia Facing 500,000 Soviet Troops

Copyright by New York Times

Kaunas, Lithuania, June 18.—It was reported here tonight that German troop movements of an unspecified nature are being carried out in East Prussia, bordering this Baltic country into which Soviet troops have been pouring for four days.

Several buildings here have been requisitioned for the use of Soviet military authorities. (Stockholm and London have estimated that approximately 500,000 Russian troops, including motorized and armored units, are being garrisoned in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, all of which bowed to Russian ultimata over the week-end.)

Stockholm, June 18.—Most Swedish newspapers agree today that Josef Stalin's latest Baltic incursions have been prompted by his knowledge "that his turn is coming."

"Only the shell of the Russo-German pact is left," says the Aftonbladet. "It has been a terrible menace to the Baltic states and Finland, but for Germany it has fulfilled its purpose."

For the present Fuehrer Hitler has it completely in his power to create that "new Europe" that he announced in his New Year's proclamation, and all countries in Europe will have to play their allotted parts in it.

A suggestion in the German press to make the Reichsmark the standard of currency for continental trade is merely another interesting feature of the German plans. But while Britain continues the war this "new Europe," it is held, can be little more than the "continental system" created by Napoleon in his efforts to defeat Britain.

At the same time it is also recalled that in "Mein Kampf" Hitler demands the annihilation of France as merely "a means to give our people the possibility of expansion in another place," and the only place he sees for such expansion is Russia.

In the light of this point of the program, which so far has been carried out almost to the letter, the Russian moves in the Baltic region find their own explanation. According to travelers returning from

U. S. Instruction Must Be Given To Every Boy, Says Roosevelt

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that he would ask Congress soon to provide for a system of universal Government training for America's youth.

Some form of compulsory training, affecting every boy, no matter of what class, has got to come, the President said at a press conference.

In response to a question, he said that girls, too, would be brought into the training plan if useful tasks could be found for them.

Mr. Roosevelt described his plan as Government training, not "military training." He explained that when he recently indorsed a New York Times editorial he spoke hastily and did not mean to imply that he favored compulsory military training for every boy in the country.

Behind-the-Lines Training

The word military, he continued, connoted training boys to be infantrymen, pilots, machine gunners or artillerymen at the front.

The President said he had a broader connotation in mind, and he pointed out that for every combat soldier there must be another behind the lines performing some vital task.

He outlined four categories of training, as follows:

1. For combat service.
2. For duty as airport mechanics and in the line of supply.
3. For duty in ammunition plants, airplane plants, clothing factories and in various other kinds of industrial work.
4. For necessary conservation work so that war wouldn't necessarily wreck the economy of the Nation. (In this connection, the President recalled how, in 1917-18, the prairies were plowed up and the forests cut down).

Mr. Roosevelt said that the whole plan is now in the study stage. He did not mention the age at which he thought young men and women should be called for training, but he did say that he thought the training period should be for a year.

He said he expected to transmit the plan to Congress in three or four weeks, maybe six weeks, in the form of a letter or message.

The important thing was, he said, to have the youngsters under some form of discipline. He told of a conversation he recently had with an unnamed friend, a man who made an automobile trip through the West. This man, he said, found that young people were patriotic but were imbued with some weird ideas or "isms."

CCC Boys Cited

This friend, the President said, had found the soundest outlook among the boys in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps. These boys, he said, had learned discipline and had learned also to think of somebody besides themselves.

The discussion at the press conference ended in a jolly atmosphere as the President, sitting at his desk in shirt sleeves, said he would like to send 200 or so of the newspaper reporters to a CCC camp to rid them of their bad habits.

When he was talking about the training of girls, one reporter asked if the training scheme was to be "coeducational." The President laughed heartily and said that the camps for the boys and those for the

Once a Bane, Now a Blessing

Food Reserves at Safety Point For Defense, Says Roosevelt

By George B. Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that bumper farm crops, once the Administration's bane, have become a blessing that will fortify the national defense and at the same time allow this Government to feed starving millions in Europe.

Shortly after a morning discussion with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, the President told his press conference that he is satisfied with the size of food reserves we have here. They have reached the safety point, he said.

The President's statement, it was officially noted, marked a sharp departure from an earlier attitude toward surplus crops. Previously, the Government has resorted to crop restriction and to "plowing under" in order to reduce supplies of such crops as wheat, corn, cotton and hogs.

Now, however, according to the President, the Government is pleased that there are surplus amounts of corn and wheat under storage. With evident satisfaction and his thoughts apparently on some future defense emergency, the President noted for reporters:

The wheat carryover is three times the normal average and is sufficient to take care of any problems the Government can foresee in

U. S. to Call Pan America for Speedy Action On Roosevelt's Plan for Trade Cartel

Emergency Session Slated for Havana In a Few Months

An emergency meeting of the 21 American republics will "probably" be called to meet in Havana, Cuba, in the near future to pass on President Roosevelt's all-American trade defense plan, a high State Department official said last night.

The independent nations of this hemisphere would be asked by the United States to approve the $1,000,000,000 trading corporation project now being whipped into final shape by Cabinet members and Presidential advisers.

Indorsement and, perhaps, modest cash contributions will be asked of the American nations at the conference, it was learned.

The official feeling, it was said, is that problems created by Germany's crushing victories in Europe are too pressing to wait until the next regularly scheduled meeting of American foreign ministers, which is set for October 1.

See Need of Speed

The advisers to President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull see a need for immediate action to create the proposed mammoth cartel, or selling corporation, which would buy up all the products of Latin America and then sell them in Europe on a basis of the combined strength of the 21 republics of this hemisphere and Canada. Germany's postwar or midwar trade offensive in Latin America will get under way very soon, these officials feel.

The outlines of the trading project disclosed Monday provide that the United States furnish most of the capital, perhaps a billion dollars a year, to take title to all the export products of Latin America, then sell them to Europe and the rest of the world through the central agency, perhaps taking a loss of half a billion dollars.

Officials predicted yesterday that this plan would be accepted unanimously at the forthcoming conference of Latin-American nations. The Latin republics, it was asserted, see the need for common action to prevent Nazi infiltration into this hemisphere.

Japanese Plan Own Drive

As the United States moved to protect its commercial frontier from Cape Horn to the Arctic, reinforcing the Monroe Doctrine with cash, Japanese envoys met in Washington to plan a trade campaign of their own in this hemisphere.

Nipponese envoys to six American republics met with Ambassador Horinouchi at the Japanese Embassy to discuss improvement of trade relations with this country and sister republics.

The meeting was attended by the Japanese Ambassador to Brazil, the Ministers to Mexico, Panama, Cuba and Canada and the consul general in Venezuela.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt told reporters of a new step in continental cooperation that will mean cheaper newsprint for the publishing firms of Latin America.

The President disclosed that through the efforts of the State Department, Maritime Commission and other Government agencies freight rates on newsprint from New York to Buenos Aires have been cut from $15 a ton to $9.75 a ton, with proportional reductions for shipments to other points on South America's east coast.

Similarly, the corn carryover is three times normal and can be fed to livestock which would be exportable to alleviate suffering abroad, leaving a full supply to take care of any food emergency at home.

Cotton, on the other hand, may be a problem because in the case of this commodity there may be an oversupply. The President noted that there is one year's crop on hand and a large new one coming along.

Where main food crops are concerned, the President said, the Government is in a position to increase food reserves and simultaneously, for the first time protect the farmers' income.

In addition, he said, the health of the American people is being safeguarded by distribution of surplus foods to the needy and soil fertility has been increased. The President expressed satisfaction that this program was being carried out by the cooperation of 6,000,000 farmers through organizations in contact with the Agriculture Department.

Extends Storage Loans

The Government, through the Commodity Credit Corporation, has taken over large amounts of farm products for storage and has extended storage loans on even greater amounts to farmers throughout the country.

About one billion dollars, the borrowing authority and capital of the corporation, is tied up and committed to these loans. Now in Congress is a bill to add $500,000,000 to the borrowing authority of CCC.

This money is now divided up as follows among leading commodities:

Corn, 500,000,000 bushels under loan, with the Government owning about 100,000,000 bushels; cotton, 7,000,000 bales under loan, Government ownership 6,500,000 bales; wheat an expected 80,000,000 under loan this year, with Governmena stocks being rapidly reduced.

In addition the Government has loans outstanding also on such foods as peanuts, prunes, raisins, butter, pecans, dates, hops and rye.

Agriculture Department figures revealed yesterday how large are the stocks of food the President had in mind.

Indicated for this year are the following stocks of leading commodities:

Wheat, 288,000,000 bushels; corn, 875,000,000 bushels; oats, 140,000,000 bushels; rice, 3,000,000 barrels; cotton, 11,000,000 bales.

Large supplies of foods are stored and the amounts of storage holdings on May 1 were:

Apples, 5,599,000 bushels; frozen fruits, 75,620,00 pounds; frozen vegetables, 49,069,000 pounds; butter, 9,457,000 pounds; cheese, 78,600,000 pounds; eggs, 5,576,000 cases; frozen poultry, 86,418,000 pounds; beef, 61,569,000 pounds; pork, 613,970,000 pounds; lamb and mutton, 3,570,000 pounds; lard, 266,352,000 pounds; condensed milk, 4,014,000 pounds, and evaporated milk, 207,740,000 pounds.

Red Cross Asks For Its Quota By Week's End

$300,000 Is District Goal; Total of Gifts To Date Is $261,570

Campaign Chairman Bruce Baird called yesterday for realization of the District's $300,000 Red Cross relief quota by this week's end, declaring:

"Washington has never failed the Red Cross yet, and I am sure, in view of the dire situation that exists in Europe today, a situation that is growing more desperate hourly, Washington will not fail now.

Yesterday's contribution of $6,717 brought the District's total to $261,570, but to reach the goal by the end of this week the daily donations must be nearly doubled, Baird pointed out.

Contributions Listed

Contributions listed yesterday included Mr. and Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, $500 (second contribution); J. W. Rickey, $100; Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Noulton, $100; Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. employes, $319 District of Columbia teachers, $1,359.41, and District school children, $1,864.72.

War Department employes sent in $279.25; General Accounting Office, $109.75; Maritime Labor Board, $55.50; District of Columbia Sewage Plant, $17; Interstate Commerce Commission, $178.40, and United States Tariff Commission, $29.

Since this is the first time the District's public school system has permitted solicitation of pupils, the Red Cross decided to make a ceremony of the presentation of the final check representing contributions made by school pupils for the National Children's Fund tomorrow morning. N. C. Danowsky, statistician of schools, will bring the check to the Red Cross chapter house, 1730 E street northwest, at 9:30 o'clock. Representatives of the Junior Red Cross will receive it.

Golf Tourney Plans

Mrs. L. E. Harris, chairman of the Red Cross Motor Corps, has notified Schley Zirkin, of the committee arranging for a Red Cross golf tournament at Indian Spring Country Club July 4, that the Red Cross will cooperate by having members of the Nurses' Aid and staff assistant groups present.

Two ambulances with drivers, nurses and first aid equipment also will be on hand. Flags will be loaned for decoration of the grounds.

Outstanding golfers of the country will come here to compete in the tournament, which is being financed by the Indian Spring Country Club to benefit the District of Columbia Chapter war relief fund.

Junior C. of C. Opens Parley Here Today

Officials Hope President Will Accept Invitation to Speak

Six hundred young men, vanguard of 2,000 delegates to the Junior Chamber of Commerce convention, moved into Washington last night and demonstrated that in a gloomy world of war brighter aspects of life are still to be found.

A gathering to be devoted, beginning today, to serious consideration of national defense, unemployment and State trade barriers, appeared also to be organized competently for a good time.

Highlights were: The Phoenix, Ariz., delegation was to be requested to remove the brace of six-shooters each wore as part of his cowboy costume, after members of the delegation fired blank cartridges in Connecticut avenue.

A group of about 200 from Southern states, headed by the Norfolk (Va.) contingent, were met at the city limits by motorcycle police escorts. This group wired:

"Have retaken Richmond. Moving on Washington. Meet us at city limits with reinforcements. Signed: Harry Graham and Johnny Wright."

Ten young men from the Amarillo Junior Chamber of Commerce weren't coming to town at all, for a while. They were camped at Marshall Hall, Md., where they will tend the 20 steers they brought along for slaughtering for a barbecue tomorrow night.

The North Carolina delegation was identifiable by its blue slack suits. Colorado wore white sports jackets and Cleveland red and grey vests, while Louisville turned out in the white linens and wide-brimmed hats of the Kentucky squire. Omaha delegates wore bright green jackets with their names in gold letters on the back. The St. Joseph (Mo.) delegation dressed as pony express riders.

Convention officials hoped for a last-minute acceptance from President Roosevelt of their invitation to address the opening luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today. Perry Pipkin, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the convention keynote address at the luncheon. Welcoming speeches will be made by Col. David McCoach, jr., District Engineer Commissioner, and Minor Hudson, president of the Washington Junior Board of Commerce.

'We Must Stay Out,' Willkie Says

New York, June 17 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie declared today that "despite our whole-hearted sympathy for the Allied cause, we must stay out of war."

"No man has the right to use the great powers of the Presidency to lead the people, indirectly, into war," he added. "Only the people through their elected representatives can make that awful decision—and there is no question as to their decision."

Willkie is president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination. Oren Root, jr., one of Willkie's original backers, later issued a statement in which he estimated that 4,500,000 persons had signed petitions calling for Willkie's nomination.

Senate Economy Bloc Defeated

By John B. Oske
Post Staff Writer

Economy forces in the Senate were beaten back all along the line yesterday with the defeat or modification of three major efforts to tack antispending riders onto the billion-dollar emergency tax bill.

On the grounds that Federal employes, farmers and relief workers would be the chief sufferers, the Senate plucked the heart out of the Byrd amendment ordering the President to make a 10 per cent average cut in Federal expenditures except those for defense, fixed charges and trust funds. Under yesterday's alteration, which was proposed by Majority Leader Barkley, the Chief Executive is merely authorized, not directed to economize.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, asked that the President be ordered to make an average slash of 5 per cent in expenditures, but this proposal was beaten also.

Earlier, the Senate had knocked out of the tax bill by vote of 45 to 35, an amendment of Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, which would have halted American purchase of foreign silver.

Bloc Renews Attack

The economy bloc renewed the attack with a move of Senator Tydings to require the President to make a 3 per cent cut, and an amendment of Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, to instruct the Appropriations Committees of both houses to revise all the supply bills for next year by reducing them not less than 10 per cent. Both proposals were pending when the Senate quit for the day.

Meanwhile, it was taken for granted in both houses that because of the war crisis, Congress will not adjourn Saturday as originally scheduled, but will recess—possibly for only three-day intervals until after the Republican convention.

Prospective furloughs for Federal employes as well as reductions in the agriculture and relief appropriations roused the ire of the Senate against the Byrd plan for a mandatory 10 per cent slash.

Senator Byrd said most Federal salaries would be exempt from the proposed general cut, and many of those that might be affected are already subject to reduction by executive action. He admitted some economies could be enforced by giving furloughs to Government workers and also by failure to fill vacancies.

When Senator Barkley suggested removing the mandatory feature from the economy amendment, Senatory Byrd retorted that the President "already has the authority" to make the cuts if he wants to.

The mandatory feature of the Byrd amendment was removed by a vote of 41 to 36, with Minority Leader McNary joining the Administration forces.

An accusation that Congress is "lying down on the job" by refusing to vote "a cent" of economy was launched by Senator Tydings immediately after the 47-33 defeat of his proposal for a general 5 per cent mandatory reduction.

Senator Barkley declared, "I deny that Congress is lying down on the job; it has responded to every request from the executive departments for money for National defense, and to every demand of the American people." The Majority Leader said he might be willing to vote for as much as $500,000,000 in additional taxes.

Senator Byrd said he intended to offer an amendment to call back all the supply bills in order to make a 10 per cent cut; but before he had a chance to do so, Senator O'Mahoney proposed virtually the same thing.

The Senate probably will vote today on the O'Mahoney amendment, which orders the two appropriations committees to slash $500,000,000 from the civil expenses of the Government for the new fiscal year.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment for U. S. Defense of Canada If She Is Attacked Rises Sharply

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 18.—With a furious Nazi assault against the British expected as the aftermath of the French surrender, an overwhelming majority of American voters favor sending armed forces to aid Canada if she is attacked. A national survey completed just prior to the French capitulation found nearly nine in every ten voters supporting the idea of aid to America's northern neighbor.

GALLUP

How this sentiment will be affected by the fact that England is now alone in her war against Hitler remains to be seen in future surveys. But it is significant that up to last week sentiment for aiding Canada had risen sharply since the early days of the war. The trend is shown in the vote on the following question, which the American Institute of Public Opinion put to a cross-section of voters throughout the country:

"If Canada is actually invaded by any European power, do you think the United States should use its Army and Navy to aid Canada?"

	Yes	No
Last October	73%	27%
Last Week	87	13

In last week's survey only a tiny proportion (6 per cent) expressed no opinion.

The vote is the latest evidence of the public's desire not merely to defend the United States proper but also to build up a system of hemisphere defense. In addition to aiding Canada against attack, American voters in previous surveys have declared themselves in favor of defending countries around the Panama Canal and countries in South America.

Such defense is favored by the public chiefly for the reason that "Germany must not be allowed to get a foothold anywhere near our gates" and that "our line of defense extends beyond our own borders."

Needy Children's Camps Fund Is Short of Goal

With the dead line for the "Needy Children's Camps" scheduled tomorrow, and the drive far short of its $7,500 goal, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, chairman, yesterday renewed her appeal for funds, declaring the project is "of vital importance to our community and country." She said:

"If we can give some security to the children who have none, if we can turn back into the community fine citizens instead of beaten ones, we certainly are making a genuine contrjbution to our country in a time when every one is asking what he can do to help keep democracy alive."

Mrs. Linzel revealed that only about $2,000 of the goal had been raised. It costs $8.50 to send an underprivileged child to camp for a week; $25 for three weeks. Contributions may be sent to Claude W. Kniseley, Riggs National Bank.

Funds Lacking, 100 D. C. Teachers Face Late Pay Day

A lack of $17,320 in the $718,810 June pay roll for District public school teachers, due Friday, prompted Superintendent Frank W. Ballou yesterday to ask 100 teachers to volunteer to defer receipt of their June checks, so the remainder of the teachers may be paid on time.

The second deficiency appropriation bill, which includes the $17,320, passed the House of Representatives yesterday and will probably be passed by the Senate before the week is over.

In his bulletin to school officers, Dr. Ballou assured them that the bill would probably be "passed and signed before June 30." Number of teachers volunteering to delay their pay days was not known yesterday, since their names were to be relayed through principals and other officers. But Dr. Ballou said "a canvass of a few schools has already indicated a considerable number of teachers will volunteer."

Ford to Build 3,000 Plane Motors For U. S. and 6,000 for England

Foreign Contract Marks Reversal Of Company Policy

Mass production of airplane engines by the Ford Motor Co. has been assured by the granting of contracts for 9,000—3,000 for this country and 6,000 for Great Britain, it was revealed yesterday.

As this important step toward realization of the national defense program was taken, it was reported also that contracts for additional engines for the United States had virtually been completed for the Pratt-Whitney, Allison and Curtiss-Wright companies.

The news emphasized the Governments' attack on the "bottleneck" of aircraft production, engine manufacture, which never previously has been able to keep pace with fabrication of the planes themselves.

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee tentatively approved yesterday a $43,500,000 addition to an emergency defense appropriation bill to finance a contract for Ford motors for this country.

At the same time, it was announced in London by Aircraft Production Minister Lord Beaverbrook, that Ford production of 6,000 Rolls-Royce Merlin engines would start within a month and deliveries would begin early next year.

Acceptance of the British contract, it was immediately pointed out here, would indicate an apparent change in Henry Ford's reported policy of confining his war production to materials needed by this country for its defense. At the time Ford said his plants could produce 1,000 airplanes a day to meet the President's goal of 50,000 a year, he was quoted as saying he would turn out such fighting weapons only for this country.

Experiments have simplified "by at least 50 per cent" production of the Rolls-Royce-Merlin engine at the Ford plant, said an Associated Press dispatch from Detroit.

The 3,000 planes for the United States are to be produced within eight months, according to Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee which approved the supplementary appropriation yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Advisory Defense Commisison added to its staff six experts, three of whom will deal with airplane matters.

The six are:

Theodore P. Wright, Port Washington, N. Y., vice president and engineering director of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, to join the aeronautical section of Knudsen's production division.

A. E. Lombard, jr., professor of aeronautics, California Institute of Technology, to be Wright's assistant; Paul Johnston, research coordinator of the National Advisory Committee for aeronautics. To serve under Robert T. Sevens, textile section head of Edward Stettinius' division, appointments were:

Arthur Beese, New York, president, National Association of Wool Manufacturers, former NRA specialist; Earl A. Stall, president, F. W. Poe Manufacturing Co., Greenville, S. C.; Charles A. Sweet, vice president, Wellington Sears & Co., Inc., New York, and H. J. White, head of viscose-rayon division, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

House Passes $57,909,600 Deficiency Bill

Funds Provided For Doubling Border Patrol, Regulating Aliens

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

With a burst of near-recess speed, the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a $57,909,600 second deficiency appropriations bill a few hours after it had been reported by the Appropriations Committee.

A catch-all measure to meet many last-minute departmental requests, the bill carries $1,600,000 to double the Canadian and Mexican border patrols and to tighten the enforcement of laws regulating alien seamen.

An appropriation of $2,200,000 is in the bill for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, transferred last week from the Labor to the Justice Department. An increase of 25 examiners was allowed as the committee observed that the present emergency has stimulated naturalization and "that facilities should be available promptly to those who desire to become citizens."

Increasing the border patrol from 856 to 1,625, the committee explained that the men will be distributed "in approximately equal proportions on the Mexican and Canadian borders to tighten up the illegal entry of aliens into the United States."

Funds for Expedition's Return ....

The bill provides $171,000 to bring home the Antarctic expedition headed by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd at the end of its first year. The committee denied a request for $250,000, which would have kept the explorers in the vicinity of the South Pole for another year.

Other appropriations carried in the bill included:

A variety of items aggregating $476,109.96 for the District government.

For rebuilding the 80-year-old roofs over the Senate and House wings of the Capitol, $585,000.

To supplement the Capitol police force with seasoned men from the Metropolitan Police Department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Secret Service, $60,000.

To begin construction of a new central heating plant at the confluence of Rock Creek and the Potomac River, $500,000, with an authorized cost of $3,900,000.

Extension for one year the time within which the Public Works Administration may receive amendatory applications on uncompleted projects.

An allowance of $1,000,000 for the Veterans' Administration to acquire sites and prepare plans to begin a $30,000,000 expansion program.

To increase the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation capital stock to meet losses, $20,000,000.

One Change in Bill

The House made only one change in the bill as reported. It struck out $7,500 for the International Joint Commission, United States and Great Britain.

District appropriations consisted of an accumulation of minor items. The two largest were $170,000 for the repayment of erroneously collected taxes and $90,000 for additional inmates at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Included also is $15,000 for the building inspector department to make a thorough check of fire hazards.

The House allowed an additional $25,000 to supplant a previous $100,000 appropriation to the United States Bureau of Standards for the purchase of the Pembroke Park estate at 3535 Van Ness street.

Although Kenneth Romney, House sergeant-at-arms, appeared before the committee to ask for funds to create a permanent force of seasoned policemen to guard the Capitol, his testimony does not appear in the transcript of hearings.

Funds Needed for Defense

The committee, in allowing $60,000, said that personnel detailed by the Metropolitan Police Department, the FBI, or the Secret Service shall have the same authority as Metropolitan and Capitol police. The District or the Federal agencies will be reimbursed for salaries and other expenses of the details.

Explaining the refusal of the House Appropriations Committee to appropriate the $250,000 asked for continuation of the Byrd Antarctic expedition a second year, Chairman Taylor said that the European war had made "a big change in the situation."

Open Bases To Allied Fleet, Stimson Urges

New Haven, Conn., June 18.—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State under Herbert Hoover, recommended in a radio address tonight that, in view of the collapse of resistance to the totalitarian nations on land, the United States throw its naval bases in the Atlantic Ocean open to the Allied fleets to enable them to command that ocean while the United States Navy devoted itself to patrolling the Pacific.

"Such cooperation could be made effective and could probably do its work without the necessity of sending any American soldiers abroad," he said. "On the other hand, if no such cooperation were given and if the British fleet were rendered helpless or fell into German power, our men would soon be fighting for their own and our lives on American soil, and our citizens' homes would be thrown open to destruction from hostile air forces operating from easily-commanding air bases."

Stimson was in New Haven to attend commencement exercises at Yale. Reiterating his previously voiced belief that the international situation represents a crisis for the United States as well as for the democracies in Europe, he made seven specific recommendations:

"First," he said, "we should repeal the provisions of our ill-starred so-called neutrality venture, which has acted as a shackle to our true interests for over five years.

"Second, we should throw open all of our ports to the British and French naval and merchant marine for all repairs and refueling and other naval services.

"Third, we should accelerate by every means in our power the sending of planes and other munitions to Britain and France on a scale which would be effective, sending them, if necessary, in our own ships and under convoys.

"Fourth, we should refrain from being fooled by the evident bluff of Hitler's so-called fifth column movements in South America. They are on the face of them attempts to frighten us from sending help where it will be most effective.

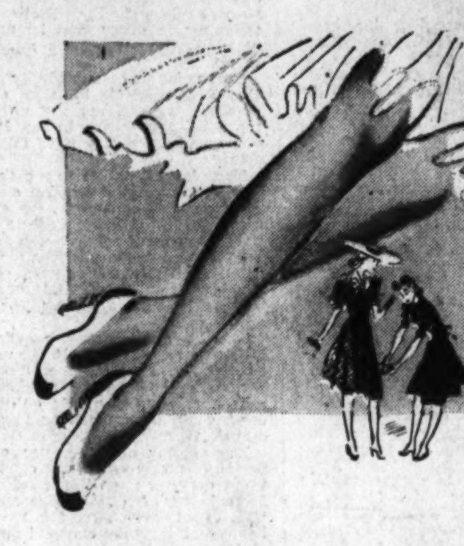

"Fifth, in order to assist the home front of Britain's defense we should open our lands as a refuge for the children and old people of Britain whose liability to suffering from air raids in Great Britain is a constant inducement to surrender to terms which she would otherwise resist.

"Sixth, we should, every one of us, combat the defeatist arguments which are being made in this country as to the unconquerable power of Germany. I believe that if we use our brains and curb our prejudices, we can, by keeping command of the sea, beat her again as we did in 1918.

"Finally, we should at once adopt a system of universal compulsory training and service which would not only be the most potent evidence that we are in earnest but which is at the moment imperative if we are to have men ready to operate the planes and other munitions, the creation of which Congress has just authorized by a practically unanimous vote."

Declaring that the sea power of the Allies was their one weapon still intact, Stimson traced through history how Great Britain's navy had saved her from Napoleon and how it had for years made the routes of the Atlantic safe for American shipping.

"Our own Navy, powerful and well trained as it is," he said, "is only a one-ocean navy, and our Nation, on account of its frontage upon two oceans, requires protection on both sides . . ."

Old Culture Doomed, Says Forum Speaker

Harry Elmer Barnes Declares U. S. Faces 'Utopia or Chaos'

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., June 18.—Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, history professor in the New School for Social Research in New York, told the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs tonight that civilization as known at the opening of the twentieth century is doomed, no matter who wins the war in Europe.

"The national state, individualistic capitalism, and the old type of nose-counting democracy are now breaking down, whether we like it or not, and are giving way to new patterns of institutional life," he contended.

Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, maintained, however, that the "dynamism of democracy is far more powerful than any totalitarianism can ever be and that it will manifest itself when we, as individuals, accept the disciplined responsibility of our citizenship and count no sacrifice too dear if only freedom may prevail."

Italy at Hitler's Mercy

Robert Gale Woolbert, assistant to the editor of Foreign Affairs, in a forum on the war from the viewpoint of Italy, declared that Mussolini has damaged seriously, perhaps irreparably, Italy's moral position as a Christian nation and a defender of western culture, and has cut himself off from old friends and allies so that he is now subject to Hitler's mercy.

Taking part in the discussion at the halfway mark of the fourteenth annual two-week institute also were Jay Allen, author and former correspondent for Chicago and London papers; Lawrence Fernsworth, former correspondent for the Times of London and the New York Times, and Murat Williams, assistant to the editor of the Richmond News Leader and formerly of the American Embassy staff in Madrid.

Dr. Kingdon stated that the United States "is not a warring nation, but we have the resources, human and material, to make ourselves such a people as no aggressor would dare attack." Then he added: "This is not enough! Our first line of defense is a moral one. Military mobilization will fail unless supported by and grounded in an awakening of our spirits to high loyalties."

"Totalitarianism now menaces representative government and democracy in the same way that the Tudors and Bourbons challenged feudalism in the early modern times," Dr. Barnes told the institute audience. "It is a very real question as to whether human intelligence is equal to the problem of solving the complexities heaped upon us by the revolutions in industry and communication. It is by no means assured that we can successfully continue the complicated civilization built up in the last few centuries.

"We very literally face either Utopia or chaos. If we subordinate our unique technological equipment and empire of machines to the service of the many rather than the profits of the few, and put an end to that supreme vestige of savagery.

Hoover Is Too Much Maligned, Lewis Asserts

C. I. O. Chief Says He Was Winning Battle, New Deal Has Lost It

By William H. Lawrence.
United Press Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 18.—C. I. O. President John L. Lewis charged tonight that President Roosevelt made depression and unemployment "a chronic fact in American life" and asserted that former President Herbert C. Hoover had been blamed wrongly for the American economic collapse.

Lewis went out of his way to absolve Hoover for responsibility for the United States depression, declaring that only "self-seeking politicians" blame the former President.

Considerable significance was attached to the C. I. O.'s chieftain's words since they were spoken here as Republicans gathered for their 1940 convention where there has been some talk of Hoover as a possible "dark horse" Presidential nominee if the leading contenders deadlock.

Lewis said that New Deal policies and "weaknesses" of its leaders "have kept this country in depression for seven more years," although it was on its way out of economic collapse in 1932 under policies Hoover pursued in cooperation with other nations.

"Increased National income and employment for all Americans is a fundamental and imperative problem, which the major political parties and the Government must face," Lewis said. "It is truly tragic that the current Administration in power, after seven years of experimentation, has made no substantial contribution toward the abatement of this problem.

"It is equally tragic that the political party in power, and its spokesmen, have even now no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems.

"Involvement or intervention in the European war is repugnant to every healthy-minded American citizen. The American electorate is anxious to demonstrate this fact in the political election of 1940.

"The major political party that permits war, or potential war profiteers, or professional politicians, with an aggressive military complex, to dominate or write its platform will find itself hopelessly beaten by the votes of an outraged electorate in November. All of the labor and liberal organizations with which I am identified stand unalterably for the adequate defense of the Nation and its democratic institutions, and against involvement in the European war and against those who advocate such involvement."

FCC Approves 2 Television Stations Here

Washington was assured of having two television broadcasting stations in the near future yesterday when the Federal Communications Commission announced tentative approval of 23 applications from throughout the country. At the same time it issued new rules and regulations governing noncommercial television operations.

Applications of the National Broadcasting Co. and the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, major rivals in the growing television industry, will be granted licenses, the FCC said, "promptly upon a proper showing of a program of research and development." The applicants were assigned channels in advance of the licenses.

While still waiting for the industry to take the initiative in reaching an agreement on a single standard of television transmission so that full commercial broadcasting can be authorized, the commission paved the way for construction of stations in leading cities from coast to coast.

"With the completion of the proj-
"With the completion of the projected stations," the FCC said, "this broadcast stations than any other nation of the world."

In its new rules the FCC stipulates that no person, directly or indirectly, shall operate or control more than three public programming television stations in group A—the most desirable—chanels or operate or control more than one such station in the same service area.

Canadian Liner Wrecked by Blast Off New Zealand

San Francisco, June 18 (AP).—An explosion wrecked the 7,582-ton Canadian-Australian liner Niagara in New Zealand waters and her passengers and crew almost immediately were ordered to abandon ship, radio advices said today.

After more than six hours of silence, Globe wireles officials here said they were "almost positive she has gone down." However, refusal of Australian and New Zealand shore stations to reply to radio queries because of war censorship left the fate of the crew and passengers in doubt.

The liner, maned by a crew of about 200, has accommodations for about 450 passengers, but lately has been carrying only around 100 passengers on her voyages between the Antipodes and Vancouver, British Columbia.

Chain Store Tax Bill Dead For Session

A House Ways and Mean subcommittee tabled the Patman chain store tax bill yesterday.

Chairman McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said the subcommittee rejected a motion in executive session to report the bill favorably and then voted to adjourn sine die.

This, he said, precluded further consideration of the measure at this session of Congress.

The committee action came after weeks of hearings on the legislation, which would impose a tax ranging from $50 to $1,000 on chains of ten or more retail stores. On large chains the total levy would have run into many thousands of dollars.

McCormack told reporters that "there was a feeling among members of the subcommittee that if legislation along such lines was considered necessary by reason of any fear of the threat of monopoly as advanced by its proponents that such legislation should be of a regulatory nature and not punitive through exercise of the taking power. Such legislation would not be within the jurisdiction of this committee."

Station PDS Presents Singer as Guest

The guest artist on Lee Everett's PDS program this morning will be Miss Margaret Anne Bopp, 5160 Shoemaker Lane. Miss Bopp has appeared in school operettas, such as the "Pirates of Penzance," in which she played the part of "Ruth." She is also a member of the Washington Opera Guild. Miss Bopp will broadcast over station WMAL.

MISS BOPP

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the audition at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

'Reasonable Hope of Final Victory' Seen in Churchill's War Report

London, June 18 (AP)—Following is the partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's war report today to Commons:

I spoke the other day of the colossal military disaster which occurred when the French high command failed to withdraw the northern armies from Belgium at a moment when they knew that the French front was decisively broken at Sedan and on the Meuse.

This delay entailed the loss of 15 or 16 French divisions and threw out of action the whole of the British Expeditionary Force.

Our army were indeed rescued by the British navy from Dunkerque, but only with the loss of all their cannon, vehicles and other modern equipment. This loss inevitably took some weeks to repair and in the first two of these weeks the Battle in France had been lost.

When we consider the heroic resistance made by the French army against heavy odds in this battle, and the enormous loss inflicted upon the enemy and the evident exhaustion of the enemy, it might well be thought that these 25 divisions of the best troops—best trained and equipped—might have turned the scales.

However, Gen. Weygand had to fight without them

Think of the future

Only three British divisions or their equivalent were able to stand in the line with their French comrades. They have suffered severely but they have fought well. We sent every man we could to France, as fast as we could reequip and transport their formations.

I am not reciting these facts for the purpose of recrimination. That I judge to be utterly futile and even harmful. We cannot afford it.

I recite them in order to explain why it was we did not have, as we could have had, between 12 and 14 British divisions fighting in the line in this battle instead of only three. Now I put this all aside.

tI has received the almost unanimous support of both Houses of Parliament and its members are going to stand together and, subject to the authority of the House of Commons, we are going to govern the country and fight the war.

It is absolutely necessary at a time like this that every minister who tries each day to do his duty shall be respected and their subordinates must know that their chiefs are not threatened men who are here today and gone tomorrow.

Their directions must be punctually and effectively given. Without this concentrated power we cannot do what lies before us.

The military events which have happened in France during the last fortnight have not come to me with any sense of surprise; indeed, I indicated a fortnight ago as clearly as I could to the House, that the worst possibilities were open and I made it perfectly clear that whatever happened in France, it would make no difference to the resolve of Britain and the British Empire to fight on, if necessary for years, and if necessary alone.

Large Force of Defenders

During the last few days we have successfully brought off the great majority of troops which were on the lines of communication in France. A very large number, scores of thousands, and seven-eighths of all the troops we have sent to France since the beginning of the war. About 350,010 out of 400,000 men are safely back in this country.

Others are still fighting with the French and fighting with considerable success.

We have also brought back a great mass of stores, rifles and munitions of all kinds which have accumulated in France during the last nine months. We have therefore in this island today a very large and powerful military force. This includes all our best trained and finest troops, including scores of thousands of those who have already measured their quality against the Germans and found themselves at no disadvantage.

We have under arms at the present time in this island over 1,250,000 men. Behind these we have the local defense volunteers, numbering 500,000, only a portion of whom, however, are armed with rifles or other firearms.

We have incorporated into our defense force a mass of weapons and we expect very large additions to these weapons in the near future. In preparation, we intend to call up, drill and train, further large numbers at once.

Those who are not called up or who are employed upon the vast business of munitions production in all its branches serve their country best by remaining at their ordinary work until they are required.

We also have the Dominion armies here. The Candians had actually landed in France, but have now been safely withdrawn much disappointed and are here with all their artillery and equipment. These very high class forces from the Dominions will now take part in the defense of their mother country.

Thus, the invasion of Great Britain at this time would require the transport across the seas of hostile armies on a very large scale and after they had been so transported, they would have to be continually maintained with all the immense mass of munitions and supplies which are required for continuous battle, as continuous battle it would be. Now here is where we come to the navy.

After all, we have a navy; some people seem to forget it. We must remind them. For more than 30 years I have been concerned in discussions about the possibility of an overseas invasion and I took the responsibility on behalf of the admiralty at the beginning of the last war of allowing all the regular troops to be sent out of the country although our territorials had only just been called up and were quite untried.

Challenge to Mussolini

We are also told that the Italian navy is coming to gain sea superiority in these waters. If that is seriously intended, I can only say we shall be delighted to offer Mussolini free, safeguarded passage through the Straits of Gibraltar in order that he may play the part which he aspires to do.

There is general curiosity in the British fleet to find out whether the Italians are up to the level they were in the last war or whether they have fallen off.

Therefore, it seems to me that as far as seaborne invasion on a great scale is concerned, we are far more capable of meeting it than we were at many periods in the last war and during the early months of this war before our troops were trained and while the British Expeditionary Force was abroad.

The navy was never intended to prevent the raids of bodies of five or ten thousand men flung across and thrown suddenly ashore at several points on the coast some dark night or foggy morning.

The efficacy of sea power, especially under modern conditions, depends upon the invading force being of a large size and, if it is of large size, the navy has something they can find and, as it were, bite on.

Alone Know the Channel

Now we must remember that even five divisions, even lightly equipped, would require 200 to 250 ships and with modern air reconnaissance and photography, it would not be easy to collect such an armada and marshal it across the seas with any powerful naval force to escort it with any possibility that it would not be intercepted long before it reached the coast and the men all drowned in the sea, or, at the worst, blown to pieces with their equipment when they were trying to land.

We have also a great system of mine fields recently reinforced, through which we alone know the Channel. If the enemy tries to sweep a channel through these mine fields it will be the task of the navy to destroy these minesweepers and any other force employed to protect them. There ought to be no difficulty about this owing to our superiority at sea.

Some people will ask why was it that the British navy was not able to prevent the movement of a large army from Germany into Norway across the Skagerrak, but conditions in the Channel and in the North Sea are in no way like those which prevail in the Skagerrak. In the Skagerrak, because of the distance, we could give no air support to our surface ships and consequently lying as we did close to the enemy's main air power in Norwegian waters, we were compelled to use only our submarines.

We could not enforce a decisive blockade or interruption of the enemy's surface vessels. Our vessels took a heavy toll but could not prevent the invasion, but in the Chanenl and in the North Sea, on the other hand, our forces, aided by submarines, will operate with close and effective air assistance.

This brings me naturally to the great question of invasion from the air and the impending struggle between the British and German air forces.

It seems quite clear that no invasion on a scale beyond the capacity of our ground forces to crush speedily is likely to take place from the air until our air force has been definitely overpowered. In the meantime, there may be raids by parachute troops and attempted descents by airborne soldiers. We ought to be able to give those gentry a warm reception, both in the air and, if they reach the ground in any condition to continue their dispute. The great question is, can we break Hitler's air weapon?

Local Mastery at Dunkerque

Now, of course, it is a very great pity that we have not got an air force at least equal to that of the most powerful enemy within reach of our shores, but we have a very powerful air force, which has proved itself far superior in quality both in men and in many types of machines to what we have met so far in the numerous fierce air battles which have been fought.

In France, where we were at a considerable disadvantage and lost many machines on the ground in the airdromes, we were accustomed to inflict upon the enemy a loss of two to two and a half to one.

In the fighting over Dunkerque, which was a sort of No-Man's Land, we undoubtedly gained a local mastery of the air and inflicted on the German air force losses on the scale of three or four to one.

Anyone looking at the photographs of the reembarkation, showing the masses of troops assembled on the beaches, affording an ideal target for hours at a time, must realize that this embarkation would not have been possible unless the enemy had resigned all hope of recovery of air superiority at that point.

In these islands the advance to the defenders will be very great. We ought to improve upon that rate of three or four to one, which was realized at Dunkerque.

Decision Was Painful

In addition, there are, of course, a great many injured machines and men who get down safely after an air fight. But all those who fall in an attack upon this island would land on friendly soil and live to fight another day, whereas all the injured enemy machines and their complements will be total losses, so far as the Germans are concerned.

During the great battle in France we gave very great and continuous aid to the French, both by fighters and bombers, but in spite of all pressure, we never allowed the entire metropolitan strength of our air force in fighters to be consumed. This decision was painful, but it was also right.

The battle was, however, lost by the unfortunate strategic opening and by the extraordinary unforeseen power of the armored columns and by the very great preponderance of the German army in numbers.

Our fighter air force might easily have been exhausted as a mere incident in that struggle and we should have found ourselves at the present time in a very unhappy plight. I am happy to inform the House that our fighter air strength is stronger at the present time relatively to the German, which has suffered terrible losses, than it has ever been.

There remains the danger of the bombing attacks, which will certainly be made very soon upon us by the bomber forces of the enemy. It is quite true that these forces are superior in number to ours, but we have a very large bombing force also which we shall use to strike at the military targets in Germany without intermission.

I do not at all underrate the severity of the ordeal which lies before us, but I believe that our countrymen will show themselves capable of standing up to it and carrying on in spite of it, at least as well as any other people in the world.

It will depend upon themselves and every man and woman will have the chance of showing the finest qualities of their race and of rendering the highest service to their cause.

For all of us, whatever our sphere or station, it will be a help to remember the famous lines:

"Ye nothing common did or mean
Upon the memorable scene."

I have thought it right on this occasion to give the House and the country some indication of the solid, practical grounds upon which we are basing our invincible resolve to continue the war and I can assure them that our professional advisers of the three services unitedly advise that we should do it and that there are good and reasonable hopes of final victory.

We have fully informed all the self-governing dominions and we have received from all prime ministers messages couched in the most moving terms, in which they indorse our decision and declare themselves ready to share our fortunes and persevere to the end.

We may now ask ourselves in what way has our position worsened since the beginning of the war. It is worsened by the fact that the Germans have conquered a large part of the coast of the Allies in western Europe and many small countries have been overrun by them. This aggravates the possibility of air attack and adds to our naval preoccupation, but in no way diminishes, but on the contrary definitely increased, the power of the long-distance blockade.

Should military resistance come to an end in France—which is not yet—though it will in any case be greatly diminished, the Germans can concentrate their forces, both military and industrial, upon us. But for the reason given to the House this will not be easy to apply.

If invasion becomes more imminent, we have been relieved from the task of maintaining a large army in France and we have a far larger and more efficient force here to meet it.

If Hitler can bring under despotic control the industries of the countries he has conquered, this will add greatly to his already vast armament output.

Methods Improved

On the other hand, this will not happen immediately and we are now assured of immense continued and increasing support in munitions of all kinds from the United States and especially of airplanes and pilots from across the ocean. They will come from regions beyond the reach of enemy bombers.

I do not see how any of these factors can operate to our detriment, on balance, before the winter comes, and the winter will impose a strain upon the Nazi regime, with half Europe writhing and starving under its heel, which, for all their ruthlessness, will run them very hard.

We must not forget that from the moment we declared war on the third of September it was always possible for Germany to turn all their air force on this country.

In the meanwhile, however, we have enormously improved our methods of defense and we have learned what we had no right to assume at the beginning, of the individual superiority of our aircraft and pilots.

Therefore, in casting up this dread balance sheet and contemplating our dangers with a disillusioned eye, I see great reasons for intense exertion and vigilance, but none whatever for panic or despair. During the first four months of the last war the Allies experienced nothing but disaster and disappointment and yet at the end their morale was higher than that of the Germans, who had moved from one aggressive triumph to another.

Historic Declaration

During that war we repeatedly asked ourselves the question, "How are we going to win?" And no one was ever able to answer it with much precision, until at the end, quite suddenly and unexpectedly, our terrible foe collapsed before us and we were so glutted with victory that in our folly we cast it away.

We do not yet know what will happen in France or whether the French resistance will be prolonged both in France and in the French empire overseas.

The French government will be throwing away great opportunities and casting away their future if they do not continue the war in accordance with their treaty obligations, from which we have not felt able to release them.

The House will have read the historic declaration in which, at the desire of many Frenchmen and of our own hearts, we have proclaimed our willingness to conclude at the darkest hour in French history a union of common citizenship in their struggle.

However matters may go in France or with the French government, or another French government, we in this island and in the British empire will never lose our sense of comradeship with the French people.

What Gen. Weygand called the Battle of France is over. The Battle of Britain is about to begin. On this battle depends the survival of Christian civilization.

If we can stand up to him all Europe may be freed and the life of the world may move forward into broad sunlit uplands, but if we fail the whole world, including the United States and all that we have known and cared for, will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinister and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of a perverted science.

Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves that if the British commonwealth and empire last for a thousand years men will still say, "This was their finest hour."

Nazi Secret Order Seen Directing Plot to Seize All South America

Master Minds Busy In Remote Towns, Uruguayans Claim

By John W. White
Copyright by New York Times

Montevideo, June 18.—A Nazi plot for absorbing the entire South American continent into the Third Reich, it is alleged, is being directed from Montevideo through a secret lodge within the Nazi Party known as the National Socialist Order.

Within this inner secret lodge are located the brains and machinery which put into motion the National Socialist Party, which is the Nazis public organization.

[Uruguay's minister of war said tonight that Nazi activities in Uruguay as uncovered in a special congressional report were not serious enough to endanger the national security, the Associated Press reported.

[Nevertheless he said he had ordered all regiments to be ready for action just as if an attack were expected at any moment. The army adopted severe measures of vigilance and was patrolling the streets of the capital tonight.]

It is taken for granted by the newspapers, public and the less reserved in official circles, that the hurried ordering of the United States cruiser Quincy to proceed to Montevideo was due to the fact that Washington had received information of the discovery of the Nazi plot.

It was rumored in Buenos Aires that the Argentine government had sent 10,000 troops to Concordia, in Entre Rios Province, to prevent any attempt of the Germans there to cooperate with the Germans in Uruguay.

It is known that a copy of the plot document was shown to certain diplomats, presumably the Argentine ambassador and the United States minister. The plot was discovered May 29, the Quincy sailed the 31st. The cruiser Wichita sailed soon after.

The Quincy is due here Thursday morning. Simultaneously the new destroyer O'Brien will arrive at Buenos Aires and remain there while the Quincy is here, which leads to the belief that the O'Brien is operating with the Quincy and Wichita.

Uruguay's investigations into Nazi activities has disclosed that some of the Nazis' best master minds in international intrigue are directing the South American plot from unimportant little towns in the Uruguayan interior, where they occupy apparently inferior positions in the Uruguayan Nazi Party. It has become apparent that Julius Dalldorf, gauleiter or "Little Feuhrer" for Uruguay, is less important than several men occupying positions subordinate to the district leaders under him.

Offered Editorship

Correspondence seized by the Uruguyan congressional committee reveals that in at least one case, that of Arnulf Fuhrmann, Dalldorf was not acquainted with the importance of the secret duties of his supposed subordinates. Dalldorf offered an editorship on the party paper in Montevideo to Fuhrmann, who replied that he could not accept because of the pressing nature of matters already in his hands.

It developed Fuhrmann not only was director of anti-Semitic operations for all South America but also director of the plans for armed action wherever and whenever such action was opportune. In his house in Salto, Uruguay, police found the document disclosing the plot for a military seizure of Uruguay and its conversion into an agricultural colony of the Reich, revealed yesterday.

The congressional committee has found documents in the files of Nazi leaders in interior points far from Montevideo which reveal that the Nationalist Socialist Oorder is a sort of secret Brown Shirt lodge, organized under three "castles" and having headquarters in three German cities.

These castles train "Little Fuehrers" and spies for foreign service. At least three or four of the Nazi leaders in the Uruguayan interior who have passed through all three castles are therefore, subordinate only to the Nazi Supreme Council in Germany. It does not appear that Dalldorf had this higher training.

Documents in the investigating committee's possession, however, show that Gestapo Agent Rudolf Meissner, who cooperated closely with Fuhrmann in Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay, is one of the higher members of the secret organization, as is Otto Klein, South American director of espionage and economic and industrial penetration.

Drive in Schools

Another subordinate apparently a member and occupying a much more important post than appears on the surface is Rudolph Paetz, a school teacher who is the Uruguayan director, and probably the South American director, of Nazi penetration into South American schools, colleges and universities.

The investigating committee believes the 12 Nazi leaders under arrest constitute the entire supreme council for Uruguay as well as all the directors for the plot directed from Montevideo.

The Nazi documents seized by the committee show that in the Nazi mind the world is divided into only two parts, the German "gau" and the foreign "gau." Uruguay is, as are other countries which the Nazis hope to absorb into the world Reich a "district" of the foreign gau or "Germany abroad." Nazi organization of these districts of Germany abroad is divided into three great sections—political organization, storm troops and sports organization.

There are four subdivisions under the political organization:

The committee for economic and industrial policy abroad; the committee for education and propaganda; the organization of cells or stutzpunkts; the Hitler younh movement. Operations for all South America under this first subdivision and probably the second, are directed from Montevideo.

NAZIS STAB DEEPER INTO FRANCE—Conquest of German armies (indicated by dotted area above broken line) extended deeper into France as Hitler and Mussolini discussed peace terms. Important port of Cherbourg was reached by Nazis and violent fighting raged west of Orleans. German reports indicated that the Maginot defense zone (heavy shading) was crumbling and many French soldiers were surrendering. More French were believed trapped by a Nazi thrust to the Swiss border, but about 450,000 Maginot Line troops escaped and established a front north of Lyon, withstanding a heavy German assault

Interior Minister Charles Pomaret in a broadcast tonight urged citizens to stay at home to keep the roads free for troops who are "still fighting."

"Behind the front," he said, "calm and order must be kept. France is still living and will live."

In summarizing the French military situation, Pomaret described it as "etremely critical," but said fighting still goes on.

"The pressure by the enemy," he said, "is very strong and our troops are tired, but the army is holding on everywhere. The army of the Maginot Line is entact and regrouping made necessary by events is in progress."

Meanwhile, the French cabinet waited for word of the fateful conference of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at Munich—the conference which may decide the fate of France and her colonial empire.

The order to continue resistance against Germany went out in the name of Generalissimo Maxime Weygand as well as Petain's.

"It is the duty of all to continue resistance," they said.

"All French and Allied combatants on land, sea and in the air are notified that no armistice and no suspension of fighting have occurred," said Petain's order.

"Negotiations are the only thing that has been planned and they have not yet commenced."

The military situation, as described more particularly by a French War Office spokesman tonight gave the Germans full possession of all the area north of the Loire River except part of Britanny.

Fight Along Loire

The second army along the Loire was described as holding a line roughly defined by Tours, Orleans and La Charite, with the Germans attempting to cross the river between La Charite and Sancerre. Orleans, Tours and Rennes either have been given up or are on the point of being given up.

Farther east, where the Nazis have made a complete breakthrough in the sector south of Tardenois, the motorized invading army sped north of Autun and was swinging slightly east with increased pressure in the vicinity of Dijon.

The French Third Army which originally was in the Maginot Line, had withdrawn in "good order."

The Fourth Army, that of the Alps, remained intact while taking "necessary measures" to protect its left flank.

Held in Jura Mountains

Basel, Switzerland, June 18 (AP).—Armored German columns tried to crack the reorganized French army on the southern Jura Mountains tonight to clasp hands with Italians in the Alps, but failed to get through.

They withdrew slightly to await reinforcements before tackling the new right wing of the French army.

Bulgarians Expect Soviet Move on Rumania

By C. L. Sulzberger.
Copyright by New York Times

Sofia, June 18.—Revisionist claims of the Balkans are now bursting into the open as a preliminary to what is hoped will be the general European settlement, even though the war obviously is not yet over.

Following up the official attitude expressed in Budapest anticipating the removal of restrictions fixed by the Trianon Treaty, the Bulgarian press today was inspired by the government to call forth the scrapping of the Treaty of Neuilly, and the stating of her desires for claims on southern Dobrudja from Rumania and an outlet to the Aegean Sea.

Neither the Bulgarian nor the Hungarian claim is expected to provide a spark in this area, at least for the moment, and leading Bulgarians, including the foreign minister, stress their faith in a peaceful settlement.

The great danger to this area appears to be Russia, and there is great uneasiness in Rumania tonight. Best informed persons here expect Soviet occupation of Bessarabia in the near future and doubt if Germany could restrain Moscow. There is still no confirmation of reported Russian-Italian-German talks about a partitioning of the Balkans, and while opinion is divided as to whether this is likely, nobody really knows.

The feeling here is that Germany does not wish to expand territorially in this direction, and stands to gain rather by increasing her already strong economic hold as well by allowing the Hungarians and Bulgarians some expansion. However, it is felt in Sofia that Italy and Russia are more likely to want actual territorial gains.

If partition should be the fate of the Balkans, there is a likely possibility of a conflict between Russia and the Axis.

Tatarescu Keeps Power

Bucharest, June 18 (U.P.).—The present Rumanian government of Premier Tatarescu will remain in power, it was announced officially tonight after authoritative reports that King Carol II had been on the verge of setting up an extreme rightist dictatorship favoring the Rome-Berlin axis.

Diplomatic quarters understood that, on advice of Germany and Italy, the Tatarescu government will remain in office until the territorial claims against Rumania of Russia, Hungary and Bulgaria are "completely liquidated."

(The German wireless, predicting a Rumanian cabinet shakeup in the near future, said that all the Tatarescu ministers have handed in undated resignations to King Carol so that he may make cabinet changes at any moment.)

The decision to keep Tatarescu in power, taken at an emergency session of the cabinet at which Rumanian neutrality was reaffirmed, apparently arose from a desire to protect to the limit Rumania's territorial status quo.

Political quarters said it did not appear that Germany would take any immediate political advantage in southeastern Europe of her military successes in the west.

The arrival in Bucharest of Dr. Hans Neubacher, German economist, led to reports that Adolf Hitler is bidding for all the raw materials which Rumania hitherto has exported to Britain and France.

It remains to be seen whether or not the Italo-German Axis will support Rumania in her stand against a revision, but in this connection much importance is attached to the arrival in Bucharest tomorrow afternoon of the new Russian minister.

Soviet quarters refuse to discuss reports Russia will renew her claims on Bessarabia, cut from Russia after the World War and given to Rumania. Many Rumanians believe Italy and Germany will ask Moscow to renounce all claims to Bessarabia.

The Economic Side

The problem of safeguarding the independence and territorial integrity of the nations of this hemisphere cannot be solved by military means alone.

Given time, the shield of the Monroe Doctrine could be made so formidable as to make it ruinously expensive for any overseas power, however strong, to attempt the physical conquest of any American nation. It is with this object in view that the United States has embarked on the most ambitious program of military and naval preparedness in peacetime history. But, however invulnerable to military pressure, the vulnerability of some individual American nations to economic pressures from overseas will remain apparent.

For instance, with all of Europe dominated by the Third Reich the economic leverage which Germany may be in a position to apply to certain Latin-American republics would be considerable. And that economic leverage could, obviously, be employed for the achievement of ulterior political ends.

It would be self-defeating for the United States to consider hemispheric defense purely as a military problem. It also has its very serious economic aspects. And the problem is surrounded with vast difficulties. The United States is obviously in no position to buy more than a fraction of the surplus commodities produced by our neighbors to the south. But whether that difficulty can be solved by the current scheme for an inter-American export corporation is anything but clear.

In its present form, certainly, this scheme is too vague and too tenuous to encourage comment. However, it is entirely in order for the Administration to be giving the most serious consideration to the economic side of inter-American relations and inter-American defense.

Universal Service

By adding 120,000 men to the authorized size of the Army Congress will greatly strengthen the initial protective force ready at all times to defend American interests at any point. In some respects, however, this bill emphasizes the weakness of the American military establishment.

As passed by the House, the new Army bill would increase the authorized number of enlisted men to 400,000. That will be not far short of twice the force the United States maintained until recent months. This addition to the Regular Army will minimize the need for mobilization of the National Guard for possible emergency service beyond American borders. And it will permit us to drop the fiction that the National Guard is prepared to take up arms in defense of the country on a moment's notice.

On the other hand, an Army of trained men numbering 400,000 is pitifully small to defend a country as large as the United States. It is time for public opinion to confront the fact that no standing army which we can afford to maintain will give this country adequate protection. As a corollary to this increase in the Regular Army, therefore, Congress will soon be forced to consider a program of compulsory military training.

Our experience in the World War shows the length of time required to recruit and train an army. Should the United States have to defend itself with arms in the future, it could expect no such undisturbed period in which to prepare. It would need an army of trained men immediately. Such an army can be provided in only one way—through routine compulsory military training.

There is nothing undemocratic about compulsory training for defense of one's country. Indeed, it is the most democratic method of securing men for military service. For a program of this sort applies without discrimination to all young men. People like the Swiss regard this common experience of military training as a great democratizing force.

In any event, self-governing countries must take the steps which seem necessary to defend their borders and national interests. At the moment it is impossible to know what military strength the United States should attain to give us security in the years that lie ahead. But the folly of unpreparedness has been so repeatedly illustrated in recent months that the forewarned will not hesitate to take extraordinary precautions.

Is Our Position Clear?

Great Britain now faces the terrible choice of fighting Germany and Italy practically alone, or of making peace with Hitler. The London government will have to make decisions of the most vital moment to the British Isles as well as to the empire. And those decisions must be made under circumstances that have changed with revolutionary swiftness since Britain declared war on Germany last September.

In this critical period the British are asking, as the French asked in the last hours before their appeal for a cessation of hostilities, what help they can expect from the United States. Their final decision is certain to be influenced by the American response. Therefore our Government has a grave responsibility to inform the British precisely where we stand.

That obligation has become the greater because of the interpretation which the French government put upon President Roosevelt's message to former Premier Reynaud last week. Following an emergency meeting at Bordeaux, the French cabinet issued a communique in which it said:

> The Government of the United States declares itself resolved to pursue to the utmost the policy of direct assistance to the Allies, which it has recently adopted, and will even develop it to the full extent of its resources, to the exclusion, for the moment, of participation in the conflict. It is for Congress to take such a decision under the terms of the American Constitution.

This statement mistakenly assumes that a Presidential declaration constitutes a governmental decision. It indicates a French belief that the United States has completely abandoned its neutral status and is close to a declaration of war on Germany. Are the British now making their decisions under a similar false assumption? That question should give the White House the utmost concern.

The government of Great Britain knows, as that of France knew, that in the struggle against Nazi aggression it has the full sympathy of the American people. Mr. Winston Churchill knows that, on orders from the British government, American industry is turning out valuable military equipment for its defense. Moreover, the United States is trading in some military supplies so that they may be sold by private corporations to British purchasing agents. This policy of giving indirect aid to the British has overwhelming popular support, and such cash sales are likely to be increased as the production of airplane factories and munitions plants is stepped up.

The British people must not be misled, however, into assuming from this that the United States is likely to enter the war. The resolve of the American people to avoid participation in this struggle is exceedingly strong. Even if it were less so, the self-imposed task of defending all the Western Hemisphere would necessitate a cautious policy with regard to involvement in the European conflict, and that is particularly true at a time when our preparations for national defense are just getting under way.

The question is whether or not the actualities of American policy in this critical period have been made clear at London. It seems indisputable that President Roosevelt gave France a misleading impression of the policy Congress has indorsed. It is clear that the French did not attempt to direct their course on the basis of the assurances they believed our Government had given them. But that does not minimize the necessity of correcting an interpretation that does not square with the facts.

It is well to remember, at this juncture, the criticisms and bitterness aroused in Europe when Congress refused to underwrite President Wilson's policy with regard to American membership in the League of Nations.

Modern Comfort

That old Japanese custom of "comforting" soldiers at the front has undergone some revolutionary changes. Gen. Sadao Araki, who was a victim of this "comforting" during the Russo-Japanese war, is now using his position as secretary of the Cabinet Advisory Council to effect a sweeping reform.

The general remembers that the "comforting" speeches of high officials while he was in the ranks were no comfort at all. "We had to stand at attention for hours," he says, "and listen to long-winded speeches. I was sick and tired of it." No doubt he has won everlasting renown among Japanese soldiers by suggesting that official "comforters" be replaced by jugglers and vaudeville singers.

If Japan's lagging war in China is suddenly revived with an outburst of energy, the explanation will be readily apparent. Meantime Tokyo may well ask why a good idea should be restricted to the army in China. And Americans will probably be asking why such a happy thought should be confined to the Orient. It is particularly difficult to believe that Philadelphia and Chicago will be able to resist a wistful longing for the Araki formula in the coming weeks.

Revolt In Cleveland

If you are taking seriously all these warnings about the reality and imminence of world revolution, we invite your attention to a significant event which took place last week no farther from home than Cleveland.

Cleveland is the Kiel or, if you prefer, the Kronstadt of the American League of baseball clubs; that is to say, a point at which to look for the first signs of revolutionary eruption. Well, then, last week about a dozen members of the Cleveland club, mostly young men, marched into the office of the owner, Mr. Bradley, and demanded that their manager, Mr. Ossie Vitt, be sent packing forthwith.

The complaints against Mr. Vitt seem to boil down to a charge that he has been excessively exercising an unduly sharp tongue on his boys, thereby causing them spiritual anguish. For example, on one of the numerous recent occasions when Mr. Mel Harder has been knocked out of the box, Mr. Vitt is said to have remarked: "Don't you think that, with the money you're getting, you might win a game now and then?"

This, if correctly reported, does indeed seem harsh treatment of a man who has to labor rather strenuously in the hot sun for 30 or 40 minutes of every third or fourth afternoon during the season. Moreover, it was in questionable taste for Mr. Vitt to bring up the subject of money at all. It is notorious that Cleveland ballplayers are so wretchedly underpaid that one of them felt obliged last winter to ask the State of Ohio for $15 a week unemployment insurance to supplement his annual pittance of about $7,500.

Here indeed are the seeds of revolution. But just as we were all set for one of those great upheavals in the baseball world Cleveland reported that the uprising had petered out. "For the betterment of the Cleveland Baseball Club" the players withdraw all statements relative to the resignation of Mr. Vitt. Apparently Cleveland isn't ripe for revolution after all.

No Excess Of Tolerance

The arrest by Uruguayan police of 12 Nazi party leaders, alleged to have plotted the overthrow of the government with the help of German war veterans from Argentina, is the more sensational because of previous reports of fifth column activities in that small but progressive South American republic.

The extent to which the local Nazi organization constitutes a real threat to the independence and internal stability of Uruguay is difficult, at this distance, to determine. It is possible that in this instance caution in Montevideo outruns any actual danger.

Nonetheless, the Uruguayan authorities can hardly be blamed for refusing to take chances. This is no time for any small nation to be complacent. And Uruguay, a prosperous little country with an area of 72,000 square miles, a population of around 2,000,000 and a tiny standing army, is wise in following the old adage about a stitch in time.

Note to the optimists: No one ever got enough silver out of the lining of a cloud to pay for an umbrella.

Platonic love is exceedingly rare and not much fun.

From the Des Moines Register

Earl Carroll, the show producer, was being complimentary when he said the Middle West is one of the two regions of America which produce the most beautiful girls, but his reasons for thinking so were absurd.

"You must remember (said Mr. Carroll) that the Middle West was settled by the descendants of the patrician cavaliers who settled the South, with very little peasant stock among the Germans and Scandinavians of the Mississippi Valley. The result is that the Middle West with its cavalier background and the South with its cavalier ancestry have the most beautiful girls in America."

In the first place, the South was not "settled by the patrician cavaliers," but by ordinary people with a mere handful of cavaliers thrown in. In the second place, there are even fewer descendants of cavaliers in the Middle West than there are in the South, which means practically none.

Moreover, when Mr. Carroll speaks of "very little peasant stock" among the Germans and Scandinavians of the Middle West, he is very badly informed. Not only is the percentage of "peasants" high, but fortunately so. We have that to thank for our sturdy rural stock in this region.

About the only statement in the Carroll interview which was correct is that Middle Western girls are very easy on the eye. And you don't have to be Earl Carroll to know that.

A Western Reaction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Radio and newspaper reports indicate that more than 1,000 telegrams were received at the White House following President Roosevelt's speech at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

However, to say that that number of telegrams complimenting the President on his speech represents the majority opinion of the United States is wrong. Millions of our people either cannot afford to send the President telegrams every time he makes a speech or, having the money, are not inclined to do so.

If Mr. Roosevelt, the members of the Administration and New Deal members of Congress could have talked personally with the average man and woman in Minneapolis today they would have found out that thousands of persons grew white in their faces as they heard the speech, half crying and half afraid. Many of them (the listeners) charged President Roosevelt and the New Deal with trying to plunge the United States into war.

The faith and confidence that thousands of persons had had in the New Deal is now gone. They charge that the New Deal now wants to plunge the United States into a costly war in order to cover up the failures of the past seven years. This change is evident in all classes—the employed, the professional persons, the businessman, both large and small, and those on relief. My work brings me into contact with all classes of people, so I know whereof I speak. We want the Allies to win and we are willing to give material aid, but not our brothers, sons, husbands and sweethearts on the battlefields of Europe.

RALPH OLSON.
Minneapolis, June 11.

Plea For Unity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to add my opinion to many these days in regard to this country's foreign policy. To begin with the course that seems to be forming is in exact conformity with my ideas from the beginning of the conflict. That is, all the material aid to the Allies (our allies) that we can give and all obstruction to Germany and Italy. That is merely a matter of self-preservation. Why there was ever any dissension from this procedure is not understood by me. Most certainly Germany gives no thought to anyone's opinion when she wants something that lies where she can get it.

It seems to me that in this world of force meet force something should be done on a large scale to meet all emergencies. Not always caught with the appalling situation of having to fight and prepare at the same time. And people standing by, as small and large nations, watching neighbors being gobbled up and hopelessly awaiting their turn with the disguise of two-faced neutrality to protect them.

To correct this it seems a Protective League of Nations (democratic nations) could and should be formed. Not to outlaw wars. Not to make it a league for all nations. Not to hold disarmament conferences. But to actually form and perfect a democratic solid front backed up with armament to meet any eventuality.

If democracy is worth fighting for, and I for one believe it is, then surely it is worth being ready to fight for, with a secure feeling of meet all comers force with force. None of this to make the world safe for democracy but rather to make democracy safe in the world.

HUGH B. CRAWFORD.

Capital Punishment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of President Roosevelt in freeing Charles Harris, who was serving a life sentence after commutation of the death sentence for the alleged murder of Milsie Henry nine years ago, is most gratifying.

Doubtless many innocent persons have been executed, as Harris would have been except for the untiring efforts of a brave band of noble humanitarians, including Charles Edward Russell, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Bishop Freeman and the Rev. Charles Brown Harris. All praise for their intensive and successful campaign, so ably directed by Neil Burkinshaw.

This case should be a strong argument against capital punishment. Some persons concede that conviction on circumstantial evidence is not a safe procedure, and they are willing to have the death penalty withheld in a conviction of that sort. It was not circumstantial but direct evidence on which Harris was found guilty.

So those who think it unwise to impose the death penalty on circumstantial evidence should oppose it altogether. JAMES P. BRIGGS.
Washington, June 14.

U. S. As Guardian

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In "Excerpts From Our Letters" in The Post of June 9, a writer asks this question:

"Why, in the name of all that is reasonable, cannot America call a truce for the next two or three weeks till the Red Cross can get the children from England and France to a place of safety over here?"

Unlike the unsolved internal pressing problems here at home, the answer to this international problem is very simple. Here it is—

We are so concerned with our neighbors' domestic difficulties, that we have not the time to get our own children out of the street.

Here, within a stone throw of the State Capitol, also in Washington, just a block or two from the Nation's Capitol, there are children that need our attention as much if not more than those across the pond.

As "nursemaids" and as guardians, I am afraid we don't rate very high with the nobility. We have a better record as dumb suckers.

WORLD WAR VETERAN.
Atlanta, Ga., June 12.

Britain's Might

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The British Empire is the largest political empire in the world. It includes about one-fourth of the world's land surface, and more than one-fourth of its population. Kipling said "Never was isle so little, never was sea so lone, but over the scud and the palm trees an English flag has flown."

If the British are so great and mighty, why are they not able to take care of themselves among the family of nations? Why must they come weeping to us when they get into trouble? Have they become so decadent that they cannot fight their own battles? The war propagandists tell us that we have a "stake" in Europe's war. Mussolini says that he has a "stake" in Germany's war. Mr. Duff Cooper, a prominent Englishman, says that Mussolini is a murderer. By the same token, what would we be if we went to fight Britain's war? MARY WILSON.
Washington, June 13.

Suspicious

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial entitled "A Broader Tax Base" is one of the most complete giveaways of the real aims behind the present defense measures that has yet appeared.

It says, in so many words, that under the guise of an emergency the powers that be will be able to slip over a program of taxing moderate incomes, which they've been wanting to do for a long time—and this program will remain long after the emergency has passed.

So far the defense program has resulted in the following proposals: Abridgement of the Walsh-Healey and Wages-and-Hours Acts, depriving labor of hard-earned benefits; anti-alien laws, depriving foreign-born workers of jobs; vigilante and official activities against a so-called "Fifth Column," aimed primarily at trade unionists and minority groups; increased taxation hitting the small-income brackets most of all.

Perhaps I am unduly suspicious. But it certainly looks as though our legislators, aided and abetted by the press, are taking advantage of the real desire of the people for peace and security and adequate defense to put over an anti-labor, anti-civil liberties, anti-consumer and pro-industrialist program which, if carried out, would make this country just one step short of fascist.

CHARLOTTE YOUNG.
Washington, June 10.

Division Of Opinion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the most striking things about American public sentiment in this war crisis is the sharp cleavage between older people who have no stake in the decision and young people who would be called upon to do the dying.

At Yale, Harvard and Dartmouth, overwhelming majorities of the student bodies have signed petitions urging that America keep out of the war and maintain strict neutrality.

At these same schools, faculty members, of whom a healthy percentage are old and who, if they do service, will do it from behind desks, petitioned for action which constitutes steps toward war.

At the George Washington University, a poll of the university Hatchet, first of faculty members, then of students showed the same results. Faculty opinions were studded with such statements as: "An early entry into the fray is imperative;" students were almost unanimous in urging that we stay out and take no steps which might lead to our involvement.

Louvain Library

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In times like these a single detail is not of great momentary importance to us but in time it may come to be of greater importance to us, even though its importance be tragic.

I refer to the burning of the Louvain Library during Hitler's destructive invasion of Belgium.

The original Louvain Library was rich in old historic rolls. It was full of ancient tomes and priceless documents. There its builders had garnered varied treasures from the "guhaers" of Medieval troubadours and Renaissance trouveres, to the precious parchments whereon Thomas a Kempis with his own saintly hands wrote down fervid words of inspiration.

Fortunately, in America, some of these books, these poems, and a few of the documents exist in duplicate, or copies. But, alas for Louvain, and woe to Hitler!

His Mother Was A Joiner

Joe is going back home. Back to Greenville. It'll break his mother's heart, but Joe hopes she'll forget him being President after awhile and just be glad to have him home.

It's Joe's mother's fault. She did it. She drove him back to Greenville. She ran 20 pounds off him in a single year and changed him from an overly-normal clerk in the Department of Justice to a nerve-shattered neurotic.

Poor Joe. Poor Joe's mother. She was sitting at home expecting to hear any moment that Joe had been named Attorney General, what with all these changes, when the wire came that Joe was coming home. She had told all the neighbors how well Joe was getting on "up there in Washington," she had him at the White House at least twice a week, and talked cheerily of "Eleanor" at the weekly meetings of the Ladies Auxiliary, Circle 2.

But it wasn't that that reduced Joe to a nervous wreck.

Joe's mother was inordinately proud of Joe. She is a clubwoman, a joiner, and keeps track of relatives up to fifth and sixth cousins.

These elements in Joe's mother's character led to Joe's downfall.

For every time Cousin Etta or Uncle Jeff or Mrs. Parker from across the street announced an impending visit to Washington, Joe's mother swung into action.

"You must look up my boy, Joe," Joe's mother would say, always using great care to see that Washington's prospective visitors got the address and the phone number exactly right. "Be sure and remember it's northwest. That's N. W., you know. Where the White House it."

And when Cousin Etta and Uncle Jeff and Mrs. Parker arrived in Washington they were only too glad to avail themselves of Joe's services.

"Now you come right over here, Joe Green, and have dinner with us. Then we'll go see the sights. And tomorrow I want you to show us through the Smithsonian. And we must see Congress in action before we go. And I wouldn't miss Mount Vernon for anything . . ."

The first month of it Joe bore up pretty well. True, he used up his annual leave and his sick leave, but he was a hospitable young man with a genuine friendliness, and he knew it pleased his mother.

Joe's mother was pleased. The reports from Cousin Etta, Uncle Jeff and Mrs. Parker were so satisfying to Joe's mother that she was encouraged to spread the good word further.

The moment Joe's mother heard that the Wheatons or the Smiths from over in Jones County were planning a trip "East" she was on the phone.

"Oh, yes, you must go to Washington. Don't miss Washington. So historical, you know. The White House and the Justice Department. And, oh, yes, do look up my boy, Joe. Oh, he has a big position in the New Deal. He'll be so glad to see you."

They looked up Joe. They descended by bus and train and airplane on Washington, and no sooner was the grime of travel off their hands than they were on the phone looking up Joe. They called him at home, they called him at work. When he had his phone taken out they haunted his doorstep.

How Joe survived a year of it I'll never know. All Greenville, all the county, all the State of Mississippi descended on Joe crying their merry greeting: "How are you, Joe, old boy? Guess you're mighty glad to see a familiar face from back home again."

Just before his sense of humor was completely destroyed Joe told me he was planning to send an engraved invitation to a lone family down in Pearl River County that his mother had overlooked.

Joe lost his job at Justice, of course. I tried to persuade him to stay on in Washington. "You can always conduct sightseeing tours."

"Listen," said Joe, a maniacal glint blazing from his eyes. "I have been doing nothing else for six months, six years, six centuries. I know every bone of every fossil in the Smithsonian. I have walked up, run up, hopped up and stumbled up the Washington Monument, and once, God be praised, I rode up with Cousin Eleazar and his warped leg. I have toured J. Edgar Hoover's FBI with 16 uncles, 23 aunts and 291 cousins, not counting two perfect strangers, one Oriental and an Eskimo. I could conduct that tour with my eyes shut and ten quarts of champagne under my belt. I have counted every piece of every mosaic in the Library of Congress, and there isn't a flyspeck on the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence that I'm not personally acquainted with. I have looked at Congressmen until I automatically start reading a newspaper or chatting with my neighbor when someone else is talking, and the next thing you know I'll catch myself mailing in an expense slip for 20 cents a mile. I can tell you just when the gentleman from Georgia is going to sneeze or the gentleman from Wisconsin scratch his head. I have stared at those State statues in the rotunda until the guides have started pointing me out as the latest imitation marble addition from Mississippi. I have a nodding acquaintance with every blade of grass at Mount Vernon, and I have gazed at George Washington's tomb until I'm fit for a crypt myself. I have left my footprints on every grain of sand from Hains Point to the Memorial, and I have looked at cherry blossoms until I want to declare war on the Japanese, and build another monument to George Washington. But if I did there'd just be more steps to climb. Anyway you look at it I'm lost. Even when I go to the Zoo to relax the monkeys set up such a clatter at sight of me that I can hear 'em saying: 'Here comes that fool again.'

"No, sir. I'm a beaten man. My feet are flat, my tongue is parched, my nerves are cut to ribbons, my whole life is ruined. I'm going home to rest for 50 or 60 years, and if anybody mentions sightseeing to me again I'm going to hang, draw and quarter him and boil the leftovers in oil."

Lessons From France

By Dorothy Thompson

Forewarned America

So there stands France today—France, the birthplace of democracy; France, home of the sweetest and most humane of civilizations—her face smeared with blood, her hands empty of weapons, with the black hooked cross flying over the city of light.

People are responsible for this. So thinks the common man in France. The last spurt of energy, the last gasp of fury is directed inward, not outward. Hatred burns in the wounded and defeated heart. Somebody is to blame for this! Find the culprits!

The culprits, they think, are everywhere. The industrialist grinds his teeth and remembers the French New Deal. While Germany was working her factories morning, noon and night, shift after shift, every worker catalogued, every worker driven, 30 per cent of the total energies of the nation—energy units, not money units—working every moment, every year, for arms, arms, arms, the French trade unions were demanding shorter days, slower work, higher pay, a "more abundant life." Where is the abundant life now? Where is any life?

Tomorrow they will work for Germany, under the German rules.

The workers' eyes blaze with fury. Didn't they promise us appeasement? All those people who had investments in Germany, who were in cartels with Germany? Weren't they kicking about taxes, trying to protect their money with one hand and France with the other? They made the diplomacy that got us into this. They declared we were "neutral" in Spain—and now the Spanish and the Germans have ganged up on us. They were so scared of the Reds that they made us break the Russian-Soviet pact. They gave the Czech guns away—to the Germans—to be used against us.

Our Allies let us down, they all scream together: Why didn't Britain have more divisions? Why wouldn't she introduce conscription? How about a government that was kissing Hitler up to the last minute . . . Wasn't that the British government? How about our politicians? Maneuvering among themselves as to which party and which individual would come out on top, right down to the last tragic minute.

And so thousands of them begin to say: "In the world in which we live the Nazis have proved that they are fit for survival. All we have said against the Nazis and thought was just words and thoughts."

Yes, this is happening in France, where hatred, exhausted outward, turns inward.

The lesson to be learned from this disaster is that defense begins internally and not with guns. It begins with unity. But unity must be mobilized around something concrete. It cannot be created by sermonizing about its virtues. People unite for a common purpose and for a common activity. You cannot, for instance, unite for a common grab except a common grab of some outsider's property. A common grab within is a contradiction in terms.

A defense program must be for defense of a policy and an objective. Otherwise the guns we forge may be used one of these days for purposes we who build them never dreamed. We speak of "defending the Western Hemisphere." But defending what Western Hemisphere? A political and economic policy, a philosophy of politics, must be created, in order that one may know what one is defending.

As things are now in the Western Hemisphere, it will be as difficult to defend it as it was for France and Britain to defend the separate states of Poland, Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium. Does anything really tie North and South America together except fear? That is a very weak foundation on which to build—fear. At present, the South American states are afraid of losing their European markets, and tomorrow many of them will be scrambling to switch into line with whatever policy Hitler wants.

The lesson of Europe is that a unity can be defended but not a political association that may at any moment dissolve by the mere change in a premier. The Balkan states were wedded to Germany not by loans, which can at any moment be repudiated by a sovereign state, but by the most intricate web of economics in terms of real things, not money. As it turns out Hitler is getting all the money that the British and French lent their allies. The Turks were and still are the allies of Great Britain. But their guns, even if paid for in English pounds, were purchased in the Skoda works, formerly belonging to Czecho-Slovakia and now in German hands, and the ammunition for those guns had to be purchased in Germany.

Germany created the real interests in the Balkans. The Allies created transitory political alliance and easily soluble financial dependencies.

THEREFORE, if we mean to defend Pan-America we must have a Pan-America. And that involves a very great and difficult program. The Europe that a victorious Hitler will create will be a European customs union, with a managed currency, and it is going to be very difficult to compete with in this world. We certainly cannot confront that system with anything less well welded together.

Pan-America means a customs and currency union and a common Army and Navy. It means a common economic policy toward the rest of the world. It means making our economies complementary rather than competitive. These things are possible, and not only possible but offer the only hope for the establishment in the Americas of a real "New World."

But such a program would mean being able to throw off our old habits of thinking. It would certainly mean that we must industrialize this country much more than it is industrialized at present and greatly increase its population by immigration. For we shall have to eat South American products, and there are not enough of us to eat them. We certainly are not going to be able to buy them and throw them in the ocean. You cannot go against nature like this.

We failed to make a system of collective political and economic security to protect the scheme of things that we had after the last war. This column has consistently maintained that it would be a thousand times easier to protect the European democracies, by all holding together, than to adjust ourselves to what would follow if they collapsed. But that is all water under bridges now, except for the last heroic stand of Britain with the aid of whatever we can send her. We should send her everything we have, because she is using her men and material against the only force on earth that threatens us from the Atlantic side.

But one must also have foresight to prepare for the eventuality that she loses the war as definitely as France has lost it. And that means complete United States isolation, in an extremely bad strategical position, with two oceans that are no defense at all unless one holds naval and air bases in them at strategical points, and with an extremely weak position in South America; or it means vigorous new Pan-American politics and economics that will be proof against everything because they are really mutually beneficial and bound by ties that cannot be dissolved by a mere change in ministries.

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

"Now here's a pair you can knock around in."

HARRY L. HOPKINS
He has been responsible, to a high degree for mobilizing some of the ablest men in the Nation in new defense organizations, says Ernest Lindley in his article today

Cabinet Role

By Ernest Lindley

"Fifth Leg On A Cow"

THE BALANCE of power within the Roosevelt Administration is shifting almost as rapidly as the balance of power in Europe. The Cabinet, never strong, has become collectively (to paraphrase slightly a comment of one of its members) about as important as a fifth leg on a cow. Some of the Cabinet members find out about important actions in the fields of foreign policy or national defense only when they read the papers.

Tommy Corcoran, once the No. 1 man of the inner circle of New Dealers, is scurrying around the edges. He has been absent from recent important conferences at the White House. As a gag, somebody started the story that Corcoran was so far "out" that he was offering his services as a brain-truster and political organizer to Wendell Willkie—on whom, in the past, he has lavished more epithets than on probably anyone else. Corcoran has been consigned to outer darkness before but has fought his way back into the fold. He has been helpful on useful, if secondary, jobs. But for the present he is like a former Chief of Staff who has been assigned to liaison work in a quiet area.

Next to the President, the two most important men in the Government now are Harry L. Hopkins and William Knudsen. Greatly improved in health, Hopkins has been living at the White House, and, in recent weeks, has been the President's most constant companion and adviser. A year and a half ago it was reported that the President had decided to make Hopkins the coordinator of the national defense program. Hopkins has not become that formally or, in fact, but he has been responsible, to a high degree, for the mobilizing of some of the ablest men in the nation in new defense organization.

KNUDSEN'S JOB is the other most important one because it is the most important in the defense set-up. When he was asked to take the job he requested and was promptly granted full power. Under the law, his authority—like that of most his colleagues—is vague. But as long as the President backs him, legal formalities are not vital. The armed services—in fact, the whole Government—knows that Knudsen has the right of way.

Edward Stettinius, in charge of raw materials buying, is a close second to Knudsen in importance. He, likewise, was promised full authority, and so far is exercising it.

For obvious political reasons, the President could not afford, even if he wished to do so, to revoke or curb the power he has promised to Knudsen and Stettinius. Neither of them would stand for serious interference. If both or either of them resigned, the blame almost certainly would be placed on the President.

In view of the caliber of his national defense organization it can no longer be charged that the President is unwilling to share his power with strong-willed men of topnotch ability.

Secretary Morgenthau has been working with quiet efficiency. The criticism, heard a few months ago, that he was trying to override the best judgments of our armed services in his eagerness to aid the Allies has largely subsided.

Secretary Hull is described by those who see him regularly as a stunned man. In this respect he may not be exceptional. But the terrible events abroad must fall especially heavily on Hull. They knock the bottom out of his golden dream of free-flowing international trade. The Administration is now turning to the plan, sketched previously in this column, for an all-American trading corporation or series of cartels to conduct the export and import business of all the nations of this hemisphere. Such an overall trading corporation for the hemisphere will be necessary, in all probability, if Germany wins the war or if the blockade of Germany and Italy is broken. Otherwise the individual nations of Latin America would be at a hopeless disadvantage in trading with Germany as the director of the trade of all of Europe. Inevitably most of them would become economic dependencies of a German-dominated Europe, and it would be extremely difficult to check Nazi-Fascist political penetration in Latin America. Such a method of trading is a complete repudiation of the Hull thesis. However, because of the friends he has made in Latin America, Hull can be useful in furthering this new trade policy if he can adjust his rigidly held and thoroughly unprophetic theories to the exigencies of the time.

ATTORNEY GENERAL Jackson has perhaps the toughest job in the Cabinet—to supervise the rooting out of fifth columnists while protecting the civil liberties guaranteed by the Constitution and without which we cease to be a democracy. Fortunately, he is unusually well fitted for this task. For he is tough and practical, but imbued with devotion to the fundamental rights pledged by the Constitution.

Secretary Wallace has been several years ahead of most of his Cabinet colleagues in his appreciation of the importance of developing north-south trade. He has taken the Western Hemisphere policy seriously enough to take the time to learn to speak Spanish. Back in 1933 and 1934 he was in close accord with Hull, but he was flexible and practicable enough to sense the trend of events while Hull was still fighting for what has turned out to be, for the present at least, a hopeless cause, the reconstruction of world trade on the midnineteenth century British model.

Other Cabinet members have gone about their appointed tasks. But as a body the Cabinet is rapidly being overshadowed by the national defense group. And, excepting Hopkins and Jackson, the New Dealers of the old inner circle have been squeezed to the fringes, where they watch apprehensively, sure neither of their own place nor of what the exigencies of national defense may do to their own dearly won and carefully nurtured plans for the economic and social improvement of American democracy.

Pall Of Darkness

By Barnet Nover

The Fall Of France

WHEN FRANCE under Marshal Petain sued for an armistice that event marked more than the end of a gigantic battle in a catastrophic war. It also marked the end of an epoch in European civilization.

France was practically the last free country on the Continent. There are none left there. One by one the lights have been extinguished. Now, except for the faint and dying glimmer emanating from Sweden and Switzerland, trapped nations both, the pall of darkness extends over the whole of that land mass from the Atlantic to Asia, from the Arctic to the Mediterranean.

THE SCROLL of history contains the names of many nations that fought and lost.

France, herself, can look back on other defeats, some even disastrous defeats. During the past century and a quarter, to go back no further, there was Waterloo and there was Sedan, the peace of Vienna and the peace of Frankfort. The first was a mild peace, even a generous peace. The second, by all standards, was a harsh, punitive peace. But neither the Congress of Vienna nor Bismarck laid violent hands on French civilization, on the French way of life.

So France remained French; in defeat as in victory it remained the land of light and reason, the only country other than China where culture had succeeded in becoming a well-rounded whole.

At the moment of writing the terms of peace which Hitler and Mussolini plan to impose on France have not yet been revealed. But the nature of that peace is foreshadowed by what happened in Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. It will be a peace in which, in addition to any territorial losses she may suffer, France will lose her freedom. And that, not only for France, but for the entire world, is the blackest part of the tragedy.

Henceforth, and until the moment of her ultimate liberation, France will be under the thumb of Hitler and ruled by him, whether directly by agents appointed from Berlin or by Frenchmen to whom will be intrusted the task of physical reconstruction. The France of the French Revolution, of liberty, equality and fraternity, the France which gave shelter to many generations of refugees from tyranny, the France that was part of the heritage of every civilized human being, that France is in total eclipse.

LET US MAKE no mistake about it. If Great Britain now also goes down and Hitler's triumph is complete it will mean far more than changes in boundary lines, far more than the fall of old and the rise of old empires, far more than a shift, however catastrophic, in the European and the world balance of power. It will mean in a very real sense the end of European civilization.

The progress of science during the last century and a half has confused our thinking as to the nature of that civilization which we share. We have come to think of it very largely, if not wholly, in mechanical terms. It has meant for us the steam engine and the radio and the multitudinous products of the factories and laboratories and the ease and comfort of living that has come in the wake of man's researches in the physical nature of things.

But this physical progress had no meaning without its spiritual counterpart. The people of the eighteenth century were just as civilized, if not more so, than the people of our time even though they lacked the comforts and conveniences available to us. It was only because we enjoyed and appreciated and carried on, according to our lights, the heritage handed down to us by the great spirits of other centuries, the heritage of Plato and Praxiteles, of Jesus and Michaelangelo, of Goethe and Shakespeare, of Jefferson and Lincoln and countless others that we had any right to call ourselves civilized. Science without soul, we have now discovered, is nothing more or less than a Frankenstein's monster, great only in its capacity for destruction.

FRANCE'S failing was the failing of all the democracies. She was civilized. She had put war and destruction behind her. She had made the comfort of the individual the goal of organized society.

What went on in Germany after 1933 was open for all to see. From the very outset Hitler made no disguise of his intent to force his entire nation into a military mold, to employ every device, every bit of energy for the achievement of one purpose and one purpose alone—success in war.

The French could not believe what they saw. Nor could the English. Nor could we. So excuses were found for inaction. There was the Versailles treaty. Perhaps it had been a bit too harsh, ergo, if its more drastic terms were modified Germany would settle down to becoming once again a decent member of international society. And when such self-deception became impossible it was by that time almost too late.

The mistakes of a decade are not overcome in a month or a year. As Jacques Maritain says in the current issue of the Commonweal:

"A will for peace, a will for human happiness, can only achieve the same level of efficiency as a will for mischief, absolute and unrestrained, if it takes to itself of the leaven of the superhuman virtues." But such superhuman virtues were lacking.

Democratic peoples are not geared for the kind of war which Hitler wages because, being democratic, they operate under the restraints of morality and decency and law. And every one of these instincts was turned against them, to encompass their destruction. The new system that now dominates the continent of Europe has no use for these restraints. It worships force and force alone and it regards everything that is the antithesis of force as its mortal enemy.

This state of mind is so monstrous that it is difficult for democratic peoples to grasp it. That, more than any other reason, is why France went under and why Belgium and the Netherlands and Norway and Denmark and the other victims of Hitler went under. For the American people the writing on the wall is too clear to be mistaken. But whether, after seven years of repeated warnings, we shall learn how to avoid the mistakes of our fellow democracies is by no means certain.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Paris Visitor

Hitler's come to Paris, he rides in glory there;
He makes his entrance merry as tourist at a fair
He swings along exultant, conceit in every breath—
And Paris grimly watches the Boulevardier of Death!

Beneath the Arc de Triomphe does Adolf gayly ride,
He waves his hand quite carefree, and fairly swells with pride.
He is the latest tourist within the city gate.
The visitor from Berlin, the Bon Vivant of Hate.

His chest is well expanded, he is a happy man,
For this, his trip to Paris, he had a careful plan
He hears no lovely music, no laughter well defined;
There's beauty there, but Hitler has other things in mind.

He rides with greed and envy the Champs Elysees grand,
And rides with smile triumphant —behind a German band!
He says, "So this is Paris!" with jeers and malice, too;
Of those who've ever done so, he is among the few.

He sees the graceful statues of Frenchmen great in wars,
This visitor who enters to even up old scores;
Derisive is his manner, contemptuous and rude . . .
It's years since any tourist arrived in such a mood!

Clemenceau from the shadows, and Joffre in the mists
Behold the latest tourist not on the tourist lists;
The tourist thinks he shows them the one great, final war—
But doesn't hear them whisper. "France has heard that before."

The towers and cathedrals of song and story fame
Look down upon the stranger: "A. Hitler" is the name:
From lovely, scented gardens the birds give music fair . . .
Theirs is the only laughter . . . They do not know who's there!

The shops are dark and lifeless, cafes are bleak and grim,
The parks hear no child's laughter, but from the shadows dim
The Voice of Paris whispers, "Bear up through all this pain! . . .
"As always, through the ages, we'll laugh and play again!"

Fair Enough

A Trojan Foal

WORD COMES that in Joseph Stalin's Moscow stables a Trojan foal has been born to his Trojan horse in the American Newspaper Guild.

The present Trojan plug is the New York Guild, which promotes the Communist party line at the political and economic expense of American newspaper workers in New York and other cities. This New York Communist cell dominates the national organization.

Since the first of the year the American members of the guild as distinguished from the Communists and fellow travelers, have organized local rebellions in New York, Washington and Seattle. These rebellious, patriotic groups appear not to be organized into a unit, but are united in spirit and motives in their opposition to the Communist-controlled minority.

The New York anti-Communists call themselves the progressives, and they have been turning out, at their private expense, a publication identifying some of the Communists and revealing the cunning of the Moscow system of rigging elections.

The Communists attempted to discredit the New York progressives with the old reliable charge of red-baiting, but failed to silence them. On the contrary, the opposition and resentment have been growing, but with the faithful, Stalinist Guild of Los Angeles supporting their Communist comrades in New York. The Los Angeles Guild is notoriously communistic.

FINALLY, on June 1, the Guild Reporter, which has been consistently and abusively Communistic and the mouthpiece of the controlling group in its propaganda against the American element, was forced to admit the existence of their rebellion. But instead of emphasizing the opposition of the anti-Communist or patriotic newspaper workers, the Guild Reporter tried to make the guild members believe that the principal opposition came from a group centered in Philadelphia which includes a number of diligent guild politicians who have never objected to Communist control.

The Philadelphia rebel group, led by Max Ways, issued a long statement of the reasons for its rebellion against the New York rulers of the guild which, on superficial reading, might deceive the anti-Communist majority. However, on careful inspection it is observed that the Philadelphia or Max Ways rebels do not object to the pursuit of the Communist party line. On the contrary, the statement of its position says:

"There is nothing wrong with the fundamental guild policies. Many of those who sign this statement had quite as much to do with the establishment of those policies as did the individuals who now compose the paid leadership."

THE FUNDAMENTAL policies are not stated in this document, but the policies to which the American rebel groups have objected were sympathetic with the Moscow line.

In other words the Communist Trojan horse has produced another Trojan horse to confuse the American opposition and capture the political strength lost by the old red mare in the national convention in Memphis in July.

Ways' political sympathies are not stated beyond the admission that his group has no objection to the fundamental guild policies, but, as he says, some of his helpers in the attempt to confuse the issue and scatter the opposition had much to do with the establishment of those policies.

THE EFFECT of this is that the anti-Communists are likely to believe, unless they carefully study the position of the Ways group, that this antibody represents the real rebellion against Communist control. In that event if the New York Communists were turned out they might be succeeded in equal or greater power by another national management differing only in personnel and in minor international issues. Moscow still runs the American Newspaper Guild.

The progressive, or American rebellion is directed against communism in the control and policies of an organization which is trying to obtain the power of censorship over the entire American press. Communism is the big issue with them. The Ways group, which is played up in the Guild Reporter as the big opposition, is not opposed to Communist control or Communist policies.

Anglo-Saxons at War With Most Of World, Fascist Press Declares

Italy Awaits Word Of Peace Terms From Duce, Hitler

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, June 18.—While Italy impatiently waited tonight the results of the Munich meeting of Fuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini, it was being made clear to the people that the war is not over, for Britain is fighting on and behind Britain stands the United States.

Virginio Gayda, in an important editorial in the Giornale D'Italia, goes so far as to call the new phase of the conflict "an Anglo-Saxon war."

No one here is even trying to guess what Italy is going to get out of France, for it is not known whether the French are willing to surrender their fleet and air force, and whether their empire will go on fighting. Indeed, the possibility of a refusal to accept a demand for more or less unconditional surrender is foreseen, and it is understood here that orders have already been given for a final joint drive, if necessary, in which the Italians will at last attack across the French frontier.

Italians are placing their faith in Hitler's reported prediction that by August 15 Britain would have been conquered.

Mediterranean Quiet

Prime Minister Churchill spoke solely of defending the British Isles, which Italians feel will make the Italian task of striking at British African and Mediterranean possessions less difficult.

Meanwhile, there is quiet on the Mediterranean front. Italians yesterday bombed the French naval base of Bizerte in Tunisia and other objectives in Malta, Corsica and Sudan, according to today's bulletin. On the Allied part, there is mention merely of "aerial incursion" in Africa and over some Italian cities.

Milan was bombed the night before last, and it is claimed that a convent and other houses were damaged but no military objectives were hit. Genoa was bombed last night as well as other northern cities. It could not be said whether the planes were British or French.

France Called Wiped Out

All newspapers in their banner headlines, speak of the two dictators laying foundation at Munich for "a new Europe." All sources agree that the France which the world has known and admired for its democratic institutions, its tolerance, civilization and culture will be wiped out forever.

There is still talk of Premier Mussolini having demanded Corsica, Nice, Tunisia and Djibouti, but no one really knows the terms tonight.

Economic conversations between Italy and Germany, which, it is now learned, has been going on for several days, were concluded today. Dr. Karl Clodius, Germany's chief economic adviser, had several meetings with Italian economic experts, during which several matters affecting the two countries were discussed.

The commercial conversations, it is stated in German quarters, have had as one of their objectives the coordination of the raw material resources of the two countries, under the changed circumstance of Italian belligerency.

Decide The Fate Of France

AXIS PARTNERS IN BREAKING FRANCE—Church bells rang and Munich Nazis cried out their "Heils," as Adolf Hitler (right) and Benito Mussolini paraded to the Fuehrerhaus, where they agreed on terms under which they propose to grant peace to France. With all the pomp of a present-day Napoleon, Der Fuehrer saluted almost continuously, standing in the car as it moved slowly past the throngs. (Photo radioed yesterday from Berlin.)

U. S. to Let Allies Have Speedboats detection devices and antisubmarine guns.

The Navy, Compton explained, had contracted for 12 of each type of these destructive speedsters, and had actually received one of the boats. It planned, he said to keep two of each under this now-altered order, after permitting the company to deliver the other twenty to the British government.

The deal, he insisted, was in line with the Government's policy under which manufacturers making defense planes under contract with the United States Government were allowed to sell these craft to Great Britain and France with the understanding that the American order would be filled later with better aircraft. It is the company, not the Government, that is selling the "sea whippets" to Great Britain, he made clear.

Rapid deliveries of the boats had been expected to begin next month. That was taken to mean that a considerable number of the boats were nearing completion and that the British wanted them for that reason.

As the 24-boat experimental program nears completion, Compton was convinced, the builders have acquired sufficient experience to make it possible to produce this type of craft faster than warplanes are now being turned out.

Apparently taking into consideration that point, Compton estimated that the release of the unfinished boats for delivery to the British would not delay the delivery of the 24 originally ordered by the United States Navy by more than six months.

Moreover, the acting secretary pointed out that improvements already had been indicated by the experience thus far attained in the construction of the experimental "mosquito" fleet. The motor torpedo boats, he disclosed, were originally designed to carry 18-inch torpedoes. The United States has one of these, but its standard torpedo is a 21-inch seagoing bomb. The boats to be obtained under the deferred-delivery plan, he said, would be adjusted to this standard.

It is understood that considerable pressure was put on the Navy to sell some of its old destroyers, but the high naval command was against this and it was dropped. Secretary Morgenthau was again referred to as the person most active in this direction.

When the Senate Naval Affairs Commitee learned that the Navy had been negotiating for the sale of certain craft there was a discussion as to whether or not Senator Walsh should go to the President and seek confirmation. Senator Walsh is understood to have argued that if he did so the President might tie his hands. He then decided to write a letter of inquiry to the White House.

In the meantime, Compton called Senator Walsh and imparted the information that no destroyers were being sold but that light surface craft were being disposed of. He was asked to come before the committee. He did so last Friday morning in a secret session.

No figures on the money involved in the sale are available.

Germans Raid English Coast

The British Press Association said that the bombs dropped on the Thames—bottleneck of British shipping—exploded harmlessly in marshes.

Bomb-roused sleepers in Essex cheered hoarsely as one German raider was shot down and burst into flames near a main highway.

Another bomber was sent crashing into wreckage in Norfolk. Up and down the coast searchlights, antiaircraft fire, the thud of bombs and the roar of planes made the night bright and noisy with the fight.

A third Nazi bomber was shot down in Cambridgeshire and a fourth was seen to burst into flames and fall into the sea just off the coast.

The defensive barrage on the southeast coast was described as the "most terrific ever seen in this area," with the Germans driven off time and again.

The raiders came over Yorkshire in five waves over a period of four hours, but in that section appeared to be on scouting missions, since no bombs were dropped.

Raid warnings lasted for nearly four hours at some east coast centers, and dawn was breaking as people streamed out of shelters.

There were indications that the Royal Air Force might have struck an almost simultaneous blow at Germany.

British sources said the Bremen and Hamburg radio stations were suddenly silenced last night—a precaution usually taken to prevent raiding planes from "riding the beam" to an objective.

Britain Is Ready, Churchill Says

a dread balance sheet."

Tonight, after visiting King George VI, Churchill repeated the main points of his speech in a broadcast which was relayed to the United States.

With supreme sureness he proclaimed the beginning of "the battle of Britain."

He counted off Britain's men under arms: More than 1,250,000 regulars, 500,000 local defense volunteers; Canadian armies on England's soil.

Navy Counts, Too

He said the navy could drown an invading force in the Channel or blow it to pieces as it tried to land.

He exulted in the remaining, if outnumbered, strength of the British air force; disclosed the "painful decision" to withhold Britain's full metropolitan fighting plane strength from France and added:

"We are now assured of immense continued and increased support in munitions of all kinds from the United States and especially of airplanes and pilots from across the ocean."

He concluded:

"Let us brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men still will say: 'This was their finest hour.'"

As for Mussolini, Churchill dismissed him with a taunt:

"We are told," he said, "that the Italian navy is coming to gain sea superiority in these waters . . . If that is seriously intended, I can only say we shall be delighted to offer Mussolini free, safe-guarded passage through the Straits of Gibraltar, in order that he may play the part he aspires to do . . ."

R. A. F. Attacks Widely

London, June 18.—With elimination of the necessity of supporting the armies in France, the Royal Air Force last night carried out the greatest bombing raids they have yet made. According to the air ministry bombers attacked military objectives at Gelsenkirchen, Homburg, Wanne, Eickel, Essen, Dollbergen, Hamburg, Aachen, Duisberg, Rheydt, Cologne and Coblenz.

Additional British bombers descended on three airfields where German night flying was in progress, one at Barmen and another at Schipol, near Amsterdam. The third was not specified. "From all these extensive operations two of our aircraft are missing," the air ministry said.

The raids into Germany again centered on oil tanks. A series of attacks lasting three hours were launched with explosive incendiary bombs on Homburg, Wanne, Eickel and Gelsenkirchen. Many fires were started, culminating, according to the pilots' reports, in one big one which burned 20 minutes then died away leaving a smoke column 2,000 feet high.

Oil storage tanks were attacked at Dollbergen, east of Hanover, and also at Hamburg early this morning. The first wave of bombers dropped incendiary bombs and started fires which succeeding waves picked up 35 miles away.

A blaze also was started at Hamburg, where the pilots reported the bombs hit one of the largest oil storage plants in northwest Germany.

Other airforce activities also were reported. A German destroyer was bombed off the Frisian Islands; three Spitfires last evening met three Junkers-88 dive-bombers between Boulogne and Letouquet, got two and silenced the rear gun of the third, and a Blenheim fighter on his way home from France saw a Heinkel seaplane below him and diving 9,000 feet he shot the German down after a 10-mile chase.

this holocaust of hell. We have no place there."

McCarran previously had accused the President of utterances that had stirred up unnecesary hatred for this country.

He declared the United States was facing an emergency—"an emergency which was created, I am sorry to say, by some expressions which were uttered by the head of this Government not very long ago, which aroused the hatred of foreign countries at war." Hence, he said, "everything possible may be done to throw us over the precipice into war."

"It was an unfortunate thing, an unhappy event," he continued. "I think that is recognized throughout the length and breadth of America today."

While McCarran did not list the remarks to which he referred, the President had said in his Charlottesville, Va., address on the day Italy entered the war that "the hand that held the dagger has struck it into the back of its neighbor."

Meanwhile, the "mercy ship" that has become the center of official fears, the S. S. McKeesport, was steaming eastward with a $500,000 Red Cross cargo of food and medical supplies. It was intended for her to proceed to Bordeaux, France. When it developed that Germany and Italy had not granted safe conduct, presumably because the ship carries supplies officially listed as contraband, her destination was changed to Bilbao, Spain, and the move was initiated to amend the neutrality act to permit the ship entering the combat zone.

"There is no reason to doubt that after crushing France all measures are being pursued by the Germans in order to apply all available military weapons of force against England—originally designated as the main enemy."

Allied Ships Raided

The German air force likewise has been busy, claiming its biggest success to date in a raid on a concentration of Allied shipping in the Loire Estuary (natural embarkation point for the second British expeditionary force).

The high command listed nine big transports, totaling 160,000 tons, and a number of warships and smaller merchantmen as hit. Although the command gave no figures for the total tonnage sunk or affected, authorized sources estimated that more than 800,000 tons were "damaged or sunk."

Hitler and Duce Forward Terms

They review an honor guard briefly and then, each in his own automobile, moved away in a parade, Hitler going on to the Fuehserhaus and Mussolini to the Prinz Karl Palace to rest briefly.

Less than an hour later, Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, called at the Palace for the Italian head of the axis and they drove together to Hitler's house.

The crowd roared "Heil! Heil Duce!" Mussolini himself smiled this time.

Arrived at the Fuehrerhaus, he was met at the gates by Hitler and then taken into the study where two men fell to discussing what was to happen to the Republic of France.

Ringside Table

SHOREHAM GOES RINGLING. A full-fledged dog-and-pony show (plus a monkey) is currently cavorting on the Shoreham Terrace. There are four ponies, five dogs and the aforesaid monkey. The act is called Gautier's Novel Steeplechase and, with a couple of hedges and water jumps, would amount to a night spot Grand National. Both the dogs and monkey figure as jockeys, with br'er Monk coming out as the Sande of the group. The act is one of the most refreshing and amusing yet brought to the Terrace by Max Lowe . . . Dancers Vorina and St. Clair and Day provide Russian and Parisian angles.

LITTLE JACK LITTLE, now holding forth in the Metronome Room, is a Britisher by birth but was graduated in medicine from Iowa State University. Like most of today's big bandsmen, he formed a successful band during his college days. When the time arrived for him to don an interne's coat, he decided he'd rather ride a piano bench than an ambulance.

TONIGHT'S STAR PARTY will be the "summer opening" of the Lounge Riviera, featuring the Washington debut of Harriet Derck, song stylist. Like many another brilliant entertainer, Harriet hails from Indiana. But she's an alumnus of Ohio State University, has sung via WOWO and C. B. S., also worked on a New York newspaper in a hectic interval. She comes to our town direct from the Providence-Biltmore, Providence R. I. Besides being pretty in the 1940 fashion (see pic above) Harriet is regarded as a sure-fire comer in the singing picture . . . Lounge Riviera is being completely redecorated today. You'll hardly recognize it tonight.

HI HATTING. Looks like aviation afternoon in Hi Hat. There's LaVerne Brown, the transport pilot, and in another corner is Amateur Pilot "Mac" McGarvie . . . Air-cooled mint juleps . . . Ray Burch, Oscar's astounding assistant, confides that he's part Cherokee Indian. That explains a lot of things.

POLISH JITTERBUGS. They call it a "Polish Polka" that the Rossilianos are doing at the Lotus this week. But it has the speed of first-class jitterbugging and is 100 times more graceful. All ickies should take a look at it . . . The Manhattanettes continue to trip as rumbaettes, Highland flingettes and butterflyettes. They're so cunning that they'll be held over next week, plus new Manhattan principals . . . Bill Strickland is now a bachelor, but very temporarily.

Don't let Denture Breath and stains shout "False Teeth"

KEEP PLATES LIKE NEW WITH POLIDENT

A thin dark film collects on plates and bridges. This film soaks up odors and impurities like a sponge! It holds germs and decay bacteria . . . gets into every tiny crevice where brushing can't even reach. And it's so tough that ordinary brushing seldom removes it.

Almost always it results in "denture breath" — probably the most offensive of all breath odors.

Yet there's a perfect way to clean and purify false teeth without brushing, acid or danger. It is Polident, a powder that dissolves away all scum, stains, tarnish and odor.

Polident makes breath sweeter—plates or bridges look better and feel better. Tens of thousands call Polident a blessing for comfort, convenience and hygiene.

Long-lasting can only 30¢, any drug store. Money back if not delighted. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and dentists everywhere. Hudson Products, Inc., New York, N. Y.

POLIDENT

Cleans, Purifies Without Brushing!

Do this daily: Add a little Polident powder to ½ glass water. Stir. Then put in plate or bridge for 10 to 15 minutes. Rinse—and it's ready to use.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Lovely Arms One Result Of Exercise

Indian Clubs Plus Determination Good Beauty Aid

By Ida Jean Kain

IN DEALING with the age tattlers, it is all too easy to overlook the upper arms . . . but, as the years flit by, they tend to become either hammy or stringy. It is hard to say which looks worse or adds more to the apparent age!

The arms shouldn't age as quickly as they do, but we are built wrong for the kind of work that falls to the average woman's lot. The triceps, located on the backs of the upper arms, are scarcely touched by such household tasks as dishwashing, straightening-up, etc. Investigate for yourself: With one hand, lift a vase or some other fairly heavy object from a table. As you do so, use the other hand to discover which muscles do the lifting. You will find it is done almost entirely by the biceps on the forearm and the front of the upper arm!

When you feel the backs of the upper arms, you will notice that these muscles are relaxed. And if you were to carry the experiment through to other tasks, you would be amazed at how little your work affects these out-of-the-way muscles.

Triceps Need Special Exercise

Apparently, it was intended that the human race should swing from limb to limb through the treetops, for the triceps are affected most by reaching, hanging and thrusting movements. If the arms are to be kept firm and lovely, special exercises are a necessity.

Here is a good one:

POSITION: Stand erect with the arms held straight out from the shoulders at the sides, fists clenched.

MOVEMENT: Using the arm muscles at the shoulders, make small backward circles. Circle 12 times, rest, and repeat. This backward circling not only works the triceps but also helps to correct rounded shoulders.

Another good exercise is:

POSITION: Stand erect and grasp an Indian club or dumbbell in each hand.

MOVEMENT: Swing the arms down and across in front of the body. Then, without interrupting the swing, move the arms out and up at the sides about the shoulder level, then back down, crossing in front. Keep it up! Make the movement free and rhythmical. After you have gotten into the swing, rise on the toes with the outward fling of the clubs to give yourself an extra lift.

Equipment Useless Without Work

Clubs or dumbbells are inexpensive and well worth the price—provided, of course, you make use of them! Possessing exercise equipment is like knowing a good exercise. It's worthless unless you make use of it! This area through the upper arms and shoulders is entirely dependent on your planned exercise program.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Planning to Wed in Defiance of Mother's Threat Of Disinheritance, Boy, 19, Asks Whether to Tell Her Before or After Marriage Takes Place

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a boy of 19 and for three years I have known and loved a girl the same age, to whom my mother greatly objects. We haven't seen each other much during the past year, as she has been living in South Carolina, but she is coming to Washington in a few days and we are planning to get married.

The question is, shall I tell mother before or after the marriage? If I tell her before, she will do all in her power to prevent it. Afterward, there is nothing she could do. She has threatened me with complete disinheritance if ever I marry this girl, who is as nice as they come, I know, because I know a lot about her. We never have gone any further than kissing when together.

My parents have a fairly large business here (which my sister and I are to take over when I am 21) and they have always given me everything I wanted. They have just bought me a new car, but I would be more than willing to give up the car and the business proposition, in exchange for the girl I love.

In the three years we have known each other, I have gone with many other girls, and none of them can compare with her. Mother has gotten me dates with girls whom she likes and wants me to go with. I went with them to please her, but I didn't think a thing of the girls themselves.

Several times mother has made me stop writing to this girl. Each time, I obeyed her order, thinking that she must know best. But always, I would start writing again in a few weeks. I have the girl send her letters to me through a friend, as mother opens and keeps any letters she addresses to me at my home.

I have enough money saved from three years of work to give us a fair start in life. And while the girl knows how my mother feels, still she is willing to marry me anyway. Do you think, all things considered, that we would be making a mistake? Do you think we should wait a while longer? Please answer at once, as the girl is arriving this week. Yours truly, CHARLES E. B.

Let Marriage Await The Proper Season

DEAR C. E. B.: The quality of your devotion to this girl suggests that marriage—at the proper age—would be the natural and happy denouement; and this being so, it is most unfortunate that your mother is (apparently) so unreasoningly opposed to her. Her hard determination to abort the relationship is threatening to force its bloom, prematurely. And this is a danger you must guard against, since she lacks the wisdom to see it.

With a mother's intuition, I suppose she realized almost from the outset of your association with the girl that this was no casual romance. I suppose she has worried about—and, in her blundering way, striven to prevent—the possibility of an impetuous elopement such as you are now planning. But the exercise of sympathy and loving-kindness on her part would have been far more effective in keeping you youngsters on parental leash, until you had achieved that maturity of mind, body and spirit so essential for marrying judiciously, under favorable auspices which would insure permanency.

I do not hold parental blessing to be indispensable to happy marriage. But I must warn you that those who would make a good marriage have need to enter the contract with a clear understanding of its serious import; and with the proven ability to carry adult responsibilities in an adult way.

The proverb, "Marry in haste and repent at leisure," applies to those who witlessly seize upon marriage as a medium of sensual gratification, completely overlooking the fact that it is one of the most awesome and complicated social partnerships known to mankind. It is a partnership which requires, for full happiness, the greatest investment a human being can make; namely, himself and all that he possesses or hopes to acquire. And it requires more than that; namely, the purpose and capacity to abide by the contract selflessly, through lean years of discouragement if such should come.

It is not a contract for children, obviously, nor for untried adolescents, who have no means of knowing what form their mature aspirations and abilities will take; nor is is a contract for heedless, headstrong, selfish persons to play with.

Therefore, in the light of the briefest preliminary considerations, I think you WOULD be making a mistake in eloping this week. I think you should, indeed, "wait a while longer"—which is to say, at least two years, but preferably four. Neither the average man nor the average girl is ready—mentally, psychologically or socially—for marriage until about the age of 23.

Don't be discouraged by the prospect of five years' waiting. Your marriage stands a better than average chance of being successful if your courtship lasts from three to five years—or so the experts tell us. This was one of many interesting conclusions developed from a seven years' study of 526 marriages, made by Dr. Leonard S. Cottrell, jr., of Cornell University, and Prof. Ernest Watson Burgess, of the University of Chicago.

It also helps, they tell us, to be married in church—which is a far cry from an elopement. And for a woman, matrimony is more likely to be successful if she works before marriage. So wait, and give your sweetheart a chance to try her wings, to "find" herself in relation to the economic order of things, before writing "finis" to the book of her girlhood.

If you cannot support the strain of profitable waiting, it is doubtful if you could sustain the incalculably greater stresses, of one kind and another, that marriage inevitably imposes. It is to be regretted that your parents always have given you everything you want, since this lifelong indulgence unquestionably makes it doubly hard for you to deny yourself something infinitely desirable now—which they don't approve and which you feel you could have for the simple taking. But no one can wreck one's life but one's self, and it behooves you to take the long-range view in this matter and discipline yourself accordingly. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

U. S. Must Produce Wartime Fashions

New York (AP).—An understudy can't help being glad when the star gets sick and gives her a chance to perform.

It's that way with the American fashion industry. However much it may sympathize with Europe, there's no denying the war is going to give it its big chance and it's glad.

If America wants wartime fashion, she'll have to produce it for herself. This may mean the end of French leadership.

Smart Travellers Carry One Bag Each

For traveling light, yet toting clothes enough to meet any occasion, the luggage above is recommended. Capacious, lightweight, made of striped canvas and equipped with sturdy handles, these smart new carry-alls were invented by a well-known trunk designer. The gentleman's number carries two complete outfits—giving him three in all. What man wants more? The lady's bag holds eight dresses, and an accessory number of shoes and hats.

Look to Locks, Fabric, Stitching When Buying Bridal Luggage

Five-Point Inspection Program Recommended For Those Who Want Their Money's Worth

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

ALMOST as bewildering to the June bride as her trousseau selection is the purchase of going-away luggage. National luggage week, now in progress, brings to life first-aid rules for both bride, bridegroom, and vacationers. These hints come from knowing luggage experts and do much to erase that helplessness which overtakes the most sophisticated purchaser when confronted with row on row of bags, trunks and travel cases. Here is a five-point purchasing code to keep in mind.

Marshall Adams

CODE 1—After stealing yourself to buy only leather goods which will be really used, not hidden off in dark closets for termites to get at, carefully compare outside leathers or fabrics. Simple fabric patterns of quiet smartness wear on the nerves better than multi-colored muslines slicked up with glossy lacquers or imitation hides which look well on a shopkeeper's shelf but unhappy in a shower of rain.

Scrutinize Stitching

CODE 2—Observe all details of stitching, hand sewing or even machine saddle stitching at all points of stress. Durable luggage features soundly waxed braided thread of six cords or more, but since most of us don't know twine from thread, ask a competent clerk whether un-treated cotton has been used. Beware of this as flimsy threads break under the slightest pressure.

CODE 3—Consider handles carefully as they are of prime importance, regardless of the length of a honeymoon or vacation trip. Sturdy handles have been scaled to fit beauty kits and even the smallest bag so as to give the same long wear as handles used on man-sized trunks.

Brass Locks Best

CODE 4—Look to the locks. Never be swayed by steel or iron locks as they will rust unless backed up with foundations of solid brass or cast bronze. Brass, given a face-lifting of polished nickel or gold finish, will hold up in either very hot or cold climates.

CODE 5—Compare detail work of linings—giving your choice to a stout linen lining in place of gaudier rayon linings which have little durability. If a lining is marked "Silk" be sure it is colorfast, that pockets are secured at the top with spring wires (not elastic as that rots in a short space of time) and that all extra pocket or flap conveniences are securely taped to prevent being torn or ripped in hasty departures.

Home Economics Expert Suggests Healthful Salads

"NEIGHBORS" is the general theme of the Rural Congress which is being held this week at Maryland University for women from all parts of Maryland. Besides suggesting ways to be "good neighbors," many helpful suggestions are being given on the preparation of appetizing foods.

Miss Claribel Welsh, Head of Department of Foods and Nutrition, College of Home Economics, encourages wider use of salads in the diet because of their food value. Among the salad dressing recipes given by Miss Welsh were two that I think are especially appropriate for use in summer cookery.

Cooked Salad Dressing

Beat the yolks of 3 eggs slightly, add 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, shake of cayenne or paprika and 1 teaspoon mustard. Stir until smooth. Gradually stir in ½ cup vinegar. Cook 6 to 8 minutes, over low heat or for 15 minutes in double boiler. Add 1 tablespoon butter just before removing from fire. Olive oil may be used in place of butter. Before being added to the salad it should be thinned with either sweet or sour cream, or whipped cream.

Cream Salad Dressing

Beat ½ pint sour cream with egg beater until smooth, thick and light. Mix together 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 scant tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and 1 tablespoon mixed mustard. Add gradually to the cream, beating all the while. This dressing may be modified to suit different vegetables. Using the sour cream for the foundation, the seasoning may be anything desired. The mustard and lemon may be omitted and the dressing seasoned highly with catsup. If sweet cream is used instead of sour, it should be quite thick.

Mild Tubbing Adds Life to Fine Quilts

Elderdown quilts are warm enough to be used all winter and light-weight enough to do duty throughout the summer when an extra throw is needed on cool nights. Don't expect them to make the transition from one season to another without washing, however.

enough mild soap to make a generous billowy lather. Souse the quilt in the suds, wash it with a gentle kneading motion, then whip up a fresh batch and wash it a second time. Rinsing should be done at least three times in water of the same lukewarm temperature as the wash water.

The Little Church Around the Corner Does Rushing June Business as Usual

New York, June 19.

TRAMP, TRAMP, tramp the brides are marching, for better for worse, for richer for poorer. Our famous Little Church Around the Corner, that haven of peace and beauty just off Fifth Avenue, is doing its usual enormous June business, with Dr. Ray or his curate, young Father Lemoine, at the brides' altar practically all day, and the verger brooming up the rice.

ALICE HUGHES

Fifty years ago the Little Church was high society, when the top hats clung about Madison Square. Today it is everyone's church, with its thousands of bridal couples hailing from all over the Nation, though many an old parishoner sends her son or her daughter down to be spliced at this beautiful and romantic fane. Dr. Ray is very strict, giving all candidates for the holy estate the third degree.

Far out on Long Island stands a small, 200-seat church here uppity weddings have moved, especially in this month of matrimony. It is called St. John's of Rattingtown, and is a new-world carbon copy of a fine type of English village church. Its rector is the Right Rev. Frank DuMoulin, a French Canadian who was assistant Bishop of Ohio when Hall was a boy in Cleveland. He spends the evening of his life in this small parish. The June weddings out there are super-terrific.

Neighbor J. P. Morgan is senior warden, and passes the plate on Sundays, and when his granddaughter, Louise Morgan, was married at St. John's, Morgan hired one guard for every newspaperman to bar snaps at the happy couple. But give me the dim, warm, welcoming Little Church on Twenty-ninth street, where rich and poor from everywhere come to take those fateful vows in June.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Yesterday I sat next to the Grand Duchess Marie of the Russia that was, at a fancy shoe-showing. She knitted as the models passed in review, hands busy as other feet went by. Marie is a trouper now, barnstorming the Nation four times a year, six weeks at a clip, appearing at the stores which peddle the mature women's clothes she sponsors. She hates the life, hotels and trains, and though she aches to do social betterment things, she has to make a living. This woman is one of the few credits we have among noble exiles. She's a top-ranker, with none of the pretentious boloney which characterizes so many fancy phonies. She's warm and friendly, for she has lived and suffered and worked long enough to have developed a real philosophy of genuine simplicity . . .

The other day I tried to find, of all things, a gold toothpick, and don't ask me why. I keep my pals' secrets. The great house of Tiffany snooted me down, saying that it not only didn't carry this historic item, but thought there might be a law against such as unsanitary. I finally found one, but the things are harder to find than the cerise-tufted goofus bird.

A big local dental college graduated 120 the other day—including one girl, Lucille Russo. How nice to hear a gentle, womanly voice say the fatal words, "Open, please!"

Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, queen of the Belmont Park horse park and spouse of the millionaire horseman, always dresses smartly. I saw her at the track wearing a beautifully cut wool coat, sand-colored, with shoulders and pockets done Tyrolean. Her hat was a big nosegay of white and purple flowers. Alfy picked a dandy when he chose this California girl to be his life-partner in the racing world.

Mariana Mears Evans Makes Her Bow at Outstanding Party

Official, Residential and Even Diplomatic Circles Turn Out in Large Numbers For Gala Event of Record-Breaking Season

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ONE OF THE LARGEST and most outstanding debuts of a record-breaking season took place yesterday afternoon when Miss Mariana Mears Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., made her bow to Washington society. The Chevy Chase Club from 4 to 7:30 p. m. was the scene of the gala event which drew a topflight gathering of notables from official, diplomatic and residential circles.

The last debutante party scheduled on Washington's June calendar, the fete chalked up signal honors on countless scores. More high ranking Government officials and educational and civic leaders than I have seen under one roof this season turned out to pay tribute to the popular and pretty daughter of one of Washington's most popular couples.

Diplomats who have put in rare social appearances in recent months mingled with cave-dwelling Washingtonians in droves. Old Dealers and New Dealers brushed shoulders, hailed each other affectionately, and forgot their political differences in enjoying together the pleasant party. Men and women who have known Mr. and Mrs. Evans for a quarter of a century called each other by first names and commented on the beauty of the Mariana Evans whom they have watched grow up from her babyhood days.

"This is Washington—the real Washington," commented one cave-dwelling guest who proudly surveyed the distinguished throng. He added that he had known Jessie and Josh Evans for years and could remember when Mariana was learning to walk. He went on to say that the party was exactly the type of debut he would expect in a leading family so closely allied "with everything that makes the town's wheels go around."

Father Is Not 'Forgotten Man'

At his daughter's special request, Mr. Evans was not the wandering father, the forgotten man, at her debut. Instead, he stood in the receiving line beside the debutante. The latter's blond loveliness was attractively enhanced by her frock of white chiffon simply cut with puffed sleeves and a full skirt. Her only ornaments were a pair of old gold bracelets, with quaint clasps and fragile chain fastenings which belonged to the grandmother whose namesake she is. The debutante's old-fashioned bouquet of pastel blossoms was the gift of close family friends, Mr. and Mrs. George Murray, of Montclair, N. J.

Mrs. Evans was gowned in orchid gray chiffon, fashioned with lace inserts, and she wore a picture hat, trimmed in orchid tones, and an amethyst brooch and pendant.

The receiving trio greeted the long line of guests in the mammoth drawing room. Towering baskets of flowers sent to the debutante were attractively arranged around the room and bouquets of every shade and description screened the fireplace, before which Miss Evans and her parents stood.

Dancing on the terrace was the featured entertainment for the younger set, while other guests wandered across the greasy lawn where tables were set up beneath the trees.

Philip Evans Dances With Deb

Philip Evans, the debutante's tall, blond brother with whose return from his graduation at Sewanee University the debut date coincided, was a host all on his own. Here, there and everywhere, he was greeting guests and helping to see that one and all had a good time. Now and then he took his stand by Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who kept a watchful eye on the dance floor to see that the young people from out of town had a chance to meet and dance with the younger-set Washingtonians.

In the late afternoon the debutante of the day made her first appearance on the dance floor with her father, whom she resembles and with whom she especially likes to waltz. As soon as the two appeared, Sidney's Orchestra struck up the familiar strains of Strauss' "Great Waltz," and Mariana and her father had a "no cut" dance until Mr. Evans surrendered his daughter to her brother, Phil, the third of this trio of waltzing devotees.

Just as the throng of guests was representative of official and residential Washington, so was the list of ladies who presided at the tea table. In the group were Senora de Espil, Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. Edwin C. Graham, Mrs. Maurice H. Avery, Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett, Mrs. A. Kent Balls, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. David McCoach, Mrs. Benjamin McKelway, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, Miss Jessie Ditto, Mrs. Arthur Day, Mrs. Louis A. Fischer, Mrs. Chester C. Wells, Mrs. Frederick Rittenour, Mrs. Merle Thorpe.

Still others who took turns at pouring were Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Mrs. Walter A. Bioedorn, Mrs. H. Warren Smith, Miss Bessie Schermerhorn, Mrs. Harry Wheeler, Mrs. Henry R. Gower, Mrs. Mabel Wilker Willebrandt, Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer, Mrs. William B. Marbury and Mrs. Joseph Himes. Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin and Mrs. Charles Tompkins were in charge of those assisting.

Former Classmates Assist Debutante

Among the debutante's assistants were former classmates at Madeira and Ward-Belmont Preparatory School, from which she was graduated early this month. In the group were Miss Elaine Darlington, who will make her own bow to society on June 22 at the Long Island residence of her aunt, Mrs. Livingston Clarkson; Miss Elysabeth Barbour, Miss Ruth Meyer, Miss Laura Blair, Miss Anne Bryan, Miss Lucy Claggett, Miss Catherine Clement, Miss Margaret Walker, Miss Jacqueline de Sieyes, Miss Eileen Erwin, Miss Joan Dodd, Miss Cynthia Dunn, Miss Elizabeth Fish, Miss Georgianna Flather, Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Beth Holcomb, of Charleston, W. Va.; Miss Margaret Houghteling, Miss Marie Packey, of Richmond, Ind.; Miss Deborah Kirk, Miss Lucy Marbury, Miss Patricia McKnew, Miss Agnes Birney and Miss Mary Lord Andrews.

Several Relatives In House Party

Mrs. Carroll Morgan was in charge of the punch bowls at which presided a group of friends of the debutante's elder brother, Joshua Evans 3d. In this contingent were Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. Andrew Parker, Mrs. Francis Tompkins, Miss Emily Davis, Mrs. William J. Flather, Miss Cassie Parker, Mrs. Frank High, jr., Miss Eleanor Flood, Mrs. John Thompson, Mrs. Millard West, Mrs. Rudolph Kauffmann 2d, Mrs. William Porter Arnold, Mrs. Donald DeVeau, Mrs. Margot Lee, Mrs. James L. Karrick, Mrs. Andrew Saul, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., Miss Genevieve Ryan, the Misses Ida and Grace Lind and Mrs. Chester Flather.

Generally assisting were the debutante's aunts, Mrs. Maurice H. Avery and the Misses Francis, Mary and Sarah Evans of Northcote, Baltimore County (Md.); Mrs. H. Warren Smith, the Misses Ditto, Mrs. J. Arthur Willis and Miss Virginia Willis of the Western Shore of Virginia; Mrs. Louis A. Fischer and Mrs. Frederick Rittenour.

Something new in party endings was effected by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by guests, old and young, as Sidney and his orchestra played the melody as a climax for the event. A buffet supper later was served to the assistants, their escorts and out-of-town guests.

Still later, last evening, several hundred members of the younger set were entertained at a dance given in honor of the debutante by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, at Battery Terrill, their beautiful suburban residence built on the historic site of a famous Civil War rampart used in the defense of Washington. The entire lower floor was available for dancing and the wide verandas looking out over the sloping lawns and embowered fountains lured the company during intermissions. Brightly colored lanterns illuminated the outdoor scene. A supper was served at midnight.

Among the young men there from out of town were Philip Hathaway, of Baltimore, Md.; Richard Byrd, of Winchester, Va.; Frank Bell, of Charleston, W. Va.; Richard Warfield and George McAdams, both of Baltimore, Md.; Arthur Koontz, of Charleston, W. Va.; Hugh Latham, of Princeton, N. J.; Steven Swift, of Boston; Wilson Pritchett, of Haverford, Pa.; Robert Boone, of Princeton, N. J., and Joseph Kearns, of Baltimore.

MISS MARIANA MEARS EVANS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., who made her bow to society yesterday afternoon at the Chevy Chase Club

Mrs. Pfeiffer Visiting Here

Mrs. William Pfeiffer, of Oklahoma City, is visiting in Washington, where she is widely known. She is staying at the Mayflower Hotel.

Later this week Mrs. Pfieffer will go to Philadelphia to attend the Republican National Convention. From there she will go to New York for a visit before returning home.

About the Town with
DUDLEY HARMON

YOU'D HARDLY THINK it for the pall of gloom which has settled over Washington, but such things as tennis parties and teas still go on here. The one the Richard Sangers gave the other afternoon had a slight air of unreality, but their house in the woods overlooking a reservoir is the perfect place to get away from it all for a few hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanger organize an informal tennis tournament every spring for their friends, to be played off on their court. The party marked the finals, and guests sat on a hilly slope to watch. Margot Lee, who is District and Chevy Chase Club champion, teamed with Cuthbert Train to beat the married pair of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding in two good sets.

THE SANGERS leave tomorrow, to be gone until November. Mr. Sanger is with the Republican National Committee and will head immediately for Philadelphia, while his wife visits Long Island. He has promised to wire her as soon as balloting starts, and she will dash down to see the finish. In Philadelphia Mr. Sanger will serve as liaison man between the Young Republicans and their elders.

From Philly the couple will go to Chicago, to be at campaign headquarters there until after the election. In their absence their house, Ringside, will be occupied by four bachelors.

AFTER THE MATCH the other afternoon Mrs. Sanger awarded to Mr. Train and Miss Lee the prize of a set of sporting plates. The hostess wore a bright green linen dress particularly becoming to her blonde hair.

Mrs. Sidney Lee topped off her print dress and silver fox cape with a big red straw hat. She will leave July 1 for a stay in Connecticut with relatives and plans a round of other visits in the North later on.

Jim Nichols had a copy of the new PM, which everyone was anxious to see. "What, no columns?" was the general exclamation after they had whisked through this new paper.

MRS. HUGH CUMMING, JR. was there—she has just bobbed her hair, and it's very becoming. Mrs. Creighton Peet blew in, having just motored down from Long Island, where she spent a week. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, Mrs. Leonide Ourusoff, Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Ronald Allan, one of the bachelors who will move into Ringside; Betty Shouse, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Barton, and Dorothea Villard, who is off today for New York and Connecticut, were others present.

THE FRIENDS OF FRANCE, who just reopened their Washington office a week ago, are wondering where to go from here. The big benefit they had planned for Bastille Day has been called off. The reported French surrender may mean that Miss Anne Morgan, the head, and her troupe of nurses and ambulance drivers will have to come home. With Bee Phillips, Miss Morgan narrowly escaped capture by the Germans, according to an Indiana ambulance driver who is now in a German prison camp. The two women were near Laon when it was overrun by the Nazis. Miss Phillips is the daughter of William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Italy.

Wearing Blue, Miss Briggs Is Wed to Metzger

Daughter of Noted Cartoonist Married In Leesburg Church

Wearing ice blue satin, instead of the traditional white, Miss Clare Briggs, jr., daughter of Mrs. Clare Briggs and the late Mr. Briggs, noted cartoonist, was married last evening to William Baylor Metzger.

The ceremony took place at 8:30 at the St. James' Episcopal Church in Leesburg, Va., where the bride has been making her home for the last several years. The Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, the rector, officiated in a setting of Madonna lilies, trailing vines, and lighted candles.

John Owen Briggs, of Hartford, Conn., brother of the bride, gave her in marriage. Her gown was made with a full skirt, long train and a collar of old Duchess lace. Her long tulle veil was topped by another, of rose point lace which her grandmother had used at her wedding. She wore long Duchess lace mitts and carried a large cluster of lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Curtis Is Maid of Honor

Miss Helen Curtis, of Minneapolis, Minn., was maid of honor, wearing blue tulle finished at the waistline with pink ribbon. Her large blue horsehair hat had streamers of pink, and she carried blue delphiniums and pink roses.

Miss Barbara Lewis, of Glencoe, 3d, was bridesmaid, dressed in pink tulle made like the maid of honor's, only trimmed with blue ribbon. Her hat and bouquet were the same as Miss Curtis'. Little Blanche Melain Paul, of Leesburg, the flower girl, wore blue net embroidered in pink rosebuds and carried a nosegay of roses.

Stirling Harrison, of Leesburg, was best man and the ushers were Frank Littleton, jr., John Paul, Sam Lutz Alexander, Winslow Williams and George Martin, of Leesburg.

Reception Follows At Briggs Home

A large reception for 200 at Westgate, the Briggs home, followed the ceremony. The bride's mother wore dusky lace and mousseline de soie with a corsage of lilies of the valley, and Mrs. Metzger had chosen white chiffon trimmed in black point d'esprit, with which she wore a cape of black chiffon and lace and a pale orchid.

After the reception the couple left to motor West, the bride wearing a silk jersey ensemble of navy blue with white polka dots and matching turban. They will make their home in Oak Park, Ill.

The bride has followed in the footsteps of her noted father and does cartoons for a Chicago syndicate. Mr. Metzger, who is the son of Judge and Mrs. William A. Metzger, of Leesburg, is in business in Chicago. He is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lucien LeCompte Metzger, of Philadilphia.

Washington guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Allison Niller, Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Newton, Mrs. Harrison Cassard and Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Moore.

Venezuelan President's Wife Feted at Embassy

Senora de Lopez Contreras Entertained At Reception at Which Charge d'Affaires And Senora de Fombona-Pachano Are Hosts

Climaxing two days packed solid with festivities, including tea at the White House, Senora de Lopez Contreras, wife of the President of Venezuela, was honor guest at a big reception yesterday afternoon at the Venezuelan Embassy.

In the absence of the Ambassador, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, and owing to the fact that his wife is recuperating from an illness, the Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Fombona-Pachano acted as hosts.

They received in the drawing room of the dazzling white stone embassy on Massachusetts avenue. Done in the modern manner, it has white walls and a light color scheme inside, which gives an impression of spaciousness and coolness.

Receiving with the trio was Senora de Paganini, wife of the Consul General of Venezuela in New York. When there's a big party at the embassy, Venezuelans who make their home in Manhattan usually fly down for the day, and there were several of them present at the reception.

The President's wife wore a floor-length gown of raspberry-colored chiffon with bright sequins at the neck and waistline. Senora de Fombona-Pachano had chosen a gown of Alice blue faille, with a tunic of black lace. Senora de Paganini was in black, with a broad-brimmed flower hat.

Latin-American envoys and their wives and a sprinkling of high-ranking American officials were in the majority. The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace were early arrivals, the latter wearing a blue outfit.

Mrs. Hull Among Guests

Among those arriving early was Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State. Her becoming black and pink ensemble was accented with a wide-brimmed black hat, trimmed in pink roses. Later, Mrs. Hull presided at a meeting of the executive committee of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation.

Guests gathered around the long dining room table, which was centered with Easter lilies flanked by tall white tapers in silver holders. The spread was a typically lavish one, which Latin Americans always produce at their parties. Besides sandwiches and cakes, there were bowls of ice cream and platters of salad and jellied meats. Champagne and highballs were served from a buffet.

Mrs. A. A. Berle, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, in an all-blue outfit, chatted with Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador. Senhor Martins accompanied his wife. Mrs. Henry F. Grady was accompanied by her son and daughter, Reginald and Patricia.

The State Department was further represented by the Chief of Communications and Mrs. Thomas Burke; Glen Abbey, who spent four years on duty in Venezuela; George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol, and Ellis Briggs.

Paulo Hasslocher of the Brazilian Embassy was introducing the new First Secretary, Alancastro Guimaraes. He just arrived here after serving in Buenos Aires for two years.

Hans Thomsens Also There

The German Charge d'Affaires, Hans Thomsen, was accompanied by his wife, who wore white with two orchids, which she said she receives anonymously every day. Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was also present.

Others at this very gay party included Senora de Cabero, wife of the Chilean envoy, who wore flowered chiffon with a broad brimmed black hat; the Ecuadorean envoy, Capt. Coyon Eloy Alfaro; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Mrs. Thomas Dawson, in powder blue with a red hat; the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Senora de Fragoso; Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, and dozens more.

Emer Brennan Is Married

The Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Emer, to Svend Yort on Monday morning at the Irish Legation.

In the presence of members of the family and the legation staff, Msgr. David O'Dwyer officiated at 9 a. m. Assisting him were the Rev. Joseph Moran and the Rev. John Kiessler, of St. Thomas' Church.

After the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Yort left for a honeymoon trip. After July 1, they will be at home in Chevy Chase. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Yort, of Copenhagen.

Thomas Holcombs Give Dinner For the Larsens

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb gave a dinner last night at the commandant's house, Marine Barracks, for Col. and Mrs. Henry L. Larsen. The former will leave tomorrow for San Diego, Calif., where he will join the Fleet Marine Force, Marine Corps Base.

The guests last night were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Holland M. Smith, Col. and Mrs. Henry L. Larsen, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Brooks, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. S. C. Cumming, Maj. and Mrs. L. C. Whitaker, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. B. W. Gally, Lieut. Comdr. George C. Sweet and Mrs. Bugbee.

Miss Hildebrand Wed to Von Drehle

Mr. and Mrs. Burell M. Hildebrand announce the marriage of their daughter, Dorothy Frances, to Clarence B. Von Drehle on June 15. The marriage took place in the rectory of St. Martin's Church by the Rev. Louis Miltenberger.

The bride's attendant was her mad of honor, Mrs. Austin Palmer. Mr. Von Drehle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Von Drehle, of this city.

CAPITAL WHIRL
By SALLY SWIFT

PRETTY JANE EUSTIS, who will be married to George Wheeler on June 29, is already in possession of the bridegroom's wedding present to her. George arrived at Jane's house last night with the present burning his pocket. He said that, while he wanted to give it to her immediately, perhaps she'd rather have it on her wedding day, and when was the proper time for giving the bride her bridegroom present anyway?

Jane said she didn't know, but that she thought there was no time like the present FOR the present. George said that he would give it to her at the earliest moment at which the bridegroom's present had been given to any of Jane's married friends.

WHEREUPON JANE flew to the telephone and began gathering the needed statistics After calling several couples, among them the Eugene Carusis and the "Mike" McConihes, Jane announced that three days before the wedding seemed to be the earliest date at which she could receive her gift. That meant waiting til June 26, which was entirely too far away. So the present was produced then and there and Jane is the happy possessor of a beautiful diamond wrist watch. I wonder if it was a hint to the bride to arrive on time at the church?

AT THE HIMES' dance the other night a pavillion for dancing was set up beside a little creek in the garden. The nearby swimming pool proved as popular as the dance floor. A few of the guests, in their eagerness for a cool dip, dived in fully dressed in evening clothes. Or could they have been pushed while looking on?

The Countess of Gainsborough and her daughter, Lady Maureen Noel, are at Manhassett, Long Island, where they are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Grace. Later in the summer Lady Gainsborough plans to make a trip to California.

LOUISE STILLWELL and Helen Marie de Limur have gone to Philadelphia to attend the debut party of attractive Mary Paul. The latter has been a recent visitor to Washington and a popular out-of-town guest at the June debut festivities.

Sylvia Szechenyi is visiting the H. P. Whitneys at Old Westbury, Long Island. She will join her mother later in the summer at their home in Newport.

Dick Bolling and Phil Evans will join the trek to Long Island where they will be house guests of the vom Raths and will attend the dance which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarkson are giving Saturday in honor of her niece, Elaine Darlington

Mrs. James Clement Dunn, accompanied by debutante daughter Cynthia, and by her elder daughter, Countess Baillet-Latour has taken up summer residence in Manchester, Mass. Countess Baillet-Latour expects to return to Washington later on to spend part of the summer with her father and will leave her two little girls at Manchester in the adoring care of their grandmother.

MRS. LOTHROP STODDARD, before her departure for a visit to Chicago, arranged a recital for some of the grown-ups who have been studying piano and singing with her this past winter. Mrs. George Rublee, who spent much time in Mexico, where her husband was associated with the late Dwight Morrow, sang some delightful Mexican songs. She explained the songs with unique translations of her own which fascinated the audience.

Other performers at this agreeable musicale were Mrs. Elliot Thurston, Mrs. Fontaine Bradley, Mrs. Charles Hurd, Miss Sarah Jenkins-Smith and Metcalf Walling.

Zontians Send 2 to Convention

Mrs. Nan Street, new president of the Washington Zonta Club, and Mrs. Louise Stambaugh will represent it as delegate and alternate at the annual convention of Zonta International opening Tuesday in Denver.

They leave Saturday and will join the special train of convention-bound Zontians in Chicago. Mrs. May Moyers McElroy, a member of the local club, who is now in Chicago, will attend, participating in the capacity of international vice president. Mrs. Stambaugh expects to go to Yellowstone for a vacation following the meeting.

The local club will continue its weekly luncheon meetings throughout the summer at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesdays. Today, the meeting will be addressed by Miss Edith M. Haydon, superintendent of nurses at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

The chief project of the club is in the field of vocational education, in which it offers scholarships to young women for training that will advance them from routine to specialized jobs. Two such scholarships will be awarded this year.

Members of 60 District D. A. R. Chapters Meet at New Home for Card Party, Supper

Affair Sponsored by Chapter House Corporation Was First Large Benefit in Which Local Groups Joined; Funds Go to Clubhouse

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Several hundred members of the 60 chapters of the District Daughters of the American Revolution gathered yesterday at thir new chapter house, 1732 Massachusetts avenue, for a card party and supper.

The affair, sponsored by the Chapter House Corporation, of which Mrs. Harry C. Groves is president, was the first large benefit in which all the local groups have joined, and demonstrated the value of the new clubhouse to whose fund the proceeds will go.

Tables for cards were arranged in the game room on the first floor and in the library and dining room on the second. The card playing started at 2 o'clock, and from 5 to 7, supper was served. The D. A. R.'s who had not before visited the chapter house made tours of inspection and others viewed with interest some of the gifts recently made by various chapters.

Despite the threatening weather, many also enjoyed the garden behind the house, which has been reconditioned under the supervision of Mrs. Thomas Seay. It is surrounded by a fine boxwood hedge and iron fence, and is reached by a stairway leading from the library.

One of the features of the afternoon was the fortune telling by Mrs. George Madden Grimes, Mrs. Pedro Capo-Rodriguez and Mrs. Rex Rhodes, dressed as gypsies. There were also candy and cake tables which were well patronized and were under the direction of Mrs. Contee S. Ficklin and Miss Frances Mixsell, and a "postoffice" where surprise packages were sold. This was in charge of Mrs. William P. Clerk.

Mrs. William T. Mixsell was general chairman of the party, assisted by Mrs. Sidney Jacobs, in charge of cards; Mrs. Rex Rhodes and Mrs. Elmer F. Cassell, regent of Frances Scott Chapter, co-chairman of the supper; Mrs. Gertrude W. Moser, treasurer; Mrs. Jason Waterman, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Grant Chase, in charge of tickets. The juniors of various chapters also assisted.

The State officers, headed by Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, regent, were all present. They included: Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, vice regent; Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, recording secretary; Miss Marget Naylor, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Edgar Good, treasurer; Miss Ruth Ann Parker, assistant State treasurer; Mrs. Claude Allen Cook, registrar; Mrs. Jessie Scott Arnold, historian; Miss Phebe Ann Ross, librarian-curator.

Also among the guests were Mrs. Charles Carrol Haig, vice president general, and Mr. Haig; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, past State regent; Mrs. John J. Regan, president of the Regents' Club; Mrs. Catherine Nagle, Mrs. Lyle Seaton, Mrs. Jesse Anthony, Mrs. Benton Rothgeb, Mrs. James Skinner, Mrs. Frank E. Hickey, Mrs. Philip Sheriff, regents of local chapters.

Miss Stella Akin Will Address Phi Delta Delta

Miss Stella Akin, special assistant to the Attorney General, will address a meeting of women lawyers on Saturday at the Sulgrave Club, when Beta chapter of Phi Delta Delta, women's legal fraternity, holds its annual dinner and initiation.

Miss Akin will be introduced by Miss Mary Lewis Martin, retiring president, who will also present the new officers to the chapter.

The officers to be inducted prior to the dinner are Mrs. Marie Allen, president; Miss Margaret M. Heimiller, vice president; Miss Mildred Thissell, registrar; Miss Alice A. Schlinger, chancellor, and Miss Dorothy Jackson, chaplain.

Four new members also will be initiated. They are Mary L. Ambrosi, Catherine L. Connaker, Rosalyn M. Skeehan and Rose Mary Walker. All are students of the Washington College of Law.

Triple I's, Organization of Girls, Is Ready To Render Variety of Services This Summer

DO YOU NEED your dog washed, garden weeded, curtains stretched or sandwiches made for your tea party? Just call Miss Mabel Cook, director of the Girl Reserve Department of the Y. W. C. A., and she will dispatch a competent member of the Triple I's to do the job.

This is a new organization whose Triple I's stand for the more serious title, "Individual Initiative Industries." There are 25 Girl Reserves in the membership—girls who are being graduated from high school this month and need summer jobs. For three months they have been taking stock of their qualifications, doing intensive work in special lines in which their services are now available and working out a scale of prices fair to both employer and employe.

MISS COOK and members of her staff with a committee of other adult advisers have passed on the qualifications of the girls in the different fields and none will be recommended for a job unless she is prepared to do it well.

You may smile at the list of homely duties the members of the Three I's are ready to perform, but if you make a note of them there'll come a day some time this summer when you'll need a girl for just such a job.

Now, for instance, under child care, the girls (who have had special instruction in this line) will stay with the baby while parents are out, take little Johnnie to the dentist or the doctor, on a sightseeing excursion or to a specified movie while mother is busy at home or working for the Red Cross. There are those equipped to supervise piano practice, teach tennis or swimming, coach children in elementary school subjects, read to and entertain convalescent children, manage children's parties and even wash the children's hair.

GIRLS who have had home economics will come to your house and make your jams and jellies by any recipe you choose. They will wait on the table, cook or take orders for cakes, pies and cookies as well as tea sandwiches and box lunches.

One of the girls already has an order. It was the first for the club and was for 300 sandwiches to be made today—and it's her commencement. However, she will make the sandwiches and then dash off to the graduation exercises.

UNDER "CARE OF PETS" such services are listed as washing the dog, exercising him and caring for birds, dogs and fish during the owner's absence.

Several of the girls have their drivers' licenses and will drive the car for you on a shopping or sightseeing expedition; they'll do errands, gardening, help with moving, polish glass and china, stretch curtains, both ruffled and plain, address envelopes. In fact, it looks as though the odd-job business this summer was going into a feminine monopoly.

Nancy Ann White, of Woodrow Wilson High School, is president of the enterprising Triple I's; Mary Grace Ryan, of McKinley, vice president; Martha Diven, of Tech, secretary, and Mary Rodgers, of Woodrow Wilson, in charge of training.

LONG SERVICE—Mrs. Ellis Logan, who is probably "mother" of more clubs than almost any other member of the District Federation, has been reelected for the thirty-second year as president of the District of Columbia branch of the Woman's Sabbath Alliance.

Other officers for the coming year are Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, first vice president; Mrs. William Winkelhaus, second vice president; Mrs. Wintemute W. Sloan, third vice president; Mrs. Ethel Law, fourth vice president; Mrs. J. E. Atkinson, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Osgood, secretary; Mrs. Henry J. Smith, chaplain; Mrs. Nellie Good, Mrs. Harry Gutridge and Mrs. F. R. Coburn, directors to the federation.

League to Hear Guffey and Lee

Senators Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, and Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, will be the guest speakers Friday night at the annual banquet and ball of the Democratic League of the District, to be held at the Congressional Country Club at 7:30.

J. Nelson Anderson, the president, will introduce Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, who will preside as toastmaster.

Hugh V. Keiser is general chairman of arrangements for the party, assisted by Mrs. Hugh R. Thomas, cochairman; Sefton Darr, chairman of speakers; Dr. F. Thomas Evans, program; Mrs. Helen Robichaux, music; Mrs. B. R. Thompson, decorations; Arthur Clarendon Smith, tickets; Mrs. Knowlan, printing; Mrs. Hugh R. Groves, membership; Miss Inez Justis, seating; Mrs. Cecil Norton Broy, reception; Miss A. Bohmer Rudd, publicity; Frank Hoffman, finance, and John Simon, comptroller.

The patrons and patronesses, headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, include Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, Mrs. May Thompson Evans; Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic National Committeewoman, of Pennsylvania; Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Miss Pauletta Guffey; Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper; Mrs. David Tucker Brown; Represenative and Mrs. Luther Partick, of Alabama; Representative and Mrs. Henry Bascom Steagell; Representative and Mrs. Frank William Boykin; Representative Jack Sheridan.

Block-Booking System Called Totalitarian

Mrs. Brennerman Praises Neely Bill Before Alliance

Mrs. William T. Bannerman, motion picture chairman for the Housekeepers' Alliance and legislative chairman of the Motion Picture Research Council, yesterday discussed the Neely bill at the June meeting of the alliance, at the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Bannerman called attention to the fact that much of the testimony at the hearings on the bill was meaningless because the witnesses grouped all three classes of theaters in one.

There are three types, declared Mrs. Bannerman, which cannot be dealt with as one either as to trade practices or set-ups. They are those affiliated with the producers and therefore producer-controlled; the chain theaters and the independents. The chain and affiliated theaters enjoy more opportunity for selectivity than the independents which, she said, feel the full force of the compulsory block-booking and therefore oppose it.

The control of the motion picture industry, which the Neely bill is designed to curb, is practically totalitarian, Mrs. Bannerman told members of the alliance. The producers and their backers determine what 85,000,000 people shall have simultaneously in their movie programs—a unified control from top to bottom, she said.

This situation is especially serious, she said, when it is considered what a powerful propaganda medium the motion picture may be. She read quotations from the article by Nelson Bell, dealing with subject in last Sunday's issue of The Post.

She advocated the Neely bill as a measure which would liberate the independent exhibitor and enable him to meet the demands of his community.

Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, president of the alliance, presided. The organization made an award of a Red Cross uniform to Mrs. C. B. McCallum for her tireless Red Cross work. Mrs. Newburgh, who heads the alliance's unit, also announced that one of the members, Mrs. Ashley, had already made eight sweaters. Miss Abbie Johnson was presented with a gift from Mrs. Newburgh for her work on the benefit card party.

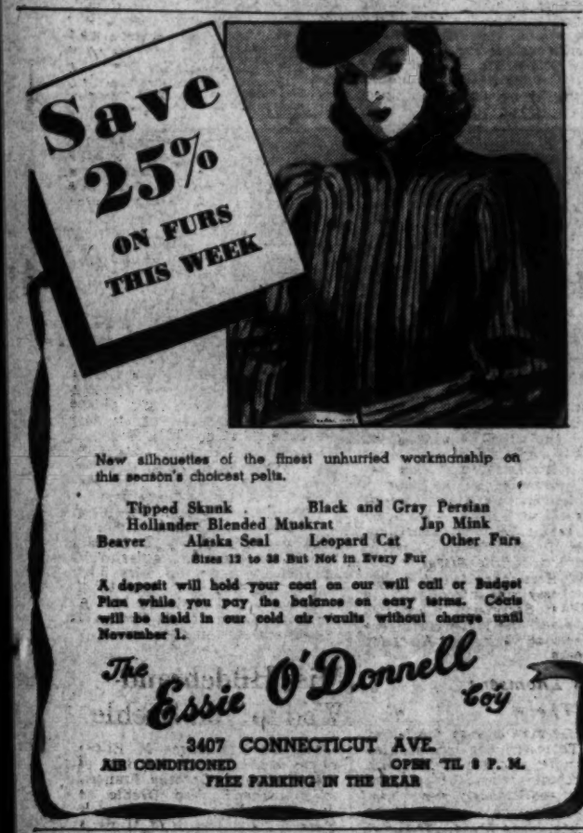

Dunham Party Aids France

Several hundred dollars will be added to the funds of the Urgent Relief for France committee as a result of the benefit supper and open house held yesterday at "His Lordship's Kindness," the estate of Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas E. Dunham, in Upper Marlboro, Md.

The affair, originally planned for Monday, was postponed because of rain, but some who had planned to attend, went on that day with their box lunches and were welcomed then as were those who visited the estate yesterday.

The historic old colonial house includes a quaint chapel, done in green. Strangely enough, there hangs over the mantel there, a portrait of Treadwell Frampton, who introduced horse racing into England. It is the work of Sir Godfrey Kneller. Among other fine paintings are a Joshua Reynolds, which hangs in the dining room and Rembrandt Peale's portrait of Washington, in the hall.

Former Representative Virginia Jenckes was among those who were there yesterday with parties of guests. Among others were Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Miss Sara Farrar and Mme. George Poulieff; Miss Alice Dodge who was hostess to a group; Dr. Walter Wells and a party; Mrs. Austin Lautz, Miss Lydia Loring and Miss Lelia Peachy, whose family is related to the Dangerfields to whom the estate formerly belonged.

Italian Raids On Malta Kill 37 in Week

British Capture General in Thrust Deep Into Libya

Valletta, Malta (Wednesday) June 19 (AP).—Thirty-seven civilians were killed in air raids on Malta this week following Italy's entry into the war, it was announced today.

The dead inclued 10 women and 9 children. Forty-one civilians were seriously injured and 71 slightly hurt.

Three raids occurred yesterday.

"Dictators Fade Away"

Cairo, Egypt, June 18 (AP).—Gen. Wavell, in command of British forces in the Middle East, declared in an order of the day that the British Empire will continue her struggle against Germany and Italy until victory is won.

"Difficult times lie ahead. They will, I know, be faced with the same spirit of calm and confidence in which we faced such crises before.

"Dictators fade away, the British Empire never dies."

The British announced tonight that an Italian general was taken prisoner in a British raid in Libya June 16 which penetrated the Italian lines so deeply that the officer was captured while driving his wife to a maternity hospital. The captured general was in charge of an engineers' corps.

British bombing planes made two raids on gasoline supplies and other objectives in Italian East Africa yesterday, the Royal Air Force said in a communique today.

Africa Stands By

Cape Town, June 18 (U.P.).—The Union of South Africa will stand by Britain "even if she is forced to wage war alone," Premier Jan Christian Smuts, who also is commander in chief of the South African armed forces, asserted today.

"Of all the British dominions South Africa is in the gravest danger," Smuts said. "Her gold and other mineral resources and her strategic position make a prize well worth having.

"South Africa cannot, therefore, but choose to stand with Britain to the end in this mortal struggle."

Committee Votes For Tripled Fleet

hours before, Chairmen Walsh and Vinson of the Senate and House Naval Affairs Committees had offered an 84-ship program costing $1,200,000,000, declaring it was an Administration proposal.

The measure would appropriate no money, but Admiral Stark said that $175,000,000 will be asked immediately for additional ship ways and facilities and for starting work on the vessels.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, said that contracts would be awarded for the entire program as soon as this sum is available and that work will be underway on all of them within six months. Actual laying of the keels of many of the ships will have to await completion of ships now building, he said, but declared all could be finished within seven years.

Types Kept Secret

Admiral Stark asked the committee to add 1,250,000 tons of combatant ships to the present authorized strength of 1,723,480 tons. This would provide a total of 2,970,000 tons of under-age craft, and a total warship strength of about 3,670,000 tons, including over-age ships but not auxiliaries, Stark said.

The present fleet has 1,257,360 tons of both under-age and over-age vessels.

The bill does not specify numbers of ships but would enlarge the present limits on types of vessels by the following additional tonnage: Battleships, 385,000 tons; aircraft carriers, 125,000 tons; cruisers, 420,000; destroyers, 250,000 tons; submarines, 70,000 tons.

While the size and number of ships was withheld for "military reasons," if existing types are followed the program would provide 8 battleships, 4 carriers, 25 cruisers, 128 destroyers and 46 submarines.

Exceed Stark's Requests

The committee went even beyond Stark's recommendations, adding 75,000 tons for additional aircraft carriers. They also added $25,000,000 for building a "mosquito fleet." At the recommendation of naval officials the group allowed $150,000,000 for providing additional shipbuilding facilities, $20,000,000 for expanding the armorplate factory at South Charleston, W. Va., and $50,000,000 for new gun factories.

Also written into the bill unanimously was a provision which would bar any transfer of warships to the Allies. It provides that "no vessel, ship or boat now in the U. S. Navy or being built therefor shall be disposed of by sale, charter, or otherwise, or scrapped without the consent of Congress."

House Wants "a say"

Chairman Vinson, who offered the amendment said it was also intended to give members of the House "a say" in any disarmament traty which may be negotiated when things get back to normal." He declared he didn't want to see the United States ever scrap its fleet again such as was done in 1922 as an example to the world.

The Committee heard Admiral Stark testify in executive session for nearly two hours before acting on the bill. He is reported to have emphasized the need for a larger Navy to prevent trouble in Latin America, with the United States facing a combination of totalitarian powers attacking from both the East and West. The group will consider a further increase in the naval plane limit this morning.

Abbott School Class Graduates

Henry A. Schweinhaut, an attorney with the Department of Justice, and Lee Pennington, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, spoke on "Law Enforcement" at Abbott Vocational School's graduation exercises yesterday.

Schweinhaut presented diplomas to 22 students. The American Legion citizenship award was presented to Robert Ernest by Charles Kohen. Ernest was valedictorian also. Charles McManus, president of the class, presided.

G. O. P. Splits On War Plank

of the national defense subcommittee which will draw the Republican foreign affairs plank.

Following a late afternoon session, Herbert K. Hyde, isolationist chairman of the resolutions committee, announced the group will approve the Frank report. It is expected to be used as a campaign document supplementary to the briefest platform in G. O. P. history.

"We will present a short, direct and positive declaration of American principles that can not be misunderstood by the people in its purpose to rescue human need from political greed," said Hyde.

Down the middle of expressed views for rigid isolationism and a virtual affirmation of the Administration's international stand struck Dr. Frank in morning testimony before the group.

He condemned as "gross mismanagement" the Roosevelt conduct of foreign affairs but opposed "a stupid, sterile and bat-blind kind of isolation."

Favor Aid to British

If Dr. Frank's views prevail in the final platform, the foreign affairs plank will declare first for keeping the United States free from this war but will make no "head in the sand" declaration.

Either explicitly or by implication, it will favor the utmost material aid to England, shy of commitments that would lead to actual war participation.

While the resolutions committee fretted over what it regards as the determining campaign issue, this gaily bedecked convention town watched its streets and spare rooms fill with enough delegates and visitors to offset its census drop of 15,000.

Here on the headquarters sidewalk, "Tieless Joe" Tolbert heaped vituperation on the "upstarts—damn them" who would dare challenge the seats of his handpicked South Carolina delegation.

Across that hotel lobby bustles Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, pausing to assure newsmen he is merely arranging for Hoover's Tuesday night speech, and not corraling votes.

In a box at the ball park, former Gov. Landon, of Kansas, relaxes with newspaper friends as if to offset rumors that he is mysteriously negotiating for a Taft-Dewey trade.

And there in the hotel lounge sit tall, brown-eyed Mrs. Ruth Hanna MsCormick Simms, Dewey comanager, and brown-haired attractive Mrs. Katherine Kennedy Brown, Ohio committeewoman and Taft backer, in intense conversation.

Early For Trade Talk

Mrs. Simms and Mrs. Brown are old friends, but their appearance together added one more whisper to the talk of a "deal."

But it is far too early to talk trades. It is still anybody's race, and every candidate camp seems chiefly concerned with "stopping" an opponent. Wendell L. Willkie's "buried strength" is still the talk of the town, and just now he is the chief "stop" target.

Joseph N. Pew's Pennsylvania organization yesterday was reported edging closer to Willkie, while Gov. Landon's followers were beating a retreat. Landon is expected to go for Dewey or Taft before he would permit a deadlock to ride Willkie in. It may take more than Landon to check the Willkie boom.

Serve With Pepper

Following a three-hour closed session the Republican resolutions committee named the following to serve with Pepper on the platform drafting subcommittee: Landon, Preston Hotchkiss, California; Ralph E. Flanders, Vermont; Clyde Smith, Michigan; Robert Williamson, Maine; T. J. Guthrie, Iowa; former Senator Walter Edge, New Jersey; Orville Bullington, Texas; O. G. Saxon, Connecticut, and former National Committee Chairman Henry P. Fletcher.

Named to work with Landon on the pivotal national defense and foreign affairs subcommittee were Edge, Bullington, Fletcher, Quincy Hale, Wisconsin; Thomas Flynn, West Virginia; Charles Rendlen, Missouri; John Lord O'Brien, New York; Maj. Henry A. Wise, Virginia; Jonn A. Reed, Wyoming, and Morley Griswold, Nevada.

The morning's difference on wording of a foreign-affairs plank came during cross-examination of key members of the Frank committee. Variance of views ranged from a warning by H. G. Hogan, of Indiana, against "weasel words like short of war" and "a policy that will lead to war" to a plea by William S. Howe, of Massachusetts, for agreement with the Administration on foreign policy "so we can make our fight on domestic issues."

Assails Roosevelt Speech

Dr. Frank in his statement hit between the two viewpoints, although he criticized the Administration's handling of foreign affairs and termed President Roosevelt's Charlottesville speech last week "an informal and personal declaration of war."

"I believe I can say," Frank told the committee, "that this convention will stand for keeping the United States free of this war, but clear of a sterile and blind kind of isolation. We should see what kind of a contribution we can make, but that contribution is not on the battlefields of Europe. But we should give the utmost material aid to the Allies, through the normal channels of trade."

He said he wouldn't change six lines of his 35,000-word program committee report made last February because of changed world conditions. The report recommended noninvolvement "in other people's wars."

John J. Kanes Mark 50 Years Of Marriage

Four children, their husbands and wives and 13 grandchildren will help Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kane, of 404 New Jersey avenue southeast, celebrate their golden wedding today.

MR. KANE
Continental Hotel

All living in Washington and comprising the entire immediate family, they will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Kane to mass and Holy Communion at St. Cecilia's Catholic church. A breakfast at the will follow.

For 50 years of married happiness, Kane gives credit first to the fact that "I just got hooked up right" and second to his own temperance—"As a member of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union, I never drank a glass of beer, wine, ale or cider."

MRS. KANE

There have been scraps, he said. "Whenever I hear somebody say he has never had a scrap with his wife I just put it down that fellow is lying. But as for having any upset, we've never had one. Things have been pretty good. Excellent, in fact."

Both born in Trenton, N. J., and married there, the Kanes have lived in Washington for the past 47 years. On his retirement eight years ago, he was in charge of the mail room at the Navy Department's Bureau of Medical Surgery. Mrs. Kane is 73.

Roosevelt Plans Compulsory Training for Youth

Reaction on Capitol Hill to the President's plan was varied. Some thought he had gone too far, some thought he had not gone far enough, and one member thought it would "bankrupt" the Nation. In this connection, it is believed that the Administration has in mind giving the young men in training camps hardly any more than tobacco money.

Col. Adler Urges Bill

Copyright by New York Times

New York, July 18.—Declaring that voluntary defense service "never worked" in the Civil War or World War, Col. Julius Ochs Adler, civilian aide to the commander of the Second Corps Area, told newspaper editors today that there was "imperative" need for compulsory military training.

Addressing the annual convention of the National Editorial Association, Col. Adler asked the editors to support the Military Training Camps Association's bill for compulsory service which is expected to be introduced in Congress this week. He urged them to "wire editorials" home in support of the bill.

Compulsory military training was seen by Col. Adler as "one link in the national defense program which has not yet had enough attention from the Nation and Congress." Under a voluntary service plan, he said, only "super-patriots and those who can't find anything else to do" would enlist. This, he added, would be "undemocratic in a country where everybody should take his turn."

Reminding of President Roosevelt's suggestion for 50,000 planes, Col. Adler estimated that the operation of that many machines would require a force of 1,000,000 men. He said 50,000 each of pilots, co-pilots, bombardiers and navigators would be needed and from 15 to 20 men on the ground for each plane.

With an air force here of 1,000,000 men, he estimated, the country should have an army of 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 men.

"Weasel Words," Says Landon

Philadelphia, June 18 (U.P.).—Former Gov. Landon, of Kansas, tonight accused President Roosevelt of using "weasel words" in his press conference statement anticipating compulsory universal Government service.

"What does he mean?" asked Landon. "What kind of training does he refer to? A few days ago he said at a press conference that he had read only the first paragraph of a New York Times editorial on this subject and said that he liked it.

"Well, that first paragraph explicitly indorsed compulsory military training for American youth.

"Now it seems that he is using weasel words. I want to see exactly what he means before I make other comment. It is typical of the New Deal, however, that such an important subject would come up not in a message to Congress but at a press conference."

"Consistent," Says Dr. Frank

Dr. Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin and chairman of the Republican program committee which will influence the 1940 declaration of policy of the G. O. P., said of Mr. Roosevelt's statement:

"This is consistent with the New Deal's policy of conscripting American life."

Former Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, said:

"It is too vague to justify any serious comment. It is military service, and yet it isn't."

Mexican Conscription

Mexico City, June 18 (U.P.).—The cabinet, with President Lazaro Cardenas presiding, tonight approved a law providing for compulsory military training and service for a period of one year for all Mexican males between the ages of 18 and 45.

Simultaneously the permanent commission of Congress—which represents the National legislative body while it is adjourned or in recess—was asked to call a special session of the whole Congress for July 10, three days after the Presidential elections, to sanction the law.

It was hoped that the measure might be made effective by January 1, 1941.

German Troops Face Russians in Baltic

Russia, something like panic prevails in Moscow over the quick German victories, which have been wholly contrary to Russian calculations, and this is also advanced as an explanation of the precipitate Russian action in the Baltic.

[Persistent reports in London said that because of the rapidity of the German successes and because of Russia's sudden interest in making her Baltic approaches safe from attack, the Soviets have suggested to Finland that she should be allowed to fortify the Aaland islands.]

According to reports from Riga, Russian occupation of Latvia precipitated a Communist attempt at an uprising which was soon squelched by the police but in the course of which several persons were killed and scores were wounded, including some of the police.

The Russian troops maintained strict discipline and their officers were rather disdainful of the "rabble,' demanding its removal by the police.

The Russians have now occupied all the important centers and strategic places, including railroad stations, bridges, and airfields, in all three of the Baltic countries. They have, likewise, established control over all shipment to and from the three countries.

Canada Moves To Conscript Defense Army

Dominion to Call Men Up to 45, Plans to Use All Resources

By Frederick T. Birchall
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, June 18.—Canada responded today to the disasters in France, and there is no mistaking the nature of her response.

With the solid support of all parties, the government moved to mobilize all human and material resources for Canadian defense. All able bodied men up to the age of 45 years, except those needed for vital industries, are to be conscripted immediately for home service. For overseas service voluntary enlistment will be continued and pressed.

A bill declaring the country to be in a state of emergency and conferring on the government power to mobilize "all our human and material resources" was introduced in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and at once advanced to the committee stage to facilitate its early passage.

Before its introduction Mackenzie King made a series of momentous announcements in which conscription was by no means the most important. The new measures were:

1. Immediate institution of national registration of Canada's manpower to constitute an additional precaution against fifth column activities and to provide an inventory of the mechanical and industrial skill of the population.

2. Establishment of a department of national war services, to be headed by a cabinet minister for direction of the mobilization of Canadians seeking practical and useful outlets for their enthusiasm and patriotism.

3. Reorganization of the government to be announced later this week when Finance Minister Ralston assumes his new duties as defense minister.

4. Immediate increased recruiting for overseas service with Canada sending expeditionary forces to Newfoundland, Iceland and the West Indies, as part of a greater assistance to the United Kingdom. Part of the forces for Newfoundland and Iceland are on the way. A force has already been landed in Iceland.

Are You Neglecting Sluggish Kidneys?

Why not drink

When kidneys are continually overburdened they often become weak—the bladder is irritated—often passage is scanty and smarts and burns—sleep is restless and nightly visits to the bathroom are frequent.

A safe, harmless and inexpensive way to relieve this trouble and help restore more healthy action to kidneys and bladder is to get from any druggist a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules and take as directed.

Don't be an EASY MARK and accept a substitute—Get Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original and genuine. Look for the Gold Medal on the box—15 cents.

Remember—other symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble may be backache, puffy eyes, nervousness and leg cramps. Adv.

Anacostia Holds Dual Graduation

135 Seniors Receive Diplomas Following Exercises for Juniors

Anacostia High School had a double-barreled commencement program yesterday, with the junior division holding its exercises in the afternoon, followed by the graduation from the senior division in the evening.

The Senior High School gave diplomas to 135 students, with Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, making the presentations. Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel of the District, made the address to the graduates.

The following awards were presented last night: American Legion awards to James Guy Caponiti and Gladys Reed; Rotary award, Charles White; Civitan award and Rensselaer award, both to Robert Schoenemon; University of Michigan award, Jack Koontz; Wilson Teachers College book award, and Danforth award, both to Mildred Schlarman; Lions Club awards to Margaret Duncan and Robert Schoenemon.

The following scholarships were awarded: To George Washington University, Dorothy King and Robert Schoenemon; American University, Gladys Reed; Strayer College, Mildred Schlarman; Southeastern University, Jack Alsandre; National Art School, Carl Mumford; Benjamin Franklin University, George Mathieson; National Art School, Jeanette Lohoefer, Charles McDaniel and Wilson Reeves; Capital City College, Ada Stein.

Dunbar High School

Nine students received awards at Dunbar High School graduation exercises last night when diplomas were presented by Mrs. Velma G. Williams, member of the Board of Education.

Stephen Lewis and Charles Wilder were announced as winners of Dartmouth College scholarships.

The $200 scholarship, given by the College Alumnae Club of Washington to a senior high school girl in competitive examinations, was won by Ruth Simons.

Harry Lynch won the $250 tuition scholarship given by the faculty of Dunbar High School.

Lucretia Anderson was awarded the Dunbar Alumni Association Scholarship of $150, offered to the graduate who has maintained a high record and who exemplifies the ideals of the institution.

The Costin Scholarship was awarded to Jessie Dedeaux. Talley R. Holmes won the James E. Walker Memorial Medal for the male graduate who has maintained the highest record in scholarship, athletics and deportment throughout his high school course.

Ashton Robinson received a $15 cash award, first prize in the District of Columbia finals of the Elks Oratorical Contest and the right to compete in the regional finals.

Ruby Adams received the $5 award from Beta chapter, Phi Delta Kappa, for standing highest in her school in the scholarship contest sponsored by the sorority nationally.

Junior Highs Graduate Hundreds

7 Washington Schools Move Pupils To Higher Grades; Honors Awarded

Seven junior high schools in divisions 1-9 of the public school system held graduation exercises yesterday, sending hundreds of students up to senior high schools.

They were Anacostia, Eliot, Jefferson, Langley, Macfarland, Paul and Taft Junior High Schools.

Two of the programs last night gave the graduates a melodious send-off, with more music than traditional oratory. Graduates of Taft traced the history of "Public School Music in the United States" and the senior class at Jefferson presented the "March of American Music."

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, presented the 207 diplomas at Langley Junior High School last night. The American Legion awards were won by Robert Henderson and Joyce Gochenour; while the D. A. R. awards for scholarship, leadership and service went to Joseph Terranova and May Thompson.

C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the Board of Education, presented diplomas to 100 Jefferson graduates, whose exercises were held in Stuart Junior High School Auditorium.

At Jefferson, the school citizenship cup was awarded to Virgilio Velasquez. American Legion awards were presented to Matin Stephanos and Victor Goldkind, while D. A. R. awards went to Elizabeth Gillespie and Virgilio Velasquez. Elizabeth Gillespie gave the valedictory.

Patriotic Theme

Jere J. Crane, first assistant superintendent of schools, presented the 143 diplomas at Taft Junior High School.

Graduation exercises with a patriotic theme were held at Paul Junior High School, when 271 diplomas were presented and five students gave orations on "What the Youth of America Owes to America."

William Orndorff and Theodore Englehardt were announced as winners of perfect attendance and punctuality records for the three-year course. John Dewey, president of the class, received an award for the best scholarship record, with Donald Herndon as runner-up.

On a flag-draped platform, L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of education and former principal of Paul Junior High, presented the diplomas. Student speakers on the program were John Dewey, Charles Howard, Hope Harrison, Mary McLachlen and Donald Herndon.

Macfarland Exercises

Seventeen graduates were announced as winners of the highest averages at commencement exercises of Macfarland Junior High School. Gratz E. Dunkum, member of the Board of Education, presented diplomas.

Several gifts, including victrola records, were presented from the graduating class to the school by Helen Bacas, vice president. Patriotic orations were given by Donald Wolpe, William Harward, Grace Brasse and Sam Weisback. William Garner, class president, presided.

The students receiving highest averages were Bebe Boal, Donald Wolpe, Marie Del Vecchio, Anna Moore, Rosemary Scopi, Robert Haines, Betty Williams, Betty Ashby, Helen Norton, Frances Epstein, Norma Young, Anne Bell, Ernestine Rolls, Selma Wasserman, Nadine Cherner, Emily Kalichstein, Allan Bralove.

Twenty-eight graduates of Eliot Junior High School received the gold letter, "E," for outstanding records in scholarship and citizenship.

Letter Winners

Robert A. Maurer, member of the Board of Education, presented diplomas after a program in which numerous graduates participated. Twenty-four silver and 46 bronze "E's" also were awarded.

The gold letter winners were: Dorothy Eggeling, Norman Silverman, Jean Schmidt, Frances Peters, Bernice Levine, Glenn Kaiser, Norman Right, William Deck, Ralph Dodge, R. C. Roberts, jr. Herbert W. Smith, Mildred E. Betts, Jacqualin M. Brandt, Helen Mae Eskite, Vivian Harris, Elsie M. Hartzell, Thelma Lee Jones, Dorothy Kaufman, Margaret A. Kerr, Alys Kirby, Kathleen Lee, Rosa Irene Martin, Ruth A. Nave, Clara V. Neilson, Helen A. Perlman, Phyllis V. Richardson, Dorothy M. Wilkinson, Edith M. Wiseman.

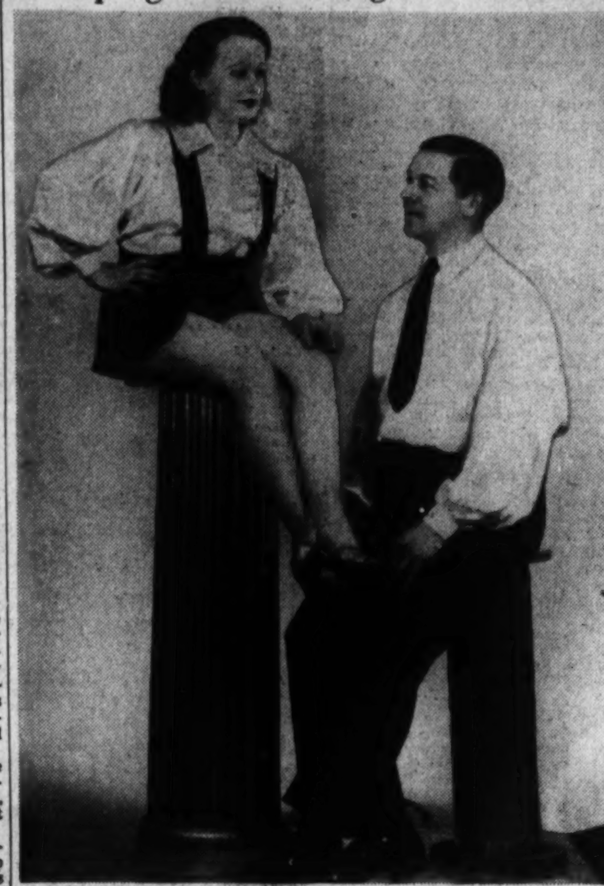

Jack Tennyson and Helen Borgstrom received awards for the best school citizens at promotion exercises of Anacostia Junior High School yesterday afternoon. Miss Jessie LaSalle, assistant superintendent of schools, presented 144 diplomas.

On the class program, built around the theme of "Pan Americanism," talks were made by Ellen Myrtle Graham, Daniel Herbert Margolis, Helen Borgstrom and Edward John Markham.

Dennison School Graduates 20

Twenty girls capped their skill in such subjects as cafeteria training, office practice and cosmetology with diplomas from Dennison Vocational School last night.

Harold Clark, head of the department of vocational education in Divisions 1-9 of the public schools, made the address to the graduates and presented the diplomas. Betty Moncure was valedictorian.

Helping to Make a 'Night of Thrills'

Frank and Alma are two of the performers who will entertain at a four-ring open-air circus at Griffith Stadium Friday night as part of the third annual "Night of Thrills," sponsored by Washington Masons for the Masonic and Eastern Star Home. Also scheduled are a baseball game at 4:30 p. m., a pageant and the coronation of the fete's "Queen"

Dr. Mann Learns to Make Debtors Pay Up or Blow Up

Let creditors of Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoo, be forewarned that when he returns from Africa next month he'll have the magical power to make them vanish into thin air if they refuse to pay up.

And ladies, don't be getting into an argument with Mrs. Mann because she now can win any battle of words, simply by mumbling a few mystic phrases.

The Smithsonian Institution which, in collaboration with the Firestone company, sent the Manns into the Liberian jungles last February to collect new specimens for Washington's Zoo, broke the news yesterday how the good doctor and his better half were recently initiated into one of West Africa's most mysterious societies and emerged fairly dripping with black magic.

"The ceremony took place in the dense forests of the hinterland during the blackness of a jungle night," said the Smithsonian, dropping its traditionally austere rhetoric for the creepy language of a pulp thriller.

As neophytes in the Snake Society of the Maho tribe, Dr. and Mrs. Mann "were bound by the most extreme vows never to reveal the most sacred mysteries which they were allowed to witness."

The tribe's medicine men at first received the visitors in eloquent silence—an ominous sign—but the hosts warmed up after the Manns' animal-hunting mission was explained to them by an interpreter.

What really broke the ice, though, were the brightly colored flags of the Explorers' Club and the Association of Women Geographers which Dr. and Mrs. Mann, respectively, planted in front of the medicine men's dormitory. The hosts were much impressed, insisting upon the guests telling them what the banners stood for.

Besides, the deep secret of a potent magic which will cause a thief or a repudiating debtor to curl up and die was imparted to the director of Washington's Zoo. His wife alone, however, was told what to do to win any sort of argument. She received, as a souvenir, a horn filled with "snake medicine" and was given the title of "Yangwa."

Dr. Mann wrote that the live snake used in the ritual was presented to him and he plans to bring it back to the United States late in July.

Horn-Tooting Driver Arrested As D. C. Police War on Noise

Sh-h-h . . . Don't look now . . . but there's a campaign on to cut down the Capital's noise.

Only yesterday police arrested a driver and charged him with unnecessary use of the auto horn. It's all part of a drive by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to see what can be done about the District's antinoise ordinances.

Noise, scientists say, affects the human nerves. If the noise happens to get on a District policeman's nerves, the affect is likely to be harmful—for you, because the law is frankly on the policeman's side.

For example, if local police were to carry out Maj. Brown's edict to the extreme, he could arrest you for crying out loud in the dark, or whistling after your dog.

This is no town for amateur bell-ringers. Professionals only can ring bells in District streets, states the law, and by professionals are meant street car operators, refuse collectors, drivers of emergency vehicles and scissors grinders.

The statute dealing with noise is two pages long and insists that it is unlawful to make any other than ordinary noise in the street, alley, public square, parking space, or in the home. There has as yet been no test case in the court appertaining to the bathtub soloist.

Maj. Brown, as many others, thinks the city is too noisy and would like to have his police quiet things down a bit. His orders to patrolmen are, "Take the necessary action." The action generally consists of a reprimand. Arrests are few. Half a dozen offenders faced the court during the past week and most of these found the judges lenient.

Lorton Chief Due to Head Penal System

Claude O. Botkin Chosen by Board Of Public Welfare To Succeed R. L. Huff

Claude O. Botkin, superintendent of the Lorton Reformatory, will succeed Ray L. Huff as general superintendent of the District's penal institutions, it was learned on reliable authority last night.

Tantamount to appointment, his name has been submitted to the Commissioners as choice of the Board of Public Welfare. The board controls Washington's prison system.

Huff will leave his post June 23 to become head of the Federal penitentiary at McNeil Island in Puget Sound, Wash. Although the Commissioners yesterday postponed action on Botkin's appointment, it was learned that Commissioner J. Russell Young has been instructed to investigate his qualifications and present recommendations at next Tuesday's meeting.

Botkin, former executive of the Federal prison at El Reno, Okla., was made superintendent of Lorton following the death of Col. William L. Peak, killed in an auto accident June 16, 1939.

It also was learned last night that Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District Jail, declined nomination to the post of general superintendent. Botkin was selected after careful consideration of candidates by the Welfare Board.

The name of Conrad Van Hyning, of Amherst, Va., also has been submitted to the Commissioners for the newly created position of principal assistant welfare director. The job pays $6,500 and was authorized in the 1941 budget. Van Hyning has been a welfare organizer in New York and Florida for several years.

Capital News In Brief

But There Was a Holdup

Walter A. Sellers, operator of a gas station at Second and H streets northeast, answered, "No, not that I know of" yesterday when an anonymous telephone voice queried: "Wasn't there a holdup around there a few minutes ago?"

Later Sellers reached for his wallet in the pocket of his pants hanging on the office wall. The wallet was gone and with it a $70 check, $45 in cash and his driver's permit.

Not So Hot

Delegates to the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers convention, some of whom have submitted bids for the project, yesterday heard the Government's plan to provide a heating system for the Washington Monument held up to ridicule.

"It's the height of asininity," declared Thomas H. Urdahl, Washington engineer, reporting the consensus of a committee considering the project. Conferees meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel expressed the opinion that a heating system, estimated to cost $30,000 or $40,000, would be a good thing—to forget.

Describes Battle

Heber H. Rice, president of the Federal Bar Association, in an address via WOL marking the 125th anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo, last night described the historic battle and outlined Napoleon's strategy.

WHAT MAKES THE D. C. WHEELS GO 'ROUND

HERE is the story—in pictures—of the District of Columbia. Its government. The men and women who work for the District. The Commissioners and the Congressional Committees who run Washington. Where the money comes from, how it is apportioned, how it is spent. The whole story, one of the most interesting ever presented by The Post to Washingtonians, in two complete eight-page picture sections in the Sunday Posts of June 23rd and 30th.

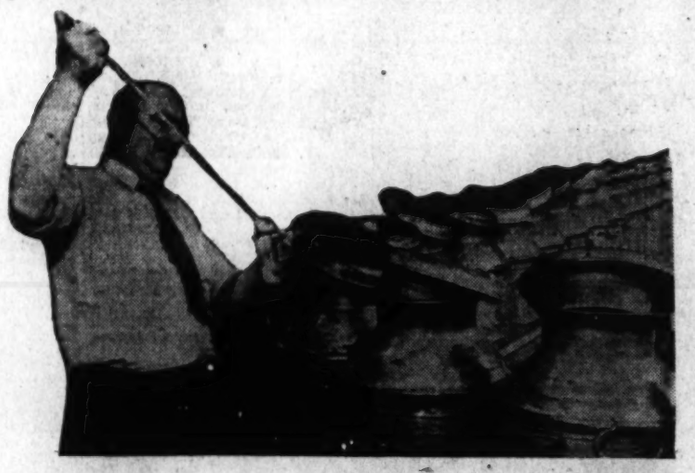

Three big departments—Fire, Police, Health—take up most of the first of these picture sections.

There will be a full page on the Fire Department, showing the daily routine of a fireman in a firehouse.

There will be two pages on the Police Department. One of these shows the work of law enforcement in Washington. Half a page will picture activities of the Police Boys' Clubs. The work of the Chief of Police, Major Brown, will be shown in half a page of pictures.

Traffic—Washington's number one problem—will also have a page, all to itself. You'll see a graphic portrayal of the existing traffic troubles, what causes them, what has been done to ease the pressure, what is planned, what the hitches are.

The Health Department, which rarely gets the spotlight, is nevertheless one of the most important in the District government. Fourteen hundred people are employed in this department, on such preventive work as food inspection and on actual medical care, the Gallinger Hospital, at Glenn Dale Sanatarium, and at the various clinics. There will be a two-page picture story of the Health Department's functions in this opening section on the District.

And the members of the Board of Commissioners and of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia will also be shown at work.

The second of these picture sections, scheduled for June 30th, will go into the rest of the District government's activities.

Do you have tax troubles? You'll be interested in the story of Jo V. Morgan, our one-man Tax Appeal Board.

Is there a soft spot in your heart for dogs? Here's your chance to see what happens to the strays who are gathered up in the Dog Pound.

Water is always a growing problem in an expanding metropolis like this one. The picture story of the Water Department will interest every citizen, showing how the water comes out of the river, is purified, pumped to Washington's four levels, and used.

Washington's recreational facilities are unusual, and so are the problems which face the Recreation Department. Every patron of municipal tennis courts, golf courses, picnic grounds, swimming pools, and parks will get new information from this part of the picture story.

Weights and Measures has the job of protecting the public in its purchases of food, gasoline and other merchandise. The A. B. C. Board has the knotty problem of liquor sales control.

The Engineering Department is another big one with many ramifications and problems affecting all of us. Engineering lays out the bridges, underpasses, and public buildings, then supervises their construction under contracts. Trees and the parking strip between street and sidewalk are also part of this department's concern—and Washington has more trees to worry about than any other city in the world. Engineering takes care of the refuse and sewage problems and is responsible for the inspection of buildings, plumbing, and steam boilers. Of course streets and highways come under Engineering's duties.

The Public Utilities Commission regulates the rates and services of the street car and bus companies, the gas and electric companies, taxis, sightseeing buses, and the telephone company. The question of rates charged for these services to Washingtonians is one for the P. U. C. to settle.

The Board of Public Welfare is in charge of direct relief and other forms of public assistance. Its penal division is responsible for the running of Lorton, the receiving home, and similar institutions. The aged and the orphans are taken care of by this Board.

A brand new conception of what it takes to run a city will be yours when you have absorbed these two picture sections. Never before has a city's civic functioning been portrayed in such a dramatic, easy-to-grasp manner.

If you have children who will be studying civics in school, be sure to save these sections for them after you have enjoyed seeing the District's story yourself.

And if you are not already a subscriber to the Sunday Post, place your order now.

Music Hath Charm and 'New Moon' Has Both

MacDonald and Eddy Costar at Vocal Best; Louis-Godoy Fight Films Just Over the Line; This, That and the Other About the Theater

EXCEPT FOR a bitterly ironic line in its closing sequence, "We are free, France is a Republic!," "New Moon," previewed yesterday afternoon by the messieurs and mademoiselles of the press, is "escapist" entertainment of the first rank. In the matter of plot, it even escapes from plausibility now and again—an indisputable prerogative of light or comic opera. Who cares?

BELL

It is in its music that this latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer costarrer for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy will distract any audience from the gloomy realities of the times. There is, of course, a somber reminder of present catastrophe in the fact that "New Moon" has its locales in France and the French colony in Louisiana, even if the time is back in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, but the best singing this lyrical team ever has done from the screen will make you forget all that.

In this new picturization of the operetta by Oscar Hammerstein 2nd., Frank Mandel and Laurence Schwab, with music by Sigmund Romberg, 10 of the song gems of the score have been retained—"Rondolet," "One Kiss," "Wanting You," "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise," "Largo," "Stout-Hearted Men," "Marianne," "Paree," "Lover Come Back to Me" and the "Shoe Shine Song."

Sung as handsomely as they are, I don't know what will take your mind off your worries if "New Moon" doesn't, when it comes along to the Palace screen, following the current "Mortal Storm."

I don't know whether it will be shown on the same bill or not, but there was also unspooled at yesterday's screening the second of Pete Smith's I. Q. tests, in which the spectator is his own scorekeeper, with from 10 to 15 seconds allowed for him to think up the right answers to 10 questions. It might be noted in their defense that the drama desks did considerably better with this one than they did in solving the whodunit business in "Slightly Honorable." Some of them got as many as two answers absolutely right! And, by the way, the ships that play so important a part in "New Moon" are the same ones that were used in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Treasure Island"—not that it matters.

Speaking of ships, the Wilson Line is inaugurating its popular "kiddies' day" on the new river streamliner, S. S. Mount Vernon, on Friday of this week. There will be special entertainment for the youngsters and rates on the steamer and on the rides at Marshall Hall Park will be cut in two for their benefit. These "kiddies' days" will continue throughout the summer on Monday and Friday of each week.

That enterprising entrepreneur, Master Sidney "Boxfighting" Lust, announces that the official motion pictures of tomorrow night's championship heaving and hauling between Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy will be shown at two of his Maryland theaters, beginning Saturday afternoon. The complete films will be shown simultaneously at the Hyattsville Theater and the Cameo, in Mount Rainier, closest to Washington of any of the houses in which the rumpus will be screened.

If you think you have been seeing double in the orchestra pit at the Earle these past few days, don't bother the optometrist. Freddy Clark, arranger and former conductor, has been swishing the baton during the absence of Jo Lombardi, on a visit to his parents in Atlantic City. Jo will be back on the podium—slang for job—today. Looked like old times, at that.

Dots and Dashes

Must be that "The Birth of a Nation" hasn't been berthing 'em too well down at the Mount Vernon drive-in theater, ferninst Alexandria on the Richmond highway . . . It comes off a day ahead of time, to make way for "The Whole Town's Talking" and "Blondie Brings up Baby," opening on the outsize screen tonight . . . Thanks to Paul J. Schwarz, attending the American Federation of Musicians convention in Indianapolis, for the pretty postage card of my "home town" . . . He got the State right but not the burg . . . Nice thought, anyway . . . You will be able to get both an eyeful and a mouthful at the Earle next week . . . "The Girl in the Star"—one of the Roxyettes—will float over the audience and distribute packages of ice cream to the patrons whose tongues are hanging out the farthest . . . And over at Loew's Capitol, at long last, Bonnie Baker and Orrin Tucker and his orchestra will headline the stage bill, beginning Friday . . . It has been a long wait . . . That was Ruth Petty who presented the golf trophy to Miles Appleberry for winning the John Colpoys Tournament on the East Potomac links last Monday . . . If Mr. Appleberry places a petty value on that one, he's crazy.

Heigho-Alas-and-Alackaday Note

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 18.

Mary Beth Hughes, who was so good in "Four Sons" and is even better in "The Great Profile," nearly drove her pals crazy when she first arrived here, trying to find out all about agents. She was taken to Zeppo Marx, who would have none of her. While she was trying out for Earl Carroll's show about 18 months ago, Bill Stevens saw her on the street, signed her, got her a test at Metro, they signed her. And a week later, she was having dates with Franchot Tone, Jimmy Stewart, and Mickey Rooney. When Metro decided to drop her option, they discovered she was working in their picture, "The Women." Now, Twentieth Century is grooming her for bigger and better pictures—and dates perchance!

HOPPER

Speaking of "The Great Profile," the first day Jack Barrymore worked, Darryl Zanuck came on the set to pay his respects. Jack was dressed in Hamlet's costume. Zanuck said, "You know, Jack, I've never seen you do 'Hamlet.' I wonder if you'd do the soliloquy for me?" "Sure—if you'll photograph it and turn the sound on."

He did it, without a blow-up, and gave one of his finest performances. But you'll never see it—that's been added to Zanuck's souvenirs.

It seems such a pity that in this picture you'll get only a satire of the finest actor in the Barrymore family, when he does the real thing so well. Only a few short years ago, the Barrymores were hailed as the Royal Family, and it's a crying shame—at least, to me—that now Jack only burlesques himself.

Ray Milland's showing a letter he got from one of the guides to movie stars' homes, which said that if he could get permission for them to take the customers through the studios, they could pay him $5 a bus load.

When I asked Eugene Pallette if it were true that he was retiring from the screen, he said, "That's what I read in the papers. But I understand it takes money to retire—or wouldn't you know?" My answer was "No."

Some people get their start in pictures in a cock-eyed manner. The red-headed model, Dana Dale, had her first chance in "No Time for Comedy." But you won't even see her. She's the voice emoting off stage while you're watching Jimmy Stewart and Roz Russell do their reactions.

" . . . and when you finish your rounds and come home, there's chicken in the icebox for you . . . What? . . . A fork? . . . No, dear, I won't leave a fork for you. I know you'd rather rend it limb from limb. Make it easy—by pretending it's Hitler. G'night."

11 P. M.: "Wendell Willkie's son, Philip, wasn't graduated from Princeton, as you revealed. But this is the reason," a Princeton senior states at Fefe's new Cafe Pierre. "Young Willkie wrote a thesis in which he praised his father's utilities. He's really a bright boy, but it was all unfortunate. There are two professors of the same name—one a liberal, the second a conservative. The liberal marked his thesis—and flunked him" . . . "Well, I mustn't do broadcasts for any hook-ups," Elliott Roosevelt confides at the Stork. "It seems I'm a controversial subject" . . . "The March of Time's newest release, 'U. S. Navy,' included a scene showing the new, secret bombsight, which all Europe has been trying to get," a film executive states at the Barberry Room. "But the March of Time, upon the request of the Navy Department, removed that scene and delivered the cut film to Washington.

12 P. M.: "We're fixing up our new home in Gracie Square," Raymond Massey sighs in Sardi's. "It makes me feel a bit like Nero—fiddling with a new house while the world's burning" . . . "When Justice Frank Murphy calls upon Evalyn Walsh McLean's daughter," a Washington official informs at the Riviera, "he arrives in a beige-colored car and wears a suit and hat to match it" . . . "Warner Bros. recently made 'It All Came True,' a movie about me and my wife," Bill Hardey, at his Gay Nineties, tells Ted Husing. "They wanted me to sign some form of waiver. Mark Hellinger showed me a preview of the film and said: "Don't worry, Bill. You're taken care of all right.' Then they showed me the film. In the opening shot—bang—I murder a man. But we all love Mark—so I signed the waiver."

1 A. M.: "My new band opened at the Chatterbox, in N. J., last week," Raymond Scott reports at Toots Shor's. "He played my own composition, 'Minuet in Jazz.' The house manager then asked me not to play it—because the band that was there two weeks ago had used that tune."

2 A. M.: "The General Motors officials who operate the Futurama at the World's Fair distribute to all who visit the exhibit buttons reading 'I Have Seen the Future,'" a World's Fair employe reports at Lum Fong's. "They didn't know it was a quote from Lincoln Steffens, who said, after seeing Russia: 'I have seen the future, and it works'" . . . "Jinx Falkenberg, the model and show girl, has a new 12-cylinder car," a director informs at Kelly's Stable. "She has a pretty girl as chauffeur."

3 A. M.: "In the bike races at Coney Island, a promoter informs at Jimmy Kelly's, "are Alf Letourner of France, Peden of Canada, Killan & Vopel of Germany and Debaets of Belgium. Letourner at first refused to ride in a race with the Germans—but had to fulfill his contract. He's just received a summons to return to France" . . . "Those two Kate Smith jokes which Jimmy Durante pulled in 'Keep Off the Grass' have been yanked from the show," a member of the cast reports at the Beachcomber. "Miss Smith's representative threatened suit" . . . "Clare Boothe has a new show," an agent reveals at the 18 Club. "It's called 'War in the Ritz.'"

4 A. M.: "I just spoke to the French Embassy," a young man states at the Versailles. "I was assured that Friday, at noon, Premier Raynaud had a phone conversation with President Roosevelt" . . . "I'm celebrating my tenth wedding anniversary next week," Eddie Davis, the writer, tells Eddie Davis, the cafe owner, at Leon & Eddie's. "Ten years ago I was a cab driver. I wore a high hat and drove my cab to my bride's home to take her family to the wedding. Then I became Eddie Cantor's gag writer, went to Hollywood, wrote George White's Scandals and now the new Jolson show. For our tenth anniversary we'll retrace that same cab ride, but with a driver up front" . . . "Tony Galento got a Father's Day gift yesterday from his son," states Harry Mendel, Galento's manager, at the Kit Kat. "The baby gave Tony a black eye by hitting him playfully."

5 A. M.: "Rene Chambrun, the descendant of Lafayette who just arrived here, spoke to some of my friends today," a corner-sitter relates at Reuben's. "He was in Flanders and said that Fifth Columnists caused havoc there. Phony orders were issued to commanding officers, who believed them—and divisions of troops were surrendered that way" . . . "Clare Boothe, who returned to America, saw a performance of her 'Margin for Error' last night," a backstage employe reports at Lindy's. "She came after the first act—in which Otto Ludwig Preminger, the Nazi Consul, is killed, and said: 'I wouldn't see the first act because I can't stand a live Nazi.' Elspeth Eric then asked her: 'Doesn't all this seem trivial to you now?' And Clare, who had seen destruction in Belgium and France, answered: 'There's nothing like a few bombs before breakfast to clear your head.'"

6 A. M.: . . . "and if you've sent off the column, why don't you go to sleep? . . . What, dear? . . . You're looking at baby pictures in a magazine? . . . And you can't tell if that one's a Japanese or a Chinese baby? . . . Oh, it's simple. If the baby hasn't a camera—then it's Chinese."

Ruth's Pet Salad Wins Honor Spot

Ruth Hussey had her name printed in big bold type in the most popular building on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio—the commissary, where thousands of summer tourists, newspapermen and officials will see it.

Under the choice of salads, a visitor will now find the "Ruth Hussey Salad," so named because of Miss Hussey's consistency in daily lunches. The new specialty is composed of a vegetable plate with fresh shrimp or crabmeat and Thousand Island Dressing.

"Only three other M.-G.-M. stars have had their favorites named after them," said Frances Edwards, in charge of the commissary. "They are Carmel Meyers, Lon Chaney and Joan Crawford."

'Real Hollywood' Actress Signed

Virginia Grey, who plays the youthful romantic interest with Dan Daily, jr., in "The Captain Is a Lady," has been signed on a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on the strength of her work in this picture.

Miss Grey, born in Hollywood, the daughter of a director of silent pictures, gravitated into pictures, scoring her first hit as the feminine lead in "Thunder Afloat" with Wallace Beery.

Vivien Leigh And Olivier on 'Met' Screen

"21 Days Together" Filmed Before Stars' Rise to Popularity

By Richard L. Coe

"21 DAYS TOGETHER." Columbia release of an English picturization of a story by John Galsworthy, "The First and the Last," adapted to the screen by Basil Dean and Graham Greene, costarring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, with Leslie Banks, Francis L. Sullivan, David Horne, William Dewhurst, Frederick Lloyd, Robert Newton, Esme Percy, Elliot Mason, Arthur Young, Hay Petrie, Meinhart Maur, Morris Harvey, Lawrence Hanray, Fred Groves and Aubrey Mallalieu. Directed by Basil Dean. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Their current vogue has resurrected for Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier a minor joint effort which in 1938 might have been passable entertainment, "Twenty-one Days Together." But film-making has made such strides since, that the Metropolitan's first-run film seems literally to consume three weeks.

Fundamentally the story's unconvincing motivation makes one suspect that this, too, was a minor achievement for Author John Galsworthy. Triteness of dialogue and a plodding tempo hamper the picture still further.

The erstwhile Scarlett O'Hara and Max de Winter are called upon to play two ill-starred lovers. To save herself from starvation three years before our story opens, the girl had married an unpleasant chap in Paris. Marriage was shorter lived than starvation and after a week of marriage the Russian lass reached England and security.

Brother's Pride a Factor

The young man is one of those scapegoats of a well-bred English family. His income is paid quarterly and he runs through it with post-war eclat. His brother, another unpleasant fellow, is about to become a judge and, when our hero finds it necessary to murder his lady's husband, the ambitious barrister becomes terribly upset!

We are asked to believe that the young hero will be convicted of a murder committed in self-defense upon a fellow whom events have proven to be a thief, a bigamist and a blackmailer and that this questionable disgrace will keep his ambitious brother from the bench. Such a struggle of false pride and minor murder seems incredibly empty in these chaotic days.

Preparatory Soul-Suffering

But all this soul-suffering in "Twenty-one Days Together" has been effective prepping for Miss Leigh in "Gone With the Wind" and "Waterloo Bridge" and for Olivier in "Wuthering Heights" and "Rebecca." And it is the work of these two principals that is the reason for the Metropolitan's exhumation of the relict in question.

You'll find Miss Leigh as charmingly vixenish as ever and Olivier looking many moons younger. Courtroom scenes and at-home views of the justices are quietly humorous, even if unintentionally so. Leslie Banks as the brother on guard for his honor "hams" with anguished looks and clenched hands to little avail. The numerous supporting roles are played by less-known English performers.

The Metropolitan's short subjects include "Dangerous Dollars," a study in counterfeiting with its settings in this city and music from "The Lone Ranger;" a "Loony Tune" cartoon, and a characteristic Charlie Chase comedy that is the most honestly amusing subject on the bill.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of ("Screen Snapshots.")

Hollywood, June 18 (INS).—Robert Benchley had barely unpacked his bags in New York when he received a wire telling him to return to Hollywood immediately for a featured role in Universal's "Hired Wife," which has Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Virginia Bruce in top spots. Bob, whose M-G-M shorts are so tremendously popular, will play a very addled attorney. Producer-Director William Seiter plans to start the picture rolling any day now.

LOUELLA PARSONS

This isn't Bob's first appearance in a feature. He had some hilarious drunk scenes in "China Seas" and was also in "Broadway Melody of 1938," "Dancing Lady," "Piccadilly Jim" and others.

Embers of a deal between Maurice Evans and Warner Brothers are bursting into flames again. (M-m-m-m, ain't I poetic?) The Shakespearean actor passed up a chance to appear with Bette Davis in "The Letter" in order to make a tour with "King Richard II." He's due in Hollywood today, however, and will lend a much more interested ear to Warner overtures this time. If he's as good on the screen as he is on the stage he'll be a definite asset to any studio.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Binnie Barnes and Mike Frankovich are laughing at those reports that they've cooled. They say they'll wed in September as scheduled; Mrs. Leon Schinasi arrives soon to spend the summer with her daughter and son-in-law, Bubbles and Wayne Morris, who appear to have settled their difficulties; the Henry Wilcoxsons christen their two-month-old Wendie Joan at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church Wednesday afternoon; Frances Meighan, widow of the beloved Tommy, has averted that threatened pneumonia.

Alice Faye, Judy Canova and Roy Rogers, all hospitalized at the Cedars of Lebanon, have been whiling away the hours sending puzzling notes to one another; Betty Grable is more than casually interested in Alexis Thompson, wealthy New York manufacturer. Betty tells friend when her divorce from Jackie Coogan becomes final it will stay that way; Mrs. Harry Brand heads a committee for a garden party to be held at Carmel Myers Blum's home on June 25 to raise money for an ambulance; Cesar Romero's temperature is almost down to normal, but he'll have to stay in the hospital two weeks more.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Washington Wins Poughkeepsie Feature Race

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Ohio, June 18.—Let's take another look at the league—the American League:

POVICH

BOSTON—The Red Sox are still out there winning, in front, despite a pitching staff that isn't supposed to be of pennant caliber, but you can't argue against percentage points. Joe Cronin's club at this point is the team to beat. It is definitely a better club now than at the outset of the season. Lefty Grove is winning again after an unaccountable slump. The pitching situation is getting to be a happy one, in fact. Herb Hash is blossoming into the kind of a work-horse pitcher that every vulnerable staff needs. The Red Sox power is offsetting any pitching deficiencies the club has. Jimmy Foxx is in the midst of one of his banner seasons. Of late, Joe Cronin, a distinct liability at bat for the first two months of the season, has begun to lend his old-time power to the picture. There isn't anything the matter with the Red Sox's grit. A week ago they lost their league lead. Look at 'em now.

DETROIT—Here's the surprise outfit of the league. There are indications now that the Tigers will have a powerful voice in the distribution of first-division honors. They are even a pennant threat. The Tigers' power can just about match Boston's. And the Tigers have the pitching. Pipe the performances of Tommy Bridges, Buck Newsom and "Schoolboy" Rowe. And Del Baker has come up with likely lads in Harold Newhouser and Johnny Gorsica. The Tigers can turn on the heat with Hank Greenberg, Rudy York, Charley Gehringer, Barney McCosky and Pinky Higgins belting the ball. The left side of their infield, comprised of Dick Bartell and Higgins, wasn't supposed to stand up, but you can't quarrel with the facts. They are doing very well. Any mistakes by the team in first place and the Tigers could very well be up there.

CLEVELAND—Here's the unknown quantity of the league. The Indians will go just as far as a pretty good pitching staff and a magnificent second-base, shortstop combination will take a club. But the Indians probably will go down fighting—among themselves. Dissension may be wrecking a pretty good ball club. They've stayed within a pitch and putt of the league lead despite their troubles with Manager Vitt, which ought to attest to the team's skill But there isn't any great hitting power in the Cleveland outfield, in contrast to the situation on every other first-division club. The Indians are habitually a bad club on the road, where they play half of their games. Bob Feller, Johnny Allen, and Al Milner are swell pitchers and doubtless could win a pennant for other clubs in the league, but the Indians are profaning their pitching and their defense by the lack of a consistent attack and internal troubles that are inimical to any team's pennant ambitions.

NEW YORK—The fellow who would have ventured the prediction that the Yankees wouldn't hit in 1940 would have been seized and incarcerated as a violent case, but that is what has been happening. As late as last week, the supposedly murderous Yanks were the league's weak-sisters at bat. Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey were in horrible slumps and Murder, Inc., has not been functioning. Added to those woes are the defections in the Yankee pitching staff. Red Ruffing has not been winning. Lefty Gomez is on the sidelines and Johnny Murphy no more is a star relief pitcher. But somehow there is no inclination to count the Yankees out. They still have the best infield in the league. And they have power that may start exploding any day. Tab the Yanks. They can take it all, and we think they will.

CHICAGO—The White Sox are at the top of a second division that has begun to conform to the second division, but apparently they haven't the ghost of a chance to move into the first four. But they can stay where they are, in fifth place, because they have a fine infield, a certain amount of pitching strength in Ted Lyons, Johnny Rigney, Jack Knott and Al Smith and the most aggressive spirit in the league. They can't hit much, and defensively their outfield is not good, but they must be rated as tops in the second division.

ST .LOUIS—That team in sixth place is most certainly the Browns, and they look very becoming in that spot. No longer are the Browns the doormat of the league. It's been years since the St. Louis club took two games in a single day from the Yankees, but they did that last week-end. Fred Haney has surrounded himself with more good ball players than a St. Louis club has boasted since 1922. The Browns' power is not to be laughed off. Vernon Kennedy is a pitcher who can stop a losing streak and George McQuinn is the best first baseman in the league. Johnny Berardino is blossoming as a slugging second baseman and the team can carry Don Heffner for his fielding. The Browns' outfield is not wonderful, but it is not bad. The team is definitely a trouble-maker.

PHILADELPHIA—Whenever the A's get pitching, which is rare, they are tough to beat There's power on the Philadelphia club, with Bob Johnson and Frankie Hayes a potent one-two punch. The A's chief difficulty is in pitching and the infield. They're leading the league in errors, most of them chargeable to Connie Mack's rookie infielders. The A's are not going very far in the race, but the kind of ball they can play will serve to tighten it. Like the Browns they have lost their identity as push-overs.

WASHINGTON—Here's a club that doesn't belong in last place. It doesn't belong in the first division, either, for that matter. It's not quite a good ball club, but if Bucky Harris could dig up one more winning pitcher, and a more skillful first baseman, it could be. Despite their recent slump, the Nats are a club that can get runs. But after he has pitched Dutch Leonard, Harris is in a spot. The Nats can finish anywhere from fifth to eighth, and fifth place is not so remote.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 18.—Is Joe Louis slipping, or is the calliope department of Mike Jacobs' office just trying to shoot a jet of live steam into the Louis-Godoy fight?

The "build down" is as much a part of fight ballyhoo as the "build up" whenever one guy looks like too much of a sure shot against the other, the publicity boys must go around trying to find breaks in the seams of the favorite and in all public declarations must regard the underdog as the model for superman. Right now Louis is in the throes of his worst "build down." The public has shown a marked disinterest in those of his fights where it is just a matter of how long his opponent will last, or how badly he will be beaten up if he hangs around for the full distance. Hence it is the job of Jacobs' industrious publicists to do what they can to make him look like a drowsy tramp and the other fellow like Tarzan in the nick of time.

CONSIDINE

By curious coincidence, there is a slight basis for these alarmist reports this time. Louis has indeed looked listless in his gym workouts. His interests, now that he is a landed squire, swing more and more away from the ring.

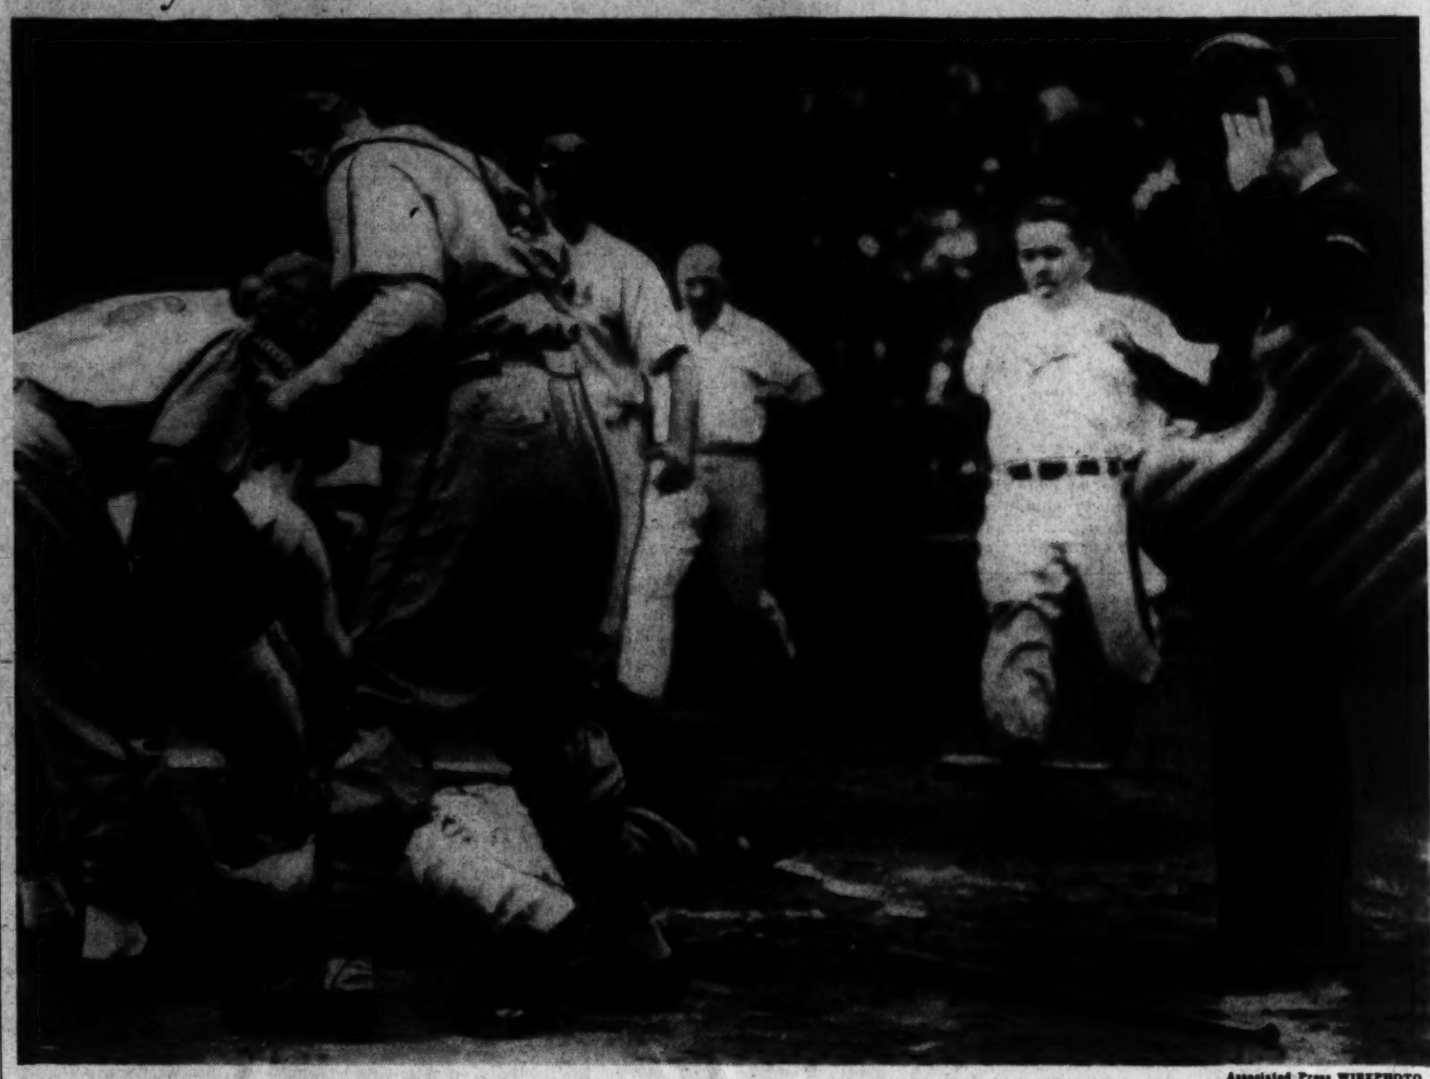

There is an old truism in the fight game that a champion is never as good again as he was the day he won the title. Something goes out of him the moment they raise his hand—some indefinable fire and resolution. Henceforth he fights to retain, not to achieve. He loses his hunger for the fancied sweets of the championship.

This may or may not be true of Louis. He fought keenly and smartly the night he beat Jim Braddock for the title, and that final right-hand punch must have been one of the hardest blows ever landed in a ring. But he was probably even better the night of the second Schmeling fight. Perhaps he convinced himself that he wasn't champion until he beat Max, who had knocked him out and who had been gypped out of his claim to a title fight against Braddock. Anyway, Louis was sheer baleful murder that night. He hasn't been that way since. It took him 11 rounds to finish off Bob Pastor, after bouncing Robert off the floor like a tennis ball in the early rounds. He was careless and close to being beaten by Tony Galento. And he fought like a man with money in the bank against Godoy.

We think he can hit as hard as ever, and he must be a little smarter than he was. He certainly shows it when you speak with him. He's just 26, isn't taking on the weight most of us thought he'd take on and takes better care of himself than do most of his critics. But it's a cinch that he isn't the cool, calculating killer he was the night he tried to murder Schmeling, or the night he stalked Braddock.

But he can still become that kind of killer. He has a strange pride in his title and in his personal appearance. Nobody took a tougher licking from him than did Galento, after Galento made him look ungainly and ridiculous by knocking him down in the third. Godoy certainly should have aroused him, for Arturo often made him look simple. But he couldn't arouse the savagery he needed to win by a knockout. Half the time in that fight Louis seemed to be enveloped in the same hypnotic spell which settles over a man looking at an ape in a zoo. The next day he got sore at Godoy when he read the press' reaction to his listless fight. If Godoy makes a fool of Joe by his squatting tactics Thursday, and Louis is sensitive enough to feel the hairs on his neck twitch with irritation and indignation, Godoy is going to get knocked out. We think that will happen along about the sixth round.

Ducky Medwick Gets a Hit—in the Head—From Former Card Teammate

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Here's an idea of the uproar at Ebbets Field yesterday when Ducky Medwick's head stopped a ball pitched by his old St. Louis teammate, Pitcher Bob Bowman, in the Dodger-Cards game. Just recently traded by the Cards, Ducky is shown unconscious on the ground. Several Dodgers rushed Bowman but were restrained by umpires. Accident came in the first inning and sent Medwick to Caledonian Hospital. Cards won, 7-5, in 10 innings

Huskies Pull To Victory Over Cornell

Favorites Triumph By One Length With Syracuse Third; Race Run in Semidarkness

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 18.—The University of Washington varsity outsprinted Cornell's Eastern sprint champions tonight to win the 4-mile championship of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association in the second-slowest race of the Hudson River Regatta has known.

In a thrilling duel that developed just as expected between the best of the West and the best of the East, the Huskies whipped the last half mile of the downstream course into a lather to triumph by a margin that was the subject of wide and heated discussion.

It will go into the records as Washington, 22 minutes 42 seconds; Cornell, 22 minutes 45 3-5 seconds. Even on a slow river, that difference means about three-quarters of a length. The experts on the observation train, admitting they looked at the finish line from an angle, didn't see how it could have been more than a quarter length at the outside.

Two-Team Race

This not only was the second-slowest varsity race, but probably the slowest entire regatta of all the 43 in the I. R. A. books. It started at 3 o'clock with a dreary 2-mile freshman race; continued at 4 with a misguided attempt to start the junior varsities, three of which promptly swamped in the first half mile, and continued on through postponements until the eight varsity shells finished their battle in fast-growing darkness.

For the last mile of the four, Washington and Cornell had the varsity race all to themselves. The Ithacans, striving for their first victory since 1930, seemed to have pushed their bow inches in front a half mile from home. But the Huskies, paced by Sophomore Ted Garhart, came on again to bring

Indians Edge Out Nats Under Lights, 2 to 1

Hits by Weatherly, Hemsley In Ninth Bring Victory Over Leonard; Al Smith Is Victor

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, June 18.—The night followed the day, as usual, and the pattern was otherwise unaltered this evening with the Nats losing another ball game—their fifth straight. This time it was a 2-to-1 nocturnal job which they tossed off to the Cleveland Indians.

It was an eerie affair played to the accompaniment of a howling wind, lightning flashes, the cymbal crash of thunder and a last anguished moan from hapless Bucky Harris as the winning run filtered across the plate on a horrible but pardonable lapse by Shortstop Cecil Travis.

Lightning could have struck with no more ruinous finality than the last play of the game which wrenched the deciding run from Dutch Leonard with two out in the ninth. Here was the situation in the ninth inning:

The score was tied at 1-to-1. Leonard easily disposed of the first two Cleveland hitters. Roy Weatherly sliced a double into leftfield. Hemsley batted a routine grounder toward Travis and then—horrors, his vision partly obscured by Weatherly who crossed in front of him, Travis permitted the ball to roll through his legs for a cheap single, and the Indians had the ball game.

12,449 Hide Away

Their first venture into the night league found the Nats playing to a crowd of 12,449 customers, hidden in the darkness of the stands of vast Municipal Stadium as six huge towers sprayed a brilliant light on the diamond.

The Nats were a feeble, almost futile, outfit against the lefthanded pitching of Al Smith, who bears the label of a National League castoff. Smith surrendered only five hits to Washington and was pitching two hit ball until the Nats achieved a luck anointed run to tie the score in the sixth at 1-1.

It was a stirring duel between Leonard and Smith, with the latter achieving his seventh victory of the season against one defeat, and Leonard incurring his sixth loss. Leonard gave up nine hits to the Indians, but he pitched magnificent ball to keep the Nats in the game.

Dipsey-Doodler at Heighth

Leonard's knuckler was at its dipsy-doodle best under the lights, and he drew the applause of even the hostile Cleveland fans as he pitched himself out of a series of threatening situations in the early innings. In each of the first five innings, the first man to face Leonard reached base.

He was on a spot in the first inning when Travis' wild throw on an infield hit put Boudreau on second with none out, but he held the Indians scoreless. In the third inning, Boudreau led off with a triple, but Leonard turned them back with the bases full by striking out Beau Bell and disposing of Chapman on a short fly.

One of Leonard's knuckle balls boomeranged in the fourth inning

Racing Luck Hits Routt, New Trainer; 2 Long Shots Win

E. Roy Routt, of Silver Spring, who started training race horses only this season, yesterday enjoyed his most successful afternoon's work when two of four longshots he handled romped home to victory at Charles Town. His other two entries finished second and ran out.

Routt scored with Tar Miss, at $52.60 in the first, and Millie O, $25.60 in the eighth. Both horses are owned by Mrs. A. C. Paul, of Silver Spring.

In the third race Routt sent Stonehaven out to finish second, paying $3.60 and $3, after Night Play, his only failure, ran out of the money in the second.

Homer in 10th Beats Bosox For Browns

Berardino Smashes One With Bases Full To Triumph, 11 to 7

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 18.—In as melodramatic a finish as any home fan could dream of, Johnny Berardino, the Browns' sturdy shortstop, smashed out a home run with the bases loaded in the tenth inning today to defeat the league-leading Boston Red Sox, 11 to 7.

The Browns, rapidly convincing even the skeptics that they are not the doormats of previous years, fought the Red Sox right down the line, pushing a run across in the ninth inning on Don Heffner's single, an error and Walter Judnich's single to tie the score.

George McQuinn opened the tenth by working Jim Bagby for a base on balls. Harlond Clift doubled, McQuinn pulling up at third. Lyn Lary batted for Bill Trotter, the Browns' winning pitcher, and was passed intentionally. Berardino then came through with the grand slam.

It was the fifth time during the game that the Browns had filled the bases.

They did it first in the third inning when they rammed Fritz Ostermueller, Boston's starting pitcher, for four runs. Bobby Swift opened the frame with a double and Myril Hoag drove in the last two runs

Cards Beat Dodgers; Medwick Badly Hurt

Outfielder Beaned in First Inning, to Be Out About Three Weeks; Slaughter's Homer In Eighth Decides Eleven-Inning Game

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 18.—The Brooklyn Dodgers were sidetracked again today by the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 5, in an eleven-inning struggle that was marred by the serious injury of Joe Medwick, who was struck on the head by a pitched ball.

It was the sixth straight triumph for the Cardinals, still unbeaten since Billy Southworth assumed the managership, and the fourth defeat in a row for the Dodgers.

Brooklyn was placed in jeopardy of being tied for second in the National League by the New York Giants.

Medwick Knocked Out

Medwick, the talented outfielder acquired by the Dodgers from St. Louis only last week, was knocked out in the first inning by a ball pitched by Bob Bowman and removed to a hospital where his injury was diagnosed as a brain concussion—likely to keep him out of the line-up for about three weeks.

Medwick was the fourth batter to face Bowman. The first three hit safely for two runs and when Ira Hutchinson replaced Bowman after the accident, the Dodgers scored two more tallies on another hit and an error.

But the Cards charged right back in the second with three runs off Luke Hamlin on a single, a walk, Joe Orengo's triple and a long fly.

Riggs Erratic Winning Clay Courts Match

Chicagoan Displays Poor Form to Beat 2d-Round Opponent

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 18.—Bobby Riggs, ruler of American tennis since Don Budge turned pro, looked like anything but the national champion today in the second round of the national clay courts tournament.

The little Chicago star bungled his way through a five-set battle with William Reedy, of Los Angeles, before finally winning by 3—6, 7—9, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2. Reedy played steady tennis and took advantage of Riggs' errors in the first two sets.

All the seeded Amercans who played today survived, but two of the three English entrants fell by the wayside.

Charles Hare, former Davis Cup mainstay, was shunted to the sidelines by young Jimmy Evert, of Chicago, 3—6, 6—2, 6—1, 9—7. In the women's division, Nina Brown was eliminated by another hometown product, Catherine Malcolm, 6—3, 6—4.

Most of the other seeded players advanced easily. Frank Parker, of Pasadena, seeded next to Riggs, breezed through Charles Mattman, Los Angis, 6—2, 6—2, 6—0, and third-seeded Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, eliminated Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati, 6—1, 6—2, 7—5.

Crowded Field Thunders by in Fourth at Charles Town

Rushing past the stands for the first time in the fourth race at Charles Town yesterday, the field of eight was so closely bunched that only the trained eyes of the chartmakers could distinguish them. When this picture was made the chart callers spotted them in this order: Pukka Heaven, Dead Gracie, Postponement, Ivonia, Orkil's Russet, Aylward, Reigh Tetrach and Bad Dreams. Ivonoa won, with Postponement second and Reigh Tetrach third

Mrs. Walper Wins First D. C. Women's Golf Match on 19th

Mrs. Davy Surprises Champion

Brilliant Comeback Gives Titlist Close Victory; Mrs. Kreuzburg Scores 79

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Leo Walper, the defending titleholder in the District Women's Golf Championship at Kenwood, will report for the second round today but yesterday afternoon on the seventeenth tee $1 would have netted you $20 that she would never make it.

At the time Mrs. Walper was 2 down with two to play against Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional Club's champion, and the former was not on the short-hole green with her tee shot. But the complexion of the match changed quickly. Mrs. Walper chipped within 5 feet and dropped a telling putt to keep the match alive, won the eighteenth with a five and the nineteenth with another five to climax her brief but effective comeback with a 1-up victory.

Stole Whole Show

The Walper-Davy match naturally took the play away from the other seven first-round encounters in the chimpionship flight but second in importance of the day, a 3 and 1 victory by Washington's youthful club champion, Sallie Whipple, over Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, of the host club, fashioned the best round of the day, a 79 as she accounted for the defeat of Mrs. J. W. Godfrey, Congressional, 3 and 2. Mrs. Kreuzburg, whose 83 Monday was second to the medalist, played the first nine in 37 strokes, two over par, and was three up. She had par for a 40 on the back nine when the match ended, 3 and 2. Mrs. Godfrey was out in 40, comparable with any other first nine of the day, but all it netted her was a three-hole deficit.

Medalist Moves Up

Medalist Mrs. Walter R. Stokes advanced but not before Kenwood's most improved golfer of the year, Mrs. Woodleif Thomas, had thrown a scare into the Middle Atlantic titleholder. Mrs. Stokes was out in 41 and two up but Mrs. Thomas won 10 and 11 and the match was even. They halved the twelfth before Mrs. Stokes' experience and a pair of three-put greens by Mrs. Thomas netted the favorite at 3 and a 2 triumph.

Former champion Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood's other survivor out of six qualifiers, was well on her game as she defeated a clubmate, Mrs. H. W. Sharpe, 6 and 5, after turning 5 up with a 39. Manor's champion, Mrs. L. G. Pray, eliminated Mrs. J. R. Harrington, Capital, with an 80-brand of golf while Louise Claytor scored, 3 and 2, over Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood.

Miss Houghton Scores

Elizabeth Houghton, Chevy Chase, was up all the way as she also won, 6 and 5, over Mrs. E. C. Lupton, of the host club, and her match with Mrs. Pray today will be one of the best.

The luck of the numerical draw frowned on Mrs. Walper. After her first round scare against Mrs. Davy, she runs up against Mrs. Stokes today in a match that will eliminate one of the two tournament favorites. Miss Whipple, who plays tennis and golf equally as well, will be the underdog again, this time against Mrs. Meckley, while the other quarter-final engagement pits the evenly matched Mrs. Kreuzburg and Miss Clayton. Championship flight matches start at 10 o'clock.

'League of Nations' Wrestling Card at Arena Tomorrow

Promoter Joe Turner is planning an "international situation" of his own tomorrow night at his weekly rassle show in the Fourteenth and W streets arena.

Tomorrow's business gives Polaks, Swedes, Spaniards, Italians, Hungarians, Irishmen, Russians—everything but carrier pigeons, with the Swedish Angel swapping snarls with Gino Martinelli in the main affair.

The semifinal serves up Karol Krauser, of the Polish Krausers, against the Irish Angel. In the supporting roles, Felix Slovikowski meets Matros Kirilenko, who says he's just an old Cossack; Michele Leone meets Juan Olaguivel, and Lou Farino meets John Bognar. Figure out the nationalities for yourselves.

This was the way the game continued until Lavagetto hit a homer in the seventh to give Brooklyn what looked like a satisfactory margin. Then Hamlin relaxed and served up one of his well known home run balls to Enos (Country) Slaughter with a man on base in the eighth and St. Louis went on to win.

Hugh Casey, who relieved Hamlin with two on and two out in the tenth, walked Terry Moore, the first man up in the eleventh. Although Newt Kimball then took over, Casey was charged with the loss. Moore was sacrificed to second, stole third and came on home when substitute Shortstop Johnny Hudson threw wild. Stu Martin and Pitcher Morton Cooper, who came on duty in the seventh and got credit for the victory, hit doubles for the final run.

to set up the first run of the ball game. After Mack led off with a single and moved to second on an infield out, Leonard fanned Smith, but a wild pitch moved Mack to third. In this crisis, Boudreau grounded to Pofahl who made a magnificent stop of the ball but pulled Bonura off the bag with his throw, and Mack scored on the infield hit.

Pofahl's single to right in the second inning stood as the Nats only hit until the fifth, when Leonard singled in vain with two out. But in the seventh Buddy Lewis led off with a double to left and the Nats achieved the tying run. Walker grounded out as Lewis held second, but Zeke Bonura's hard grounder took a freak hop over Boudreau's shoulder for a single and Lewis scored.

In the eighth the Nats muffed a chance to go into the lead after Case singled to left with one out, and stole second with the help of a dropped throw by Boudreau. Buddy Lewis could only move him to third with an infield out, and Gerry Walker fouled out. In the ninth Cecil Travis was hit by a pitched ball with one out, but Welaj and Pofahl could produce nothing resembling a hit.

Cocoa Kid Bout Put Off One More Day

Threatening Skies Force Postponement 2d Straight Time

Everything happens to me, moaned Promoter Joe Turner yesterday as he announced that this biggest fight of the year had to be postponed another night because of "threatening weather."

The Cocoa Kid-Wild Bill McDowell 10-round battle, scheduled for Monday night in Griffith Stadium, will be staged tonight—that is, if the elements permit.

Overcast skies and a forecast of rain last night again forced Turner to postpone the battle for the second straight night.

Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez spent all morning yesterday in various rain-chaser poses, but shortly after noon admitted defeat and sadly informed George Shepherd and Bill Daley, managers of the fighters, of another delay.

"It seems that every time we pull in a great fight here that will really give local fans what they've been wanting the weather has to pull a sit-down strike," Turner lamented.

Maryland Golf Entries Still Open

Maryland State golf officials are pulling for 25 or more entries today to bring the Maryland State Amateur field around the 100 mark for the week-end State championship play at Congressional.

Dr. Robert A. Keilty will accept names at the club today until noon. The fee is $3 but post entries will be charged $5. A qualifying round is scheduled Friday with match play Saturday and Sunday.

Pairings will be made tonight.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Dutch Leonard was a hero in defeat, and to him goes the chief award of the Man of the Month points based on last night's game at Cleveland.

To Leonard, 15 points, because he pitched magnificent ball despite erratic support, and held the Indians to two runs to keep the Nats in the ball game, and because he made one of the Nats five hits.

To Buddy Lewis, five points, because he doubled in the sixth to set in motion the Nats' tying run.

To George Case, two points, because he singled in the eighth and stole second.

Washington down in front for the third time in five years.

Syracuse, leader for the first mile and a half, staged a comeback of its own to beat Navy for third place by almost a length. California, last year's record-breaking winner, was a badly-distanced fifth, followed by Columbia, Wisconsin and Princeton, which was rowing here for the first time.

The only slower time was Columbia's in 1929, 22:58. That was the year five crews finished and four crews swamped, and the toll was even heavier this year on the Jayvees.

Waves Swamp Boats

It already looked bad when the six junior eights tied onto their stake boats. The bows of the slim shells were dipping into the water, and waves were breaking over the gunwales.

They got a good start, but Washington already was going under a hundred yards out. Syracuse, bailing frantically, had to give up a little farther on, and California went under just past the half-mile mark.

The officials decided to call it off, but Navy, which had sprinted away to a fine lead, had no idea of giving up, and Columbia and Cornell were bound to continue pursuit. When their coaches caught up with them and flagged them down, Columbia was down at the stern and Cornell's shell was half full of water.

Freshman Race

Nosed out in the main event, Cornell had to be content with first place in the frosh 2-miler. The Ithacans, clocked in 10:55 1-5, won by two lengths over Princeton, with Syracuse third and Columbia's previously undefeated combine fourth.

Washington's varsity never was worse than third.

The Huskies were second to Syracuse for the first mile, shoved back to third by half a deck length at the mile and a half mark through Cornell's first surge, but had a 3-foot margin over Syracuse at 2 miles.

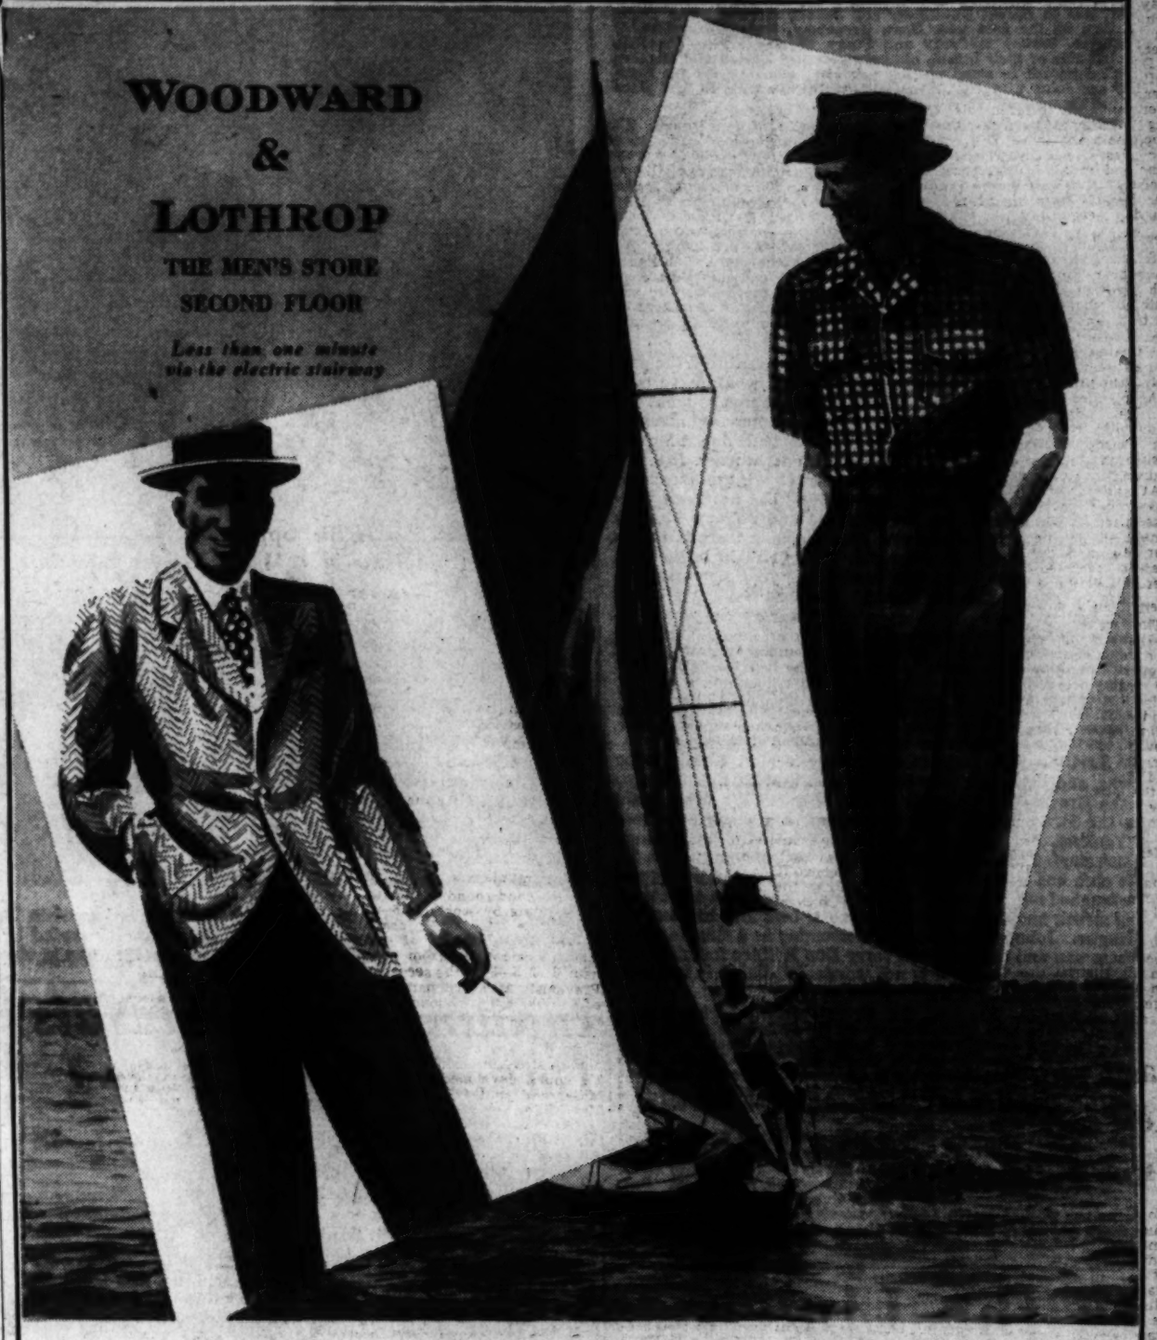

From there on the Orange slipped back and Cornell came on, to hold the lead for no more than a matter of seconds, and then lose the bitter stretch duel which brought the West its eleventh triumph in the last 17 races.

To complete the picture of a daffy day on the water, the jayvees reran their race in almost total darkness, long after the spectators had gone home. Finishing at a line marked by the Coast Guard boat's floodlights, Washington, first to swamp on the original attempt, won the 2-mile test by a length over Navy, followed in order by California, Syracuse, Columbia and Cornell.

Ace Amherst Hurler Is Signed by Bees

Boston, June 18 (AP).—Bob Williams, ace southpaw pitcher for the Amherst College baseball team, was signed late today by the Boston Becs.

Duffy Lewis, traveling secretary for the Bees, said that the 22-year-old Williams would report to the National League club Thursday.

Post Sponsors Red Cross 'Sandlot Day' June 29th in Stadium

D. C. Stars Pledge Event Full Support

Baseball, Softball Champions to Have Top Amateur Roles In Griffith Stadium

By Bill Burnett

Joining hands with the thousands of organizations doing their bit to help the Red Cross carry on, Washington's sandlot ball players as a body yesterday agreed to a "sandlot day" at Griffith Stadium June 29, which would set an all-time high in amateur diamond exhibitions here.

District champions in baseball and softball—the Heurich Brewers and Senate Beer teams, respectively—were assigned featured roles in the big Saturday aftrnoon display. Their opponents are to be The Washington Post's All-District Schoolboy nine and an All-Star aggregation of "softies" to be selected by President Vic Baratte from his Sport Center Sunday League.

Services Free

Services of every athlete involved have been contributed free. Griffith Stadium also has been donated without charge by Owner Clark Griffith, an ardent booster of the Red Cross. The "gate" from an anticipated crewd of 10,000 will be turned over to the Red Cross with only incidental expenses subtracted.

As planned at present, hostilities will get under way promptly at 2 p. m., with the softball clash leading off. Prices of tickets to The Post-sponsored twin bill will be announced in a few days.

At least one of the teams involved was forced to make sacrifices to take part in the classic benefit. Scheduled to meet the Quantico Marines on June 29, the Heurich Brewers' canceled the contest, Manager Bill Flester announced.

Every Man a Slugger

That act leaves him up against an all-District club Flester admits will be hard to beat. Every player is a slugger batting over .400, and at the head of the pitching corps is Billy Fisher, Central's big, right-handed star. The Brewers, D. C. unlimited champions, will be out to convincingly whip a gang of youngsters they consider upstarts. They'll send Walter James, their ace hurler, to the mound to fulfill that purpose.

Softball action might conceivably see Senate Beer, last year Tru-Blu, suffer one of its rare defeats over the last three years. Baratte is certain he can select an all-star ten from his 14-team league which will turn the trick. His main trouble will be finding a pitcher to match the dazzling speed of Abe Rosenfield, southpaw who twice won the District title for the Beermen and carried them into the late stages of the national tournament in Chicago.

Cameo Defeats Reliance Life Nine, 7 to 2

Hot on the trail of the league-leading Heurich Brewers, Cameo Furniture nine yesterday took its third victory in The Washington Post Industrial League race from Reliance Life, 7-2, with Ottie Printz hurling a six-hit game on the Ellipse.

Starting with single tallies in the first and third, Cameo blossomed out in a pair of markers in the fourth which sewed things up for good. Ken McQuinn, recently returned to the Furniture line-up, drove both runs in with a powerful home run.

Ed Murnane, G. W. High star, hurled the full game for the losers, allowing 11 hits, but he mixed a total of 11 strikeouts in the record.

Cameo's next outing will be tomorrow against Pepco, of the U. S. Government League at the North Ellipse. On Saturday and Sunday the team meets Craddock-Terry A. C. in Lynchburg, Va.

Henry Armstrong To Referee Fight At Elks Tonight

Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, the lad who's supposed to fight the winner of tonight's Cocoa Kid-Bill McDowell fight in Griffith Stadium, will arrive in town today to referee the main bout on tonight's amateur boxing show sponsored by the Colored Elks at the Atlantic Garden, 1918 Fourteenth street northwest.

The Purple Glove committee of the Colored Elks is staging a 30-round show to open a series of matches, the winners of which will be sent to St. Louis in August for national finals.

"Jabbo" Kenner, 6-foot-2 220-pounder, has been set up as the favorite in tonight's main event, while Jimmy Montgomery's featherweight battle will also hold a featured spot.

2 Sandlot Clubs Suffer As Pitcher Hurts Arm

A pair of sandlot ball teams lost the services of a dependable pitcher Sunday when Lanny Birch, big right-hander, tore the muscles in his arm. At the time he was hurling for Miller Furniture in its clash with Klein Tavern. He does mound duty for O'Donnell's Sea Grill. It was thought he would be unable to pitch for at least three weeks.

Smith Beats Yanks, 5-3, For Chisox

Third Loss in Row Suffered by N. Y. As Sox End Streak

Chicago, June 18.—Southpaw Ed Smith baffled the New York Yankees on six hits again today to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 5-to-3 victory over the world champions.

The outcome ended a five-game losing streak for Chicago and extended the Yankees' skid to three in a row.

The White Sox peppered three New York hurlers for 14 hits, scoring one run in each of the first four frames, as Atley Donald retired with his second defeat of the season. In the Chicago collection were home runs by Mike Kreevich and Julius Solters.

The Yanks also had two homers, Charley Keller's eleventh of the season in the first and Joe DiMaggio's tenth with one on in the ninth inning. Smith had defeated the Yankees on seven hits earlier this month in New York.

Pair of Upsets Marks Women's Tennis Play

4th-Seeded Hazel Bishopp and Mrs. Graham Eliminated While Mrs. Miller Barely Averts Defeat by Eleanor Voith; Margo Lee Impressive

By Jack Munhall

The City of Washington Women's Tennis Tournament yesterday deviated sharply from opening-day performances and two upsets were recorded and one narrowly avoided in hot competition at Army and Navy Country Club.

In sharp contrast to the easy advance of favorites Monday were the defeats yesterday of fourth-seeded Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, dangerous Margaret Graham and the terrific struggle encountered by Mrs. Dorette Miller before she gained the quarter-finals.

Miss Bishopp, tall University of Maryland coed nad one of the rising young players in the District, fell a second-round victim to Jane Wilmerding by scores of 6—4, 6—1. Meanwhile, Marian Pritchard, unseeded, scored a pair of victories, one in straight sets from Mrs. Graham, 6—2, 6—3, in the second round. Previously Miss Pritchard eliminated another tough opponent, Frances Carter, in a torrid three-set battle, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2.

But the closest match of the afternoon, a struggle which lasted almost 2½ hours, developed between Mrs. Miller and youthful Eleanor Voith. Mrs. Miller won, 7—5, 5—7, 8—6.

Miss Voith, flashing form vastly improved over last season, fought off three match points in the eleventh game of the second set before she won it to deadlock the match. Mrs. Miller, however, exhibited plenty of endurance in coming back to take the third and deciding set.

In another feature, winsome Margo Lee continued to gain supporters in her ability to upset top-seeded Willie O'Steen Herbert should they meet, as expected, in the finals by blasting aside Joan Bransford to reach the semifinals. The scores were 6—0 and 6—2, and Miss Lee, a Vassar graduate, now has swept through two matches with loss of only two games. She blanked Edna Vest, 6—0, 6—0, in their second round match Monday.

Meanwhile, pretournament favorite, Mrs. Herbert, met unexpected opposition before turning back Frances Rowan, 6—3, 6—4, in the second round, and Charlotte Decker joined Miss Lee in the semifinals by defeating Elinor Finckel, 6—3, 6—4.

On today's schedule are a pair of quarter-final singles matches and four first round doubles. The doubles draw was made yesterday, eight teams being entered. Elinor Finckel and Mrs. Miller are seeded first and Mrs. Herbert and Miss Lee, teamed for the first time, are ranked second, though they are definitely the combination to beat.

FIRST ROUND

Margaret Graham defeated Francis Carter, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2; Marian Pritchard defeated Roselyn Pope, 6—0, 6—1.

SECOND ROUND

Jane Wilmerding defeated Bishopp, 6—4, 6—1; Marian Pritchard defeated Margaret Graham, 6—2, 6—3; Willie O'Steen Herbert defeated Frances Rowan, 6—3, 6—4; Mrs. Dorette Miller defeated Eleanor Voith, 7—5, 5—7, 8—6.

QUARTERFINAL ROUND

Betty Jacobs Tops Girls' D. C. Net Play

Attractive blonde Betty Jacobs, girls' playground champion, heads a strong field which will seek honors in the first City of Washington girls' tennis tournament starting today at Friends School. Because many late entries are expected the draw will not be made until just before play begins, so all entrants are requested to report to Referee Dorette Miller at 1 p. m. at Friends.

Outstanding entrants besides Miss Jacobs are Ruth Johnsen, Benita Martinez, Marjorie Dawson and Felicia Miller—all members of well-known local tennis-playing families.

Others who should report to Friends at 1 p. m. are Margaret Cobey, Ann Cullen, Jeanne Echols, Julie Fisk, Miriam Krieselman, Ann Nolan, Margot Parsons, Ann Powell, Adele Pugh, Margery Snowden, Bonnie May Throemorton, Jane Weldman and Becky Yobst.

Homer in Ninth Beats Reds, 3-1, For Phillies

Bragan's Drive Scores Merrill May; League Lead Still Cincinnati's

Philadelphia, June 18 (AP).—Shortstop Bob Bragan hit two homers tonight and personally accounted for all the Phillies runs as they beat Cincinnati, 3-1, before 10,361 spectators at Shibe Park.

Despite the loss the Reds continued to lead the loop as Brooklyn dropped a 7-5 decision to St. Louis.

Bragan put on the clincher in the ninth with one out after Merrill May had been passed. The shortstop drove Bucky Walters' offering into the leftfield bleachers, giving the Phils their first victory in six games.

In the seventh Bragan supplied his team's other run with a circuit clout.

Short Neck Is Godoy's Latest 'Edge' on Louis

Gamblers Still Pick Joe Tomorrow Despite Efforts to Boost Chilean's Stock in Championship Bout

By the Associated Press

New York, June 18.—If there's anything to the old fistic fad that your best belters must be toughest in neck, legs and wrists, then Arturo Godoy stands a somewhat better chance against Joe Louis in Yankee Stadium Thursday night than a raw steak in a dog pound.

His neck particularly—a 17½ collar just about makes the circuit—has been pointed out by old-timers as a lot sturdier article than the one which adorns the Brown Bomber. And old Harry Wills, who has one of those tree-trunks between head and shoulders, himself, comes up with the explanation as to how it gets that way.

Very Simple Matter

It seems you spend a half-hour daily, week after week, having a medicine ball bounced off your chin. "You does it gently first, then harder and harder," Harry says. 'Pretty soon, you get a shock absorber there for punches to the chin."

Godoy tried this "cure" back in Chile, and, while he can't say he liked it, that particular exercise so strengthened his neck that veteran boxing men believe it was the reason the Bomber couldn't budge him with his dynamite in their first meeting last February. Nor, they add, will Joe be able to do his usual annihilating on the Chilean chin this time.

Experts on cauliflower affairs point out that while the South American's neck is short, thick and powerful, built on the order of a squat beer keg, Louis' head is perched on a long thin affair. That, they say, was why fellows like Max Schmeling, Tony Galento and even the venerable Jack Roper came along and hurt him with shots to the chin. Nor does his neck afford him the usual protection of a shield. It's too long for him to drop his chin behind when he comes out to pitch.

Senate Beer Ten To Play Champs Saturday Night

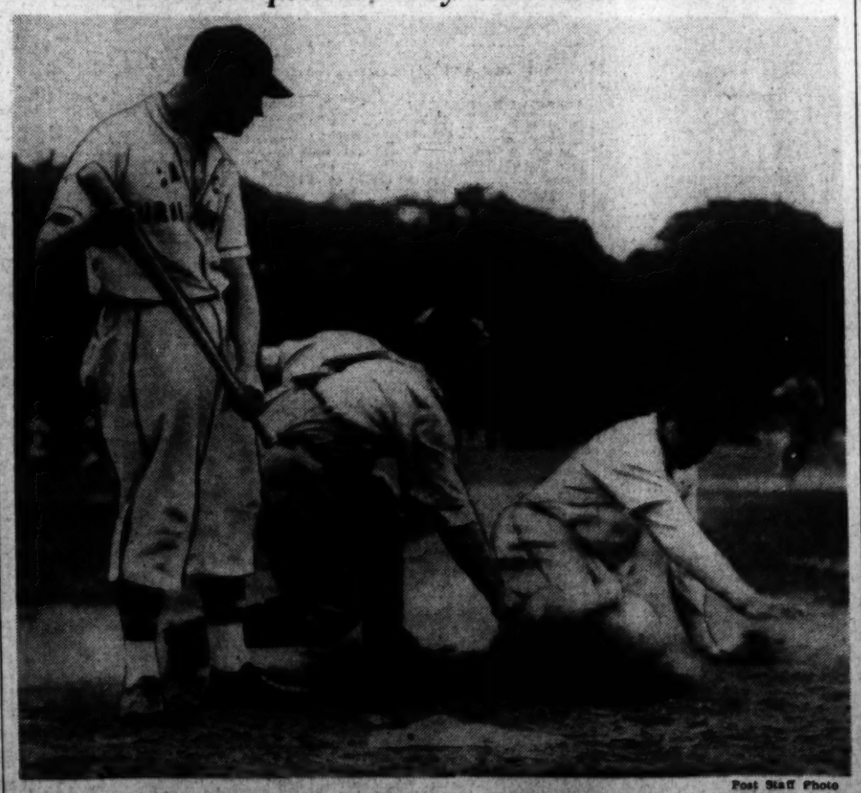

Barring another deluge such as that which forced a cancelation May 30, Senate Beer's D. C. champion softball team will entertain the national champion Covington (Ky.) Booster team at Ballston Stadium Saturday night at 9 p. m.

Winner of the U. S. title in Chicago last year behind "Cyclone" Warken's pair of no-hit games, the Covington club will present as powerful club as District fans ever have seen. Warken is expected to handle the pitching Saturday in opposition to Senate's Abe Rosenfield.

A particularly gala touch will be given the game by the presence of Senator "Happy" Chandler, of Kentucky, and a large delegation of Kentucky State Society members. In a preliminary, Posner's ten will clash with either Kavakos Grill or Center Market.

Pandoramint Gallops Home at Charles Town, Paying $8.80

Titmus Racer Registers 4th Victory

Finishes Five Lengths Ahead of Lulu Khayyam; Wilt's Tavern Takes Show

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 18.—Pandoramint, a 5-year-old mare who is reported to like mud mixed with her oats, galloped along in front of her field today to win the sixth race, best offering on a featureless program. The daughter of Brandon Mint and Curiosity Box, in charge of Jockey R. Haber, turned in her fourth victory of the meeting in five starts and carried top weight of 115 pounds.

Racing in the colors of E. H. Titmus, jr., who has been very successful at this meeting, Pandoramint finished five lengths in front of H. D. Massey's Lulu Khayyam and another length and a half in advance of H. O. Wilt's Tavern. The race was run over a track deep in mud as the result of a downpour last night and intermittent showers this afternoon.

Pandoramint was one of several lukewarm horses in the field of six and paid $8.80. Her time of 1:22 2-5 was creditable under the adverse conditions. T. J. Collins' Quaternary, well played, was a far-back last but lost a shoe in the running. Jockey Palumbo, despite illness, was in the saddle of the gelding.

There was nothing to the race. The winner forged to the front at the first turn, opened all the daylight Jockey Haber would allow and jogged home. Jockey Pappy Witmer did a lot of riding on Lulu Khayyam but it was good only for second money.

Tar Miss owned by Mrs. A. C. Paul, of Silver Spring, Md., scored a surprising victory in the day's opening event for 2-year-olds. The little daughter of Kantar, ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk, a Silver Spring boy, paid $52.60 and finished ahead of Mr. Jim and Valentine Ann.

The daily double was one of the smallest in the history of the track. Only $8 went to those who coupled Roving Eye, winner of the second race, with Schley Al, victor in the third event. Both winners paid $4.40 in the roles of favorites. Jockey Buddy Root eased Roving Eye along to win while Jockey Willie Dufford drove Schley Al to the imaginary wire.

Jockey F. A. Martinez suffered a cut leg coming out of the gate aboard Five-O-Four in the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAR MISS, $52.60, $14.80, $14.60; MR. JIM, $6.80, $5.60; VALENTINE ANN, $20.20.

TAR MISS, off slowly, but rushed to contention on inside, saved ground entering stretch and closed gamely while drawing out. MR. JIM had speed to race BAY FAREWELL into submission, but could not resist winner while racing greenly. VALENTINE ANN closed willingly. MISS ROXIE could not reach serious contention. BAY FAREWELL set early pace and faded. SMOKE GAL had early speed. MARY HAZEN could not keep up. SWIFT CHARLEY stumbled and lost rider after an eighth.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400 claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:07½. Off 3:08. Winner, W. J. Tapp's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROVING EYE, $4.40, $3.40, $2.60; BLUE PRELUDE, $3.40, $3.60; NATHAN HALE, $4.20.

ROVING EYE had good speed from break, assumed command in opening furlong, drew out gradually and was easy winner. BLUE PRELUDE, first away, was hard ridden. NATHAN HALE went evenly while saving ground and showed good effort. SMALL DEVIL closed gamely from sluggish beginning. NIGHT PLAY'S rider lost stirrup. ALICE DODGE showed nothing. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:37½. Off 3:38½. Winner, R. A. Bowman, jr.'s br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCHLEY AL, $4.40, $2.60, $2.40; STONEHAVEN, $3.60, $3.00; BANK NOTE, $3.00.

SCHLEY AL assumed command at once, set good pace and was kept to drive while opening gap in final eighth. STONEHAVEN was closest to pace throughout and was hard ridden, but held safe. BANK NOTE was hard ridden and had no excuses. FIVE O FOUR was messed about early and closed some ground. JUMELUS was used up holding forward position under hustling tactics and weakened. EXPECTED BELLE was through early. The others were outrun.

Daily Double, ROVING EYE and SCHLEY AL, Paid $8.00

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, HEAVY.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:01⅕. Winner, H. W. Pearson's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IVONIA, $7.00, $4.00, $2.60; POSTPONEMENT, $5.80, $2.80; REIGH TETRARCH, $2.60.

IVONIA, hustled into lead in opening furlong, drew out without effort and was an easy winner. POSTPONEMENT bore out at turns and showed good effort while closing gamely. REIGH TETRARCH was hard ridden while closest to pace and weakened. ORKIL'S RUSSET was pinched back approaching backstretch and went evenly thereafter. DEAR GRACIE was not serious factor. AYLWARD showed nothing. PUKKA HEAVEN had early speed and faltered. BAD DREAMS was off poorly.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:27⅘. Winner, Blue Grass Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RARE GEM, $9.40, $5.20, $3.80; BALKANESE, $8.00, $4.80; BARRACA, $10.00.

RARE GEM, forced wide into first turn, was hard handled to reach leaders on outside, responded when shaken up to take command and drew out under pressure. BALKANESE, slow to begin, worked way around outside, but hung in final stages. BARRACA closed some ground. MAN AT ARMS had early speed and stopped. BUBBLEWORTH was held safe throughout. DIXIE S had early foot and faded. ANN GROUCHER was outrun. SMALL CHANGE floundered in going after losing shoe and was taken up.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:54. Off 4:55. Winner, E. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILLIE O, $25.60, $13.00, $7.60; JUDGE'S BID, $3.80, $3.80; BEAU BON, $7.20.

MILLIE O, going in improved style, came around JUDGE'S BID to take command after opening quarter, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. JUDGE'S BID set early pace, could not resist winner and closed gamely. BEAU BON saved ground while close up and was held safe. PENCADER tired gradually. SILVERY WAY was held safe. MYRON could not keep up. CUPID'S ARROW was squeezed back leaving gate. ELLBEESEE was off slowly.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Attention, horsemen! If you owe a blacksmith named Wise for shoeing your horses, please send him something on account. He and his wife are ill and are badly in need of funds. If you want to know his address, get in touch with me. To J. T., of Charlotte Hall: I would be glad to explain anything about racing if you will see me at the track. W. L. Grant shipped in three horses from Bel Air and one is named Zyloxxie, honest. Handley arrived from Timonium and will be trained by owner, Mrs. R. K. Yingling. Jockey Sammy Palumbo has been riding despite the fact that he has not been feeling well for the last few days. Joe Brooks got in from Middleburg with his veteran horses, Plain Ace and Braw Scot. The latter held the mile and a sixteenth record here for several years. Most of the jockies here live in cabins along the Shenandoah River, as beautiful a spot as can be seen anywhere. We had a flying visit yesterday from Charles Avison, The Post's traveling representative for this section. He doesn't bet, lucky fellow. C. L. King, owner of horses here, has been called to Florida, where his brother was killed in an accident. Notice to Bennings Stable help: the sheriff is going to get you if you don't stop those crap games. And, by the way, how about that two bits of mine that one of you guys was going to run up for me? H. B. Davis has taken over the training of Momoth Boy and Well Aware. Mrs. C. H. Sprague purchased Dacotah from Ethel Collins. J. R. Nance will train his own horse, Don Gomez. We have Patchpocket and Chief Evergreen running today and may they have speedy journeys. Don't forget that the Rosslyn Bowling Center Handicap is today's feature. Galt Davis is giving a cup and it will be presented to the winning owner by Art Brown, marking the first thing he ever gave away in his life. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Hiblaze is far down the list, but seems to have too much on this field to be disregarded. Needs only to get off the reserve list. Cautious Bo belongs with this kind and is dangerous. Travelo has had a long rest and could be right there.

Second race—Justa Jimmie looks like the right one in this 7-furlong affair. An off track will be more to his liking. The Bennings Stable sends Patchpocket for the second time. The old campaigner retains a flash of his class and is a threat. Zump turned in a fine performance here.

Third race—Lucky Roll has been threatening in recent races. Gets a favorable post position and I'm going to string along. Dancing Cloud carries top weight, but must be respected. Lucre Lude showed improvement last out and may surprise.

Fourth race—Congo Prince, on general good form, deserves top selection here despite top weight. Seplin gets in light and will be close. Snobbish Lady for the minor award.

Fifth race—Sunny Rose finished third to Tristenagh and Dulie in their recent clash here. The first named gets all the best of the shift in weight and has the No. 1 position to boot. I'm going to string along with this one. I believe Dulie will be second with Tristenagh third.

Sixth race—There is no telling how good Randle's Queen is and she gets in light. I'm going to be there. Vendor's Slein has done about everything asked and deserves attention. Lulu Khayyam belongs with this kind.

Seventh race—Wahoo is about due to connect. Should like the track and I expect an improved performance. Chief Evergreen goes for the Bennings Stable and will be right there if the track is off. Goodwine has been rested and is a threat.

Eighth race—Spotless likes the marathon route of this and needs only the right ride. Heart Play gets in with featherweight and is a threat. Pete Sand may go to the top and would have to be caught.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take My Grand, Margie Wrack and Super John. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Depinard, Green Water and Last Revue.

Best bet—Randle's Queen.

Know Your Dogs— No. 98 of a Series

By George Berner

PEMBROKE WELSH CORGI

Although somewhat younger than the Cardigan Welsh Corgi this fellow can trace his ancestry back to about 1107 A. D. and so isn't by any means a new type of dog. He comes probably from the same family as do the Keesonden, the Pomeranian, the Chow Chow and the Norwegian Elkhound. An alert little fellow and a pleasant companion, he is growing rapidly in favor as a house dog. They may be any color but white, weigh from 20 to 24 pounds and stand less than 12 inches at the shoulder. (Courtesy Pets Magazine.)

G. A. O. Nine Beats Canal Club, 7 to 6

Two Runs in Ninth Gives Accounting Edge in Play-Off Game

General Accounting Office nine pushed over two runs in the final inning yesterday to beat Panama Canal Commission, 7 to 6, in the playoff game earlier in the season.

Four hurlers went into action for G. A. O., giving the Canalmen a total of nine hits, while Abeel held the winners to eight. Mathias was credited with the victory when he took over at the start of the sixth and held Canal to a pair of hits. A home run by Shortstop Coe featured the hitting, the infielder also getting a pair of singles in four times at bat.

Cotton Higher, Grains Firm, Tin Plunges

Commodities Move Nervously Waiting Fate of France

By the Associated Press

Commodity futures fluctuated nervously, and at times violently, as traders awaited word from Munich concerning the fate of France.

Cotton at New York climbed 50 to 70 cents a bale. Buyers paid more attention to recent big textile sales in Worth street than possibility of lost export markets.

Tin plunged 3¼ to 4½ cents a pound. The break echoed sharp declines in London, where American purchases were said to be contracting, and Singapore.

Wheat at Chicago opened 1⅝ cents a bushel higher but coasted back to a final range unchanged to ⅜ of a cent up. Corn added ⅛ to ¾ of a cent.

Rubber lost as much as .4 of a cent a pound at New York and copper fell nearly 1-3 cent. Also down were hides, silk, world sugar and Santos coffee. Cocoa and Rio coffee inched ahead. Tool tops eand domestic sugar were mixed.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities, based on 1926 as 100, declined to 71.66 from 71.80.

Wheat Trading Dull

Chicago June 18 (AP).—Wheat futures moved over a range of about a cent and a half in a dull session today but the close was unchanged to ½ cent higher than yesterday.

At the start wheat futures advanced ⅝ to 1⅜ cents and what action there was took place early in the session under scattered buying influenced largely by the upturn in the stock market and less favorable weather and crop comment from the Southwest.

Subsequently the market receded from the peaks and steadied around 78 cents for the September wheat contract. Traders showed an inclination to await announcement of the peace terms to be offered the French by the Axis powers.

Other gains acted in sympathy with wheat and all changes were confined to minor fractions.

Industrial Gain Continues in June, Reserve Reports

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that "industrial activity increased considerably in May and the first half of June.

The factory gain in May, the board said, raised its seasonally adjusted index of industrial production from 102 to 105. A further increase was indicated for June. The May figure of 105 contrasted with 92 in May, 1939.

The increase was attributed primarily to heavier production in steel and woolen mills. Production of lumber also increased, while activity was maintained at approximately April levels in cotton and rayon mills and coal mines. Petroleum output and automobile production declined slightly.

Contracts awarded for construction projects also gained in May. Contracts for building private residences reached the highest level in 10 years, while smaller gains were made on contracts for commercial and public buildings.

Italian, German Bonds Firm; Rush To Buy Subsides

New York, June 18 (AP).—The rush to buy Italian and German bonds subsided today, but most of them ended higher, and the hard pressed British dominion's liens found support.

Gainers of fractions to more than a point included Italy 7s, Canada 4s, Peru 6s, Argentine 4½s, German unstamped 7s and Colombia 6s. Sydney 5½s jumped up 12 points to 60 on light turnover and Queensland 7s were up 1½ at 65½.

French government 7s sold at 97, off 3, the first time a sale of these bonds had been made since the armistice plea of Monday. They were offered yesterday at a wide discount from the previous sale but no bids were available.

United States governments were quiet and mixed, ending 9-32 of a point lower to 7-32 higher.

Martin Continues To Push Output Of French Planes

Baltimore, June 18 (AP).—The Glenn L. Martin Co. is going ahead with production of fighting planes for France and England despite the French suit for peace.

The company announced today that authorized representatives of the French and English governments had asked it to proceed on all contracts for both nations and even to redouble them "in the shortest possible time."

"The Martin Co. is proceeding on night and day shifts with unabated speed in order to reach our mixmum production and at the same time proceed with our part in the rearmament program in the United States," President Martin said.

Approximately 12,000 persons, including more than 1,000 engineers, are now employed at the Martin factory.

Offering Is Made By Cont. Aviation

New York, June 18 (AP).—An offering of $845,000 in common stock of Continental Aviation & Engineering Corporation recently formed subsidiary of Continental Motors Corporation, was made to the public today by Van Alstyne, Noel & Co., as underwriters.

The issue is 260,000 shares of $1 par value, priced at $3.25. Proceeds of the financing are to provide the company with working capital for the manufacture of liquid cooled, horizontal opposed airplane engines of 500 or more horsepower.

U. S. Deficit Now Is $3,624,617,248

By the Associated Press

Federal expenditures for the fiscal year ending this month have passed $8,000,000,000.

With 11⅛ months of the year completed, expenditures totaled $9,087,924,524 and revenues $5,463,307,276, causing a deficit of $3,624,617,248, the Treasury said today. In the similar part of the preceding fiscal year, the deficit was $3,392,839,215.

In the remaining two weeks of the year, however, quarterly income tax collections were expected to add substantially to revenues.

Stocks and Bonds Move Irregularly Higher As Bullish Forces Study Expanding Trade, Disregard Host of Foreign Uncertainties

New York, June 18.—Stocks and bonds, including the United States Government list, moved irregularly higher today in the face of as ominous a bunch of uncertainties in our political and economic life as we have seen in some time.

The terms of the peace to be arranged between France and Germany were not known, but it was assumed they would be harsh; the fate of the French navy was not known, but it was assumed the ships would not surrender to the Germans; the stability of military orders placed here by the Allies was not known, but it was assumed that if delivery is not made to Great Britain it will be made to the United States Government, and of course nothing but guesses can be made about our election, but the belief in the financial district is that the New Deal, since the defeat of France, has lost some of its recently won popularity.

Business Expanding

This was a bag full of assumptions and contained little on which to base sound judgment in dealing in securities and commodities. The one definite point in favor of the bullish forces was the unquestioned expansion of our domestic business, and doubtless it was the buying which this engendered that offset the selling which otherwise would have been felt on the turn of events abroad.

The stock market made good upward progress during the morning hours, but lost a portion of the gain in the afternoon. The composite average showed a net advance of .31 point. Trading was dull, amounting to only 718,810 shares.

Metals and oils averaged slightly lower while the aviations and motors were no more than steady. Utilities and equipments did relatively well, followed by the steels. Expanding industrial activity, liberal yields on junior securities and the long-term prospect of inflation are combining to bolster the market, but the immediate outlook is clouded by the world-wide upheaval caused by the war and the setbacks being suffered by the democracies.

Peace Terms Awaited

The question asked on every hand in the financial district was what would the terms of peace for France include. There was no one to answer the question and news tickers told of the continuation of the fight while the two dictators were in conference. It was not until near the close that the meeting adjourned and there was no announcement of an armistice or the terms.

The determination of Great Britain to continue the struggle was again emphasized. Until some of the problems raised by the German victory are solved, or at least clarified, it may be expected that traders will move cautiously. Certainly they trod warily today.

Loft was again the most active stock and held steady. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic closed at about their former levels. Central was a strong leader of the rails, this group giving a better performance recently in view of the vast improvement in traffic. Most of the leading aviation manufacturing stocks held around their former levels but there was good demand for the air transport shares. Eastern Air Lines gaining more than a point. It was active, along with United Air Lines. Among less active issues, Allied Chemical gained 3 points. There was good support for Chesapeake & Ohio, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Peoples Gas and Sears, Roebuck. Standard of New Jersey, Westinghouse and Loew's were among the better known issues to sell off a point or more.

Bonds Remain Firm

While trading volume was appreciably lower, prices in the bond market retained a distinctly firm tone. Major activity and strength centered in rail issues, both high grade and more speculative.

The market for Treasury bonds was quiet and firm. Final prices in the over-counter section were 1-32 lower to 4-32 higher. Volume of Treasurys was $99,000 on the exchange against $180,000 on Monday.

Italian and German bonds in most cases retained, and in some instances increased, their gains of the preceding session. At the same time many of the Canadian and Australian loans also advanced. French 7s of 1949 sold down 3 points to a new low for the year, closing at 97.

While the market for foreigns displayed some activity in spots, it was overshadowed by the interest attracted to domestic rail issues. There the advance played few favorites, affecting second grades as well as high grade issues.

N. Y. Dry Goods

New York, June 18 (AP).—Dry goods: Wool business for fall delivery continues to improve with some mills said to have sold up to their production for the next few months. Jobbers report good demand for tropical worsteds and sabardines. Cotton goods trading pace slackens but prices remain firm. Rayon strong prices continue in fairly active dealings. Spun rayon novelties and pigment taffetas lead in volume. Silk market remained quiet.

Exchange Market

New York, June 18 (AP).—Closely controlled Nazi currencies advanced briskly in relation to the dollar today while the Axis leaders weighed the fate of France.

Supplies of the currencies were extremely limited in the local foreign exchange market. Formerly Amsterdam was the main source of supply but since that outlet was eliminated most German currency has come here from Switzerland.

The benevolent mark jumped 2 1-10 cents and the registered mark ½ cent.

The pound sterling declined 3 cents. The Swiss franc held unchanged. The Canadian dollar rose ⅛ to 89¼ United States cents.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium; equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market 19⅜ per cent discount, or 80.25 United States cents.

Local Executives To Take Two-Week Course at Rutgers

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Washington is represented by 17 students at the Graduate School of Banking opening this week at Rutgers University. The local delegation is larger than those enrolled from banks in 28 of the States, and includes the following:

Charles R. Fadeley, Henry K. Dierkoph, John M. Christie, Corcoran Thom, jr., Robert V. Mellefont, Riggs National Bank; Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co.; Bernard L. Amiss, George O. Schweinhaut, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Kenneth O. Hulse, Hamilton National Bank; Francis E. Robey, John E. Monk, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, Second National Bank; Willard G. McGraw, Union Trust Co.; Frederic Solomon, J. Fred English, J. E. Horbett and S. R. Carpenter, Federal Reserve Board.

Several local students will graduate this year and others are entering the school for their first term. This year's new class numbers 249. There are 217 second and 232 third-year students, totaling 698, the largest enrollment since inception of the course. This school is conducted for bank executives under sponsorship of the American Bankers Association. Its curriculum provides for two weeks' intensive resident work followed by home courses.

In this year's student body are 21 bank presidents, 64 vice presidents, 18 trust officers, 81 assistant trust officers, 54 cashiers, 140 assistant cashiers, 15 treasurers, 37 assistant treasurers, 33 bank examiners, 25 auditors and 210 other officers of various delegations.

Bank Group to Elect

The safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, headed by T. Eugene Elgin, chairman, will hold its annual meeting June 26 at Naylor's Seafood Restaurant, 951 Maine avenue southwest. At this time officers for the next administrative year will be elected. Besides Mr. Elgin other present officers are Eva Ricker, vice chairman; Sophia Karydakis, secretary; Guy D. Cowl, Jesse S. Cheyney, executive council members.

The District Bankers Association's new council of administration is composed of A. M. McLachlen, association president; T. Stanley Holland, first vice president; John A. Reilly, second vice president; A. Scott Offutt, third vice president; A. S. Gatley, treasurer; Ord Preston, immediate past president; Wilmer J. Waller, member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association; Francis G. Addison, jr., Stanley D. Willis, Thomas J. Groom and H. T. Bisselle, all elected at the recent annual convention.

The annual meeting of District of Columbia Institute, Certified Public Accountants, will be held at Congressional Club on the evening of June 24. Business of the meeting, consisting of election of three members of the board of governors, will follow an afternoon of golf and other outdoor sports afforded by the club.

U. S. Gold Imports Continue Above Normal in Week

By the Associated Press

Gold imports totaled $111,646,000 in the week ended June 12, most of them from Canada.

Although larger than a normal week, the total was only a fifth of the record set in the preceding week, when a huge gold consignment believed to be part of the French gold reserves, came in from Canada.

Canada was the source of $98,020,033 last week. Other shipments included $2,552,627 from Mexico, $2,117,088 from Colombia, $3,399,167 from Japan, and $2,885,047 from South Africa.

Foreign deposits of gold under earmark in the Federal reserve system increased $12,455,655 during the week, bringing these deposits to a total of approximately $1,700,000,000.

Germany appeared in the list of gold shippers last week for the first time in many months, but its consignment was valued at only $40, and might have been merely a piece of jewelry.

Foreign Markets

London, June 18 (AP).—All classes of securities declined sharply in the market today, but trading contracted to a minimum pending clarification of the war situation.

Near the finish the market leveled off at the lower levels and in some instances worst declines were trimmed slightly. Industrials and oils displayed most resistance. British government bonds traded near the bottom prices allowed.

Liverpool.—Trade calling in the July cotton delivery raised the price 7 points today. Other months remained at minimum levels.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the playing of today's hand. The cards, bidding and opening lead are shown in the box. You are to play the North-South cards so as to make the contract of seven clubs. Plan your play, then compare it with the explanation.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠K742 ♡None ◇A10 ♣AJ109654
WEST: ♠Q108 ♡Q974 ◇J8764 ♣3
EAST: ♠J5 ♡J108632 ◇KQ53 ♣2
SOUTH: ♠A963 ♡AK5 ◇92 ♣KQ87

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 NT	Pass	7 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 6 ◇.

Solution

Declarer must not be in too much of a hurry to get rid of dummy's losing diamonds because it will leave a spade that cannot be disposed of. The ace of diamonds wins the first trick and South's queen of clubs takes both adverse trumps. The ace and king of hearts are run, on which North discards two spades. The king and ace of spades are then cashed, and a low spade is trumped by dummy. This sets up South's fourth spade, yielding a discard of dummy's losing diamond. Instead of discarding a loser at once, as is usually done, a suit is shortened, so that it can be set up for an extra discard.

A public hearing having been held on May 20, 1940, by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street and alley area in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are not detrimental to the public interests nor to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered, That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act. No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 2351, 2352 and 2353, are hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after July 19, 1940, the title to the land comprised in said areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said areas hereby ordered closed being described as follows: (1) Closing of a PUBLIC ALLEY 20 feet wide running southwesterly from Pennsylvania Avenue in Square 5569. (2) Closing of a small street area known as LAWRENCE AVENUE immediately south of New York Avenue, Northeast, abutting Lot 811, Square 4099. (3) Closing QUEBEC STREET as it now exists, 90 feet wide, between University Avenue and 48th Street, Northwest, and a small area of said Quebec Street abutting Lot 1, Square 1506; closing 47TH STREET, MURDOCK PLACE, NEWMAN PLACE, and a part of COREY PLACE, running south from Rodman Street, Northwest; closing part of an OLD ROAD, east of 49th Street, Northwest; and closing of PUBLIC ALLEYS in Squares 1506 and 1525; and providing for alley and street dedications to be made in connection with said closings." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, in writing, to said closings within thirty (30) days after the date of this publication, otherwise said order shall become effective on July 19, 1940, and the street and alley areas, as herein described, shall on and after said date become closed, in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, DAVID McCOACH, Jr., Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Daily ex. Sun. 6-18 to 7-3.

"FIRST IN FRIENDLINESS"

If You Earn Money You Can Borrow Money Here

Our credit requirements are most reasonable. Loans here are based on your sense of responsibility and earning capacity. Therefore, you need not hesitate to apply for a loan in any amount from $10 to $300. You pay the loan a little at a time—out of income—and our E-q-u-a-l-i-z-e-d Payment Plan makes it easier for you to budget these sums. No co-signers. No furniture, no automobiles needed in most cases. No wage assignment. No extra fees, fines, or insurance charges. Only charge is interest as set by the "Uniform Small Loan Law." Utmost privacy—no information to employer, friends or relatives. Money in one day—red tape cut. Come in or phone for more information—no obligation, of course. Plenty of free parking.

BARNABY WOODS
In this delightfully cool, restfully quiet Chevy Chase, D. C., home community we are just completing 7 brand new Colonial center-hall design brick homes. We think you may find just the house you want among them. Each has a large living room with fireplace, dining room, up-to-the-minute kitchen, FIRST-FLOOR PANELED DEN with adjacent LAVATORY and a huge side porch. 3 nice-size bedrooms and 2 tile baths on the second floor. The master bedroom has its private bath with stall shower. A third floor finished room affords opportunity for development into whatever you desire. AIR-CONDITIONED OIL HEAT. Lovely, rolling wooded plots. Don't wait another day. Inspect each of these homes today. Call MEL. 1143. J. WESLEY BUCHANAN.

SILVER SPRING
$4,990—$40 Monthly
We offer a 4-room and bath white brick bungalow on one of the most attractive wooded corners out here. This price is a sacrifice to the owner. Call Mr. McCRACKEN today. FRANKLIN REALTY CO., SHepherd 5430.

IN A "PRIVATE PARK"
Here is a delightful setting for a residence. With a frontage of 70 feet, a depth of approximately 180, and a rear width of nearly 140, this plot encompasses almost half an acre. The rear yard is a grove of fine shade trees and a winding stream winds lazily across your property. This new Chevy Chase Colonial home has 7 rooms, 2 baths and a large storage attic. Little refinement; like the FIRST-FLOOR DEN and LAVATORY, built-in garage and AIR-CONDITIONING provide the finishing touches to insure perfect living. Located just off Western avenue in the neighborhood adjacent to Barnaby Woods. A personal inspection will prove satisfying. Call us today. J. WESLEY BUCHANAN, MEL. 1143.

Things have been going along swimmingly for Paul Kain and his WJSV band down at Glen Echo, although the boys got off to what might be termed a ragged start. The night they opened their season at the amusement park everything was fine except the weather and the musicians did their chores in overcoats, hats, and gloves.

Kain claims playing amusement parks such as Glen Echo is a delight. In the first place, the weather is a little easier to take out in the woods than it is in a hotel room. In the second place, Glen Echo's attitude on alcohol removes the bane of all bandsmen's existences, the drunk.

Paul is pretty busy these days, what with his daily half hour of "Take Up Time" each week day at 5 p. m. over WJSV and his nightly stint at Glen Echo. The radio and dance work has proven invaluable to the Kain repertoire. The boys, according to Paul, can play 600 numbers. "We'd fake a lot of 'em, of course, but you got to know a song even to fake it," exclaims the candid Kain. The average dance band has about 200 numbers in its books and rarely uses more than 100.

Do you know what's the No. 1 song on the Washington hit parade. According to Kain, it's "Imagination." The lads get about 25 requests an evening for that number and play three or four. "Tea for Two" and "Night and Day" are the most popular of the older songs. The waltz is just doing fair but how those Glen Echoers love a rumba.

Kain claims his lads can play almost any request. His greatest problem in that department, however, is explaining why he can't play numbers that are restricted. Another headache is requests for numbers that a band like Raymond Scott and his mad musicians dream up for a recording. Publishers often wait for a record to achieve popularity before releasing the music and Mr. Kain claims he can't make arrangements without music.

Chapter 44

THE WORDS repeated themselves in her mind, slowly at first, then with greater and stronger significance, rising in a wild, exultant crescendo like the stirring theme of an organ solo. Suppose the ceremony were not quite regular.

"Millicent!" she cried, and there was a new ring in her voice transcending the dull apathy. 'Go in and sit with your father, will you? There may be something he wants to say . . . And shut the door, my dear. Shut it tight. I must make a few more phone calls."

It was after 12 o'clock when Peter arrived. Millicent answered his ring herself.

"I've been out all morning," he explained. "I just got your mother's telegram. Has anything happened?"

Millicent smiled ruefully. "Do you still want to marry me?"

"W—what?" He stared at her, taken back by the directness of her question. Could it be that she guessed what went on in his own mind? "What's that, Millicent?"

"I asked you if you still wanted to marry me."

He turned aside, under pretense of taking off his overcoat. "We're engaged, aren't we?"

His voice was toneless.

"Father is conscious now," she told him. "He wants us to be married immediately, while he can witness the ceremony." She spoke in a flat monotone, like a little girl reciting a piece she has committed to memory.

Still he stared at her, as if he had not heard correctly. "Married immediately?"

"Yes. Don't ask me why, Peter. He's very ill. Mother feels that this will set his mind at rest."

"But why . . . why immediately?"

"I don't know. Except that he'll rest more peacefully once he knows that we're—we're settled."

"I see."

He felt suddenly submerged in a great tide which carried him upward and onward against his will, from which, try as he might, he could not free himself. He tried to speak and his tongue was dry.

His tongue and lips and throat were dry and burning, the rest of his body was bathed in chilling moisture. I'm dreaming, he thought. I've been walking the streets so long, fighting against the wind, that I've taken cold and this is delirium. I'm really at home. I'm home in bed, dreaming this. It's after midnight.

He glanced at his watch, assuring himself of that fact at least.

"Well, Peter?"

He knew that Millicent was waiting for him to speak, to offer some expression of delight, perhaps. Instead he asked her, very soberly:

"Do you still want to marry me, Millicent?"

She did not meet his eyes. "Of course," she said, somewhat too casually, he thought. "Why not?"

Was Engaged

Why not? Of course. Why not? He was engaged to Millicent. This was what he had wanted. Besides, even if he were free, he couldn't go back to Ellen. He could never go back to Ellen. She had found someone, too.

"Why not?" He repeated it stupidly, staring at the wall in vacant abstraction. "When will it be?"

"Tonight. If mother can arrange everything."

"Tonight."

It was strange, he thought, to be standing here like this. Two people, about to be married, standing in a hallway and not even daring to look at each other. He had made no attempt to kiss her when he came in; he realized that for some reason she did not expect it.

Said Nothing

She stood in front of him, running her fingers up and down the decorative markings of a lamp on the hall table, and she said nothing.

He tugged at his collar, felt it wilting from the dampness of his neck, and he said nothing. Soon they would be married, and then he would kiss her.

"Your father—he's better, then?" He made the inquiry awkwardly, more in an effort to make conversation. He wondered whether he had asked her before. He couldn't remember. He should have. As soon as she opened the door, he should have inquired for her father immediately.

"He's conscious."

"Oh, yes." He remembered now. She had told him that.

They went into the living room and found her mother there. She looked at him queerly, he thought.

"Hello, Peter. It was good of you to come at this hour. Are you ready?"

She was nervous and upset, he noticed. She had spoken to him without quite knowing what she said. Are you ready? That was a funny question. More like an execution than a wedding. The condemned man had fried chicken and ice cream . . .

"Yes. I'm ready," he said.

He knew she had not even heard him. She was looking through some cubby-holes in the desk, her back turned to him. Millicent went over and sat on the divan quietly. She stared vacantly at the floor. She did not ask him to sit down.

Soon her mother turned to her. "Aren't you going to change your dress, dear?"

Millicent's eyes widened. They were dull and vacant tonight. Probably because she is so tired, Peter thought. "Should I?" she asked stupidly.

"Yes, I think so. Black is not appropriate' . . ."

"No. No, of course not." She glanced down at the plain black woolen frock she had worn all day. She laughed mirthlessly. "Imagine!" she murmured. "Imagine my not realizing what sort of dress I was wearing to my own wedding!" She laughed again, and Peter felt suddenly sorry for her.

"Don't you want to marry me, Millicent?" he asked, almost hopefully. "You don't have to, you know . . ."

Looks Up

Her mother looked up quickly. "Of course, Peter! Of course she does."

And Millicent echoed: "Of course, Peter! Of course I do."

The doorbell broke the silence. The sound had been muffled, Peter noticed. They always did that when someone was very sick.

"I'll go! Don't bother, either of you." Mrs. Abbott hurried down the hall. They heard her greet someone, a young man, by the sound of his voice. They talked together in low tones for a moment.

She brought him into the living-room, introduced them. "This is Dr. Carman, one of Dr. Harvey's assistants. He'll perform the ceremoney . . . poor Dr. Harvey is not feeling so well . . ."

Is Acting

She talked unnaturally, like some person on the stage playing the part of a fluttery, light-headed matron.

"We're all ready, I guess. Just a moment, until I see my husband . . ."

"Where's the license?" Peter asked Dr. Carman practically.

"Oh." Peter looked at Millicent, found his own bewilderment reflected in her face. "I thought—" His voice trailed off, leaving his thought unspoken, his thought that people usually got their own licenses.

Beckons Them

Then Millicent's mother was back in the room, beckoning for them to come into the bedroom. Dr. Carman followed her, then Millicent. He was the last.

He stopped on the threshold, suddenly shocked by the terrific change in the sick man. Five days ago he had seen John Abbott. Surely in five days a man cannot weaken so appreciably . . .

He walked over and took the limp hand, hoping that his shock did not show in his features.

"Hello, Peter. I'm glad you came. So glad . . ." The voice was a hollow whisper.

The room was dimly lighted. A bedside lamp directed a low light over the bed. As they stood up, gathered about, their faces were shadowed. Once again Peter had that sense of unreality, as if this were a dream in which he were walking.

To Be Continued.

Prof. Keigwin To Be Buried In Orlando, Fla.

Rites Set Today For Beloved G. U. Teacher of Law

Charles A. Keigwin, 78, law professor at Georgetown University for the last 19 years and author of a number of legal treatises used as textbooks throughout the country, died Monday at his home, 1770 Park road northwest.

MR. KEIGWIN

Prof. Keigwin, described by colleagues as one of the most popular and universally loved members of the law faculty, had been in failing health for several months but was up and about until he was stricken about midday Monday.

In 1937, in recognition of his contribution to the literature of the law, Georgetown University conferred a doctor of laws degree upon him. In the 1938 Domesday Book, annual publication of the Georgetown senior class, the law school section was dedicated to Prof. Keigwin as "Georgetown's most quoted, most loved professor."

Born in Hanover, Ind., Prof Keigwin was educated in the schools of that State and received the degree of bachelor of arts and master of arts from Hanover College.

Awarded his law degree from Columbian University, Washington, in 1888, he practiced law in Washington from 1891 to 1921, when he was appointed full-time professor of law by Georgetown University.

From 1903 to 1905 he had served as assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia and in 1909 and 1910 was special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States.

Among the authoritative works on law written by Prof. Keigwin are treatises on equity, torts, common law pleading, equity pleading, code pleading and mortgages.

Prof. Keigwin, a bachelor, is survived by three sisters, Miss Lillian Keigwin, Mrs. S. F. Brengle and Miss Ella Keigwin, and one brother, J. Edwin Keigwin, all of Orlando, Fla. Burial will be in Orlando at 3:30 p. m. today.

Driver Cleared In Woman's Death

James D. Stubbins, 51-year-old chauffeur, of 3029 Klingle road northwest, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday at an inquest into the traffic death of Miss Victoria Kloepfer, 50, of 2800 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Miss Kloepfer died at Emergency Hospital Saturday of injuries suffered when she was knocked down in the 2600 block Connecticut avenue northwest, last Tuesday. The jury decided her death was accidental, "due to negligence on the part of the deceased."

'Little Congress' Gets Boost Toward Civil Service Jobs

By Edward Ryan

Big Congress yesterday boosted little Congress members toward civil service jobs in the Government.

The boost came in a surprise amendment to the Ramspeck bill reported out on the Senate floor yesterday by Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee.

The committee recommended that the "little Congress, clerks and assistant clerks for members of Congress or those employed by standing committees—be made eligible for civil service status and jobs in the executive branch of the Government after four years' service on the Hill.

Transfer to a Government job, under the plan in the Ramspeck bill, would have to be made within two years after a Congressional employe lost his job on the Hill, and admission to the classified civil service would be obtained by passing fitness tests of the Civil Service Commission.

Despite the fitness requirement, the Civil Service Commission is against the plan, it was understood, and fears it would give holders of political jobs a big advantage over other applicants for civil service positions.

The proposal, Senator Bulow told the Senate, would "not place employes of members of Congress under civil service."

"It merely gives to those employes who have rendered long and faithful service to their members and who have acquired valuable experience in government, an opportunity to transfer to a position in the executive service should their positions on the Hill terminate."

Senator Bulow said there is no chance of action on the Ramspeck bill this week, and added that action later will depend on what Congress does about adjournment or recess.

Earle S. Draper, director of TVA regional planning studies since 1937, has been appointed assistant administrator of the Federal Housing Administration.

He will be in charge of research into land planning and city rehabilitation for the Federal Housing agency.

Calendar: Division chiefs of the Bureau of Old Age and Survivors' Insurance in the Social Security Board will play waiter for 600 of their employes at a picnic supper from 3 p. m. to 7 p. m. today at Pierce Mill, Rock Creek Park . . . "America Sings," a concert of native folk music, will be presented by the Agriculture Department chorus, to aid the Red Cross, at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow in the Agriculture Auditorium.

Consul Spiegel In D. C.; Report Of Threat Recalled

Baron Edgar von Spiegel, German consul general in New Orleans, arrived at Washington Airport early today, but would make no comment on reports that he had been summoned for reprimand by Dr. Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires.

New Orleans, La., June 18 (INS).—Baron Edgar von Spiegel, German consul general in New Orleans, left by plane late today for Washington. He said only that the trip was a "business matter" and declined to say if he had been summoned by the German Ambassador in Washington.

A statement was attributed last week to Von Spiegel that Germany would "not forget" that the United States, while Germany was fighting for its existence, had extended all its aid to her enemy. The consul insisted he had been misquoted.

Gov. Sam Jones said last night at New Orleans that on the request of the State Department in Washington he was preparing a file of affidavits and reports on the asserted interview for the information of Washington authorities.

Arlington Rites Listed Tomorrow For V. G. Williams

Virgil G. Williams, 76, Washington real estate man and veteran of the Spanish-American War, who died Monday in Mount Alto Hospital, will be buried tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery following services there at 10:30 a. m.

Mr. Williams, who had lived at 5801 Potomac avenue northwest, had been in ill health for more than six months. He had been in the hospital since December.

A native of Front Royal, Va., he had been in business for many years here with his brother, the late W. Mosby Williams. Mr. Williams, a former deputy United States marshal, had been an officer in the First District National Guard. He was a member of Columbia Lodge, I. O. O. F., the Eighth Infantry Association and Harding Camp, United Spanish War Veterans.

He leaves a son, Dr. V. Blackstone Williams, of the Veterans' Administration.

Pope Urges Axis To Be Lenient, French to Yield

Vitican City, June 18 (INS).—Pope Pius XII, it was learned upon unimpeachable authority, today appealed to Hitler and Mussolini to be inspired by moderation and lack of vindictiveness in their peace terms to France.

At the same time, the pontiff appealed to French Premier Marshal Petain urging the vanquished to accept the situation with fortitude and realism and refrain from "dangerous intransigeance."

Representatives of the Holy See in belligerent capitals have been instructed by Pope Pius to give every aid in working out the details of a future peace along the lines laid down in the pontiff's Christmas speech.

Japan Insists On the Status Quo In Indo-China

Tokyo (Wednesday), June 19 (AP).—The Japanese Foreign Office announced today that it considered maintenance of the status quo in French Indo-China "equally as important" as in the Netherlands East Indies.

Japan stated after the German invasion of Holland May 10 that she would view with grave concern any change in the status of the Dutch East Indies.

The foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, told a press conference today that Japan's interest in Indo-China arises from her position as the "stabilizing" influence in the Far East, and also from concern over the munitions traffic through the French possession.

Japan has complained for some time that the Chinese Chungking government was getting war supplies through Indo-China.

Mrs. Demonet's Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary L. Demonet, 82, widow of Jules A. Demonet, Washington caterer, will be at 10 a. m. tomorrow in St. Matthew's Cathedral.

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Demonet died Monday at her home 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, after a long illness. She came to Washington after her marriage in 1894. She was a member of the Ladies Auxiliary Board of Trinity College and a member of the board of directors of Providence Hospital and St. Gertrude's Guild.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Helen Demonet Titus, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. J. A. Bokel, of Baltimore. There are two grandchildren in Washington. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Not on the Menu: Girl Routs Thief In Restaurant

A colored man stepped into a delicatessen at 106 H street northwest yesterday and ordered 50 cents worth of delicacies. As Anita Peters, 20, of 109 Massachusetts avenue northwest, turned to make up the order, the customer leaped over the counter and made for the cash register.

But Miss Peters got there first. The thief attempted to shove her out of his path, but soon found the girl could punch and kick as well as he. Finally, under a shower of pigs' feet, pretzels, pickles and popcorn, the intruder decided to call it quits. Not Miss Peters, though.

She chased him out into the street and with the aid of pedestrians and police soon cornered him under a parked automobile at First and G streets northwest.

Accused Police Slayer's Trial Set for Friday

Clarence Blocker, 24, Indicted for First Degree Murder of Officer

Clarence Blocker, 24, colored, was indicted yesterday for the first-degree murder of Park Policeman Ivan W. Thompson, and his trial was set for Friday morning, less than a week after the policeman was killed.

Blocker pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in the District Court immediately after the indictment was presented. His attorney is George D. Horning, jr.

Thompson pursued Blocker to arrest him for reckless driving, and forced him to stop near First and I streets northeast. When the man resisted, Thompson drew his pistol and fired one shot in the ground. Blocker is accused of grabbing the gun and emptying the other five bullets into Thompson's body.

The killing was at 4 p. m. Friday, only a few hours after President Roosevelt signed the District's rigid new felony-murder law, which makes any homicide committed in the course of a felony punishable as first-degree murder, whether the felon intended to kill or not.

Besides being indicted for first-degree murder, Blocker was accused, in a second count, of felony-murder, on the charge that he was subject to the new statute because he was committing the felony of unauthorized use of an automobile. The truck he was driving was declared to belong to John B. Rubino, 2021 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

District Attorney Edward M. Curran will prosecute Blocker, assisted by John W. Pihelly, chief of the civil division.

Thompson, who lived at 2040 Evarts street northeast, left a wife and four children.

Unauthorized use of automobile—Charles Aatkew, 24, colored; Elwood T. Lee, 19, colored.

Grand larceny—Joseph L. Bush, 37, colored; Robert W. Phillips, 19; John B. Ferguson, 20.

Housebreaking and larceny—Joseph A. Fletcher, 20, colored (11 indictments); Frederick Powell, 18, colored (five indictments); Harry C. Brown, 19, colored (six indictments).

Escape—John D. Wiley.

Forgery and uttering a forgery—Earl T. Perkins, 32.

The grand jury dismissed the following charges: Lavinia Davis, 37, colored, assault with dangerous weapon; James Thomas Borigan, 28, colored, assaults with dangerous weapon and with intent to kill; Warenr East, 19, colored, carnal knowledge and assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge.

House Group Approves Cut Housing Program

A housing program less than the Administration desired was approved yesterday by the House Banking and Currency Committee.

The bill would grant the United States Housing Authority an additional $5,000,000 to subsidize projects to be built from the remaining $150,000,000 the USHA is authorized to lend local authorities.

E. E. Norwood Funeral Rites Set Today

Famed Practitioner Of Christian Science Passed on Monday

Funeral services for Edward Everett Norwood, 72, widely known Christian Science practitioner, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Gawler's funeral home, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

A resident of Washington for more than 30 years, Mr. Norwood died Monday at his home, 5011 Sixteenth street northwest, after a short illness.

He supervised the proofreading and prepared the plates for the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, which is studied regularly in conjunction with the Bible by atmillions of that faith in many sections of the world.

Converted to Christian Science at the age of 21, Mr. Norwood enrolled in the Massachusetts Metaphysical College and studied in the last class conducted by Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of the faith.

Later he taught Christian Science in Memphis, Tenn., where he was born; Chattanooga, Tenn., and Charleston, S. C., before coming to Washington. He is estimated to have taught more than 1,000 students in his long career, while maintaining an extensive healing practice.

A thirty-second degree Mason, Mr. Norwood leaves his wife, Mrs. Rose B. Norwood, and a daughter, Miss Mary Norwood, both of Washington. Burial will be private.

W. H. Robinson's Funeral to Be Held Today

Funeral services for Walter H. Robinson, 57, accountant and former tax consultant of the Internal Revenue Bureau, will be at 3 p. m. today in Hines funeral home. He died yesterday at Washington Sanitarium after a five-month illness.

A native of Ohio, Mr. Robinson attended Ohio State University and came to Washington in 1905, two years after receiving his degree. Entering the Interior Department as a clerk, he received successive promotions and was paymaster when he left in 1918.

From 1918 to 1922 he was a tax consultant in the Internal Revenue Bureau. For the next 17 years he worked as an accountant in the Washington offices of the New York law firm of Weill, Wolff and Satterlee.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mamie N. Robinson; two sons, Randolph and Walter Scott, and three sisters and his father, in Brown County. Burial will be in Georgetown, Ohio.

George W. Goodman, executive secretary of the Washington Urban League, addressed the graduates. Annie Elizabeth Wilson received the award from the Northeast Women's Civic Association as the outstanding student. Diplomas were presented by Mrs. Velma G. Williams, member of the Board of Education.

Police Seek Home Veteran In Slaying

Verdict at Inquest Names Hooper As Suspect

Police last night sought William T. Hooper, 39-year-old inmate of Soldiers' Home, who was named by a coroner's jury yesterday as the slayer of Ernest W. Hartman, 48, a World War veteran, and drinking companion of the suspect.

The jury deliberated less than 15 minutes. It said: "We believe William T. Hooper is responsible for this death and hold him for the action of the grand jury when apprehended."

Veteran A. W. O. L.

Hooper, according to police, had not been seen since last Friday, the day after Hartman died at Gallinger Hospital of a skull fracture. Records at Soldiers' Home carry him as A. W. O. L.

Robert L. Hansburgh, colored, 32, testified yesterday that he found Hartman unconscious in Robinson's woods about 300 yards north of Harewood road northeast, last Thursday, and called police. Hartman died a few hours later. It was not until the next day that an autopsy disclosed he suffered a skull fracture.

Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman told the jury his investigation revealed the men were drinking together in the woods Tuesday and an argument started over a half-gallon bottle of "smoke." Hooper, the detective stated, struck Hartman over the head with a bottle and left him unconscious. He was not found until the next day.
